PACIFISM PERIL TO U. S. SAFETY, ADMIRAL SAYS

Declares Wilson Had "Case of Nerves."

New York, March 21.—[Special.]—Rear Admiral Bradley A. Fiske, retired, former chief of operations for the navy, tonight in a public address declared lack of preparations one of the most potent causes for war.

REAR ADMIRAL FISKE.

Lack of preparation, he said, was due to a habit of thought which refused to recognize the fact that war sometimes must be faced regardless of the nation's desires. He was addressing the Politics club of Columbia university.

Calls U. S. Effeminate.

"Effeminacy," he said, is a nation's greatest peril. Women, he said, are the leaders in the doctrine of pacifism. "They insist on high standards of living and the defense of them," he added, "but they refuse to pay the price of defending them."

Admiral Fiske then turned to a discussion of the attitude of the late President Wilson, just prior to and at the time of America's entry into the world war. He declared that Mr. Wilson's refusal to accept the possibility that America might be forced into the war prevented preparation and thereby invited violation of our rights at sea which finally drew the United States into the conflict, unready to fight.

Abhorred Idea of War.

Mr. Wilson's whole life, he said, had been such that he abhorred even the idea of conflict and therefore refused to prepare for the inevitable.

He quoted the late President Roosevelt as having said, "The man [Mr. Wilson] is a physical coward." Admiral Fiske did not use that term. He said he considered Mr. Wilson's attitude, "merely a case of nerves."

"The United States," Admiral Fiske said, "has never been able to maintain a state of reasonable preparedness for war. This is because the doctrines of pacifism have undue hold of the people, especially of the women, who insist on high standards of living, but try to dodge paying the price of defending them. The result has been that we have been continually wheedled and bullied into one untenable position after another and finally forced into wars for which we were not prepared.

Bullied in War.

"The latest example of this was supplied in the first two years of the world war, during which the United States was wheedled and bullied into undignified positions by maneuvers that culminated in the sinking of the Lusitania and the torpedoing of our merchant ships, although the United States was a neutral nation.

"Had Theodore Roosevelt been president instead of Woodrow Wilson, it is inconceivable that this could have occurred. Why it did occur is hard to understand, but I am convinced that the insight into Mr. Wilson's nervous system, which I was given by his reaction against what seemed to him the horrors of target practice, supplies the correct solution. Here is the story: I have never told it before in public, but I think I ought to tell it now.

Held Target Practice.

"When the Wilson administration came into power, in March, 1913, I was aid for operations of the navy. A few weeks later the fleet held target practice near the mouth of Chesapeake bay. As some of the cabinet officers and their wives wished to see target practice the secretary of the navy put the Mayflower at their disposal.

"On my return I suggested to the secretary that it would inspirit the sailors and the officers immeasurably if the President would go down to the next target practice and take part in the same discomforts, and subject himself to the same noises and nerve-jarring disturbances that they had to endure. The secretary requested the President to attend the next target practice. This the President agreed to do.

Dreaded to Go.

"A few months later the secretary showed me a letter from the President in which the President spoke of this request and said that he would fulfill it, of course. But he added that he was looking forward to it with the greatest possible dread.

"Of course, I said to the secretary that if the President felt about it in that way it would do more harm than good for him to go.

"The secretary wrote or spoke to the

IN SOME RESPECTS WE STILL LIVE BACK IN THE STAGE COACH DAYS

World Wages Led by Those in the U. S. A.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

Average wages in the United States, measured in the food they will buy, are now more than twice as high as those in London, three times greater than in Paris, and nearly five times greater than in Rome, Madrid and Vienna. They are nearly three times greater than in Norway, Sweden, and Holland.

The computations are those of the British ministry of labor, which in a publication just received presents a study of real wages in sixteen cities, most of them world capitals. In the United States, the wage study was made in Philadelphia. The real wage is defined as the comparative purchasing power of money wages.

The general average as related to food only is as follows, London being used as the base, 100:

City—	Av. real wage.
London	100
Amsterdam, Holland	80
Berlin, Germany	63
Brussels, Belgium	84
Lisbon, Portugal	39
Madrid, Spain	48
Milan, Italy	50
Oslo, Norway	90
Ottawa, Canada	104
Paris, France	74
PHILADELPHIA	221
Prague, Czecho-Slovakia	57
Rome, Italy	48
Stockholm, Sweden	90
Sydney, Australia	144
Vienna, Austria	46

In commenting on this, Slason Thompson, railway statistician, in a bulletin yesterday says: "Our whole industrial structure today rests on the vast difference between the wage rate in America and that shown in the table, to say nothing of the wage scale in China, India and Japan.

Our Wage Scale a Citadel.

"With the wage scale of, say, Italy prevailing in the United States, the pay roll of American railways would be less than one billion, instead of nearly three billion dollars a year. But along with such a cut would go the revenues of every other industry in the United States and our bankrupt courts would be working overtime. The whole scale of our living costs would be scrapped. Our wage scale is the citadel of our Washingtonian isolation, beyond the power of princes, politicians or pacifists to tear down."

KILL DOG; SAVE MASTER FROM DEATH IN MUD

It was necessary for police to shoot and kill a dog yesterday to save its aged intoxicated master from possible strangulation when he fell into a puddle of mud from which he was unable to emerge. Anton Willinsus, 70 years old, 3301 Phillips avenue, while staggering homeward, fell into the puddle. His faithful dog crouched near him, barking and menacing those who attempted to aid the man. The police arrived and killed the dog, after which they pulled Willinsus out.

Operation for Cancer Caused Curzon's Death

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

LONDON, March 21.—The mystery in London regarding the cause of the death of Marquis Curzon, formerly foreign minister and later lord president of the council, was cleared today when it became known it was due to an operation for cancerous growth on the bladder and kidneys. Marquis Curzon's physicians and his family have been very reticent regarding the cause of the death, which intrigued the public curiosity.

2 Dead; 2 Hurt in Gun Fights; Moonshine!

The one-hand gun and moonshine were busy early this morning with the result that two men are dead and two others so seriously injured that they are expected to die. The shootings occurred in three different sections of the city.

The dead:

Donald Phillips, 42, 454 North Harding avenue.

Lucs Barone, 60, 607 South Fairfield avenue.

The wounded:

Joseph Demarco, 2017 Kendall avenue.

Ralph Girard, 3135 Roscoe street.

Phillips was killed on the porch of his home by a gang of hoodlums who sought entrance to a party in honor of his birthday. Several men arrived in a taxicab and said they had been invited by one of the guests. They were refused admission and left.

Later they returned and had been drinking heavily. They attempted to force their way in. Phillips met them at the door and remonstrated. Four shots rang out and he fell dead with a bullet through the head. Sergt. John Walsh said the shooting was done by members of the "Red" O'Keefe gang and he expected to make arrests within a few hours.

Tries Peacemaking; Killed

Barone lost his life attempting to act as peacemaker at another celebration in which moonshine was a feature. According to the police, Barone's son-in-law, Frank Demarco, and Demarco's brother, Joseph, were drinking heavily in the Barone home and became involved in a quarrel. Barone stepped between them to pacify them. Joseph fired one shot which struck Barone in the leg. He died two hours later at the County hospital from loss of blood.

The Demarcos continued the fight and Joseph was stabbed several times. He was taken to the Bridewell hospital.

Wife Shoots Husband.

Girard was shot by his wife, Mary, a bullet entering his lung. According to their stories, he had been out and came home intoxicated, and they quarreled over his condition. He started to leave again and she fired.

When the police arrived they found Girard in bed with his wife weeping over him and attempting to dress his wound. She declared she had fired merely to frighten him. She had dragged him from the stairway of their apartment to the bedroom. Girard was taken to Alexian Brothers hospital where he confirmed his wife's story of the shooting and pleaded with the police not to arrest her. His condition is serious.

GIVE SHEPHERD CASE TO PUBLIC, OLSON URGES

Wants All Evidence Before Inquest.

All of the evidence produced to show that Billy McClintock, the millionaire orphan, was killed by typhoid germs for his $1,000,000 may be thrown to the public in questioning before the coroner's jury, it developed yesterday. This came after a hearing before Judge Jacob H. Hopkins on the question whether William Darling Shepherd, now under indictment for the murder, should be admitted to bail.

Judge Hopkins heard some of the evidence. He did not decide the question of bail, however. Instead, the decision was reserved for Monday, when more evidence will be taken. The taking of evidence was carried on when Shepherd's attorneys demanded the release of their client on the ground that a crime has not been established.

Olson Backs Coroner's Jury.

The prosecution suggested that if further evidence were to be produced in public it should properly go before the grand jury. But Chief Justice Harry Olson of the Municipal court, who has been active in pressing the prosecution of Shepherd, said the place to produce the whole evidence is before the coroner's jury, which has not yet reached a verdict on Shepherd.

Judge Olson said that only the high points have become known and that if there is question as to the sufficiency of the evidence it might as well be published now.

The coroner's jury probably will concur in the indictment by the grand jury, even if the whole state's case is not presented at the inquest.

Judge Hopkins heard the testimony of Charles C. Falman, as elicited upon the questioning of Attorney William Scott Stewart, the legal requirement as proclaimed by State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe to the effect that "Shepherd must be presumed guilty until otherwise proved for the purpose of this hearing" and the admission by Attorney Stewart that Judge Olson and Attorney Alexander F. Reichmann might be able to establish a motive for the murder by reciting the history of Shepherd's relations with McClintock.

Defense Denies Guilt Proof.

Attorneys Stewart and W. W. O'Brien, representing Shepherd, were asking bail and seeking to prove that the state's case was not such as readily to suggest that "the proof of guilt was evident and the presumption of guilt was evident." It was admitted that the burden rested upon them to prove these lacks of proof and presumption.

Stewart submitted his personal affidavit in which he swore that Falman and other witnesses had been influenced to make the charges against Shepherd. He put forth his opinion that the criminal proceeding had been influenced by the contest on the $1,000,000 will, in which Shepherd's right to the fortune is challenged.

The affidavit also alleges that C. Falman confessed to complicity with Shepherd in the murder of McClintock "because he has been in the custody of Judge Olson and the state's attorney since the inception of this investigation." He tried to make Falman out a liar because Falman at first denied that he ever knew or had seen Shepherd.

Declares Falman a Fraud.

After Falman's confession was publicly made in the presence of Judge Hopkins and a courtroom filled with spectators, Stewart was no less insistent that Falman had not told the truth. He charged that Falman was in "the huge conspiracy." However, Falman gave himself no immunity but implicated himself in a murder by the use of typhoid germs in which he said he hoped to obtain $100,000 while Shepherd reaped what was left of the McClintock $1,000,000.

He sought to attack Falman's credibility as a witness but succeeded only in drawing from Falman testimony that incriminated Shepherd more and more. Attorney Stewart's day's work lay in extracting from Falman the original confession he made to State's Attorney Crowe to the effect that he furnished Shepherd with typhoid germs knowing full well that Shepherd was going to innoculate McClintock with them.

Shepherd Seems Thinner.

Shepherd, who appears to have lost twenty or thirty pounds since his arrest, was flanked by his two attorneys Steward and O'Brien, and he listened to the witness call him murderer, the first time since Judge Olson did so at the inquest into McClintock's death three weeks ago. He fidgeted about in

Kidnap Bank Agent; Escape with $10,000

Three robbers, armed with shotguns, held up Stanley Reynolds, collector for the Mutual National bank, 7329 South Halsted street, as he was making his rounds in an automobile last night and robbed him of $10,000 in cash and checks.

Reynolds, accompanied by Policeman James Gavin, stopped his car at 79th street and Carpenter avenue to collect money from a store. The three men, waiting there, stepped up, leveled shotguns at Reynolds and Gavin and forced them to get back into the automobile.

Reynolds was ordered to drive the automobile to 79th street and Western avenue, where he and Gavin were thrown out. The robbers, taking with them the bag containing $5,000 in cash and $5,000 in cheks, sped west in 79th street.

Six Robberies in Row.

Almost at the same time four bandits, operating from a taxicab, the driver of which is believed to have been forced into accompanying them, committed six holdups in rapid succession in the same district, terrifying merchants and sending five extra detective bureau squads into action under the command of Capt. John Stege.

The quartet first entered the grocery of Lawrence Wilkinson, 552 West 61st street, and after locking the owner in the ice box escaped with $40 from the cash drawer. A customer released Wilkinson.

The next stop was the butcher shop of Jacob Broseus, 256 West 59th street. Broseus was likewise placed in the ice box and robbed of $130.

Two Stores at Once.

Apparently not content with one store at a time the robbers took two at once. Two entered the grocery of Louis Stephens, 4102 East 79th street and obtained $45, while at the same time the other two of the band surprised Walter Phillips in his meat market next door and obtained $300 loot.

Edward Miller, grocer at 1633 East 65th street, and Frank Guber, tea store proprietor at 5800 Wentworth avenue, were the other two victims. Guber was relieved of $175 and Miller was robbed of $150 in cash and $800 in checks.

Bandit Seriously Wounded.

Detectives Ray Kaindt and Guy Willouby were passing the Clayton building, 311 River street, last night when they saw two men rush from the building. Two others were running down the fire escape leading from the building, yelling for help. The detectives darted toward the men coming from the building. As the officers were about to question them, they drew revolvers.

They commanded the detectives to "stick 'em up." Instead Willouby and Kaindt drew their own weapons. The bandits opened fire and so did the detectives. When the smoke cleared one of the bandits was lying on the sidewalk seriously wounded. The other escaped. At the Bridewell hospital the wounded man gave his name as William Hamilton, 3127 Emerald avenue.

Early this morning police arrested August Oswald, 5330 South California avenue, on suspicion that he is the man who escaped. He had gone to a north side physician's office, where he was treated for bullet wounds in both legs, and the doctor reported the case to the police.

Rob Jeweler of $3,500.

Jewelry valued at $3,500 was obtained by three highwaymen who robbed a jewelry store at 849 Milwaukee avenue after binding and gagging the proprietor, Harry Cohen.

In their haste to tear stickpins off cards in the showcase, the thieves pricked their fingers and left bloody fingerprints. Police hope to trace the robbers by these prints.

Quick action by Policeman George Klebeck saved the $3,000 pay roll of the B. H. Marshall Construction company from four robbers, who fled.

The men held up Mathew Manka, paymaster on a building job at 200 East Walton street, and were about to depart with the money when Policeman Klebeck, from an adjoining room, began to fire. The quartet fled dropping all but $100 of their loot.

A lone robber who attempted to obtain $1,000 from the Mid-City Trust and Savings bank, Madison and Halsted streets, by passing a note to a teller saying that if he did not surrender the cash he would be killed, was captured. Detectives overpowered him. He gave the name of Frank Fuller, 709 South State street.

Posing as messengers, two men gained entrance into the apartment of Mrs. Harold Fall, 550 Aldine place, and robbed her of a $250 wrist watch and a $1,000 diamond ring.

Says Tornado Spun Around at 600 Mile-an-Hour Clip

Carbondale, Ill., March 21.—The tornado that swept southern Illinois was rotating from 400 to 600 miles an hour, and traveling about twenty-five miles an hour, according to C. J. Root, state meteorologist, who arrived here today to study the storm and phenomena connected with it.

CHICAGO GIVES $300,000 FOR STORM RELIEF

Tornado Area Sends Thanks to City.

A million dollars has been raised in the country in the last three days to aid the stricken in the tornado region and feed and clothe the homeless and hungry. Approximately $300,000 of this has been subscribed in Chicago and the collection of funds is only half done. Last night it was announced as affording comforting. Sunday morning news that every homeless person in the stricken area had been housed in some manner, but this is largely temporary, and the acute need continues.

Readers of The Tribune had sent to this office up to 5 p. m. yesterday a total of $41,112.29. Details of this fund on page 4.

Chicago, by midnight, had raised almost $300,000 for immediate relief work in the tornado zone.

And Egypt, downstate, where every new dollar just now means 100 cents' worth of coördinated relief, paused in the burying of its dead, in the healing of its sick, and in the feeding of its children long enough to send back to Chicago a message of thanks and a report of progress.

Officially the message and the report went to Mayor Dever, who formed the Chicago tornado relief committee. Actually it goes to every individual and every local contributing group whose money made a part of that $300,000.

Funds of Large Groups.

The large group divisions of the fund thus far collected are these:

The mayor's relief committee, of which William R. Dawes is chairman, and David Forgan, president of the Chicago branch of the Red Cross, is an executive member, announced last night that $175,000 of its $500,000 goal had been received.

The Sears-Roebuck radio station, WLS, stopped broadcasting its appeal for $50,000 when it had received pledges of $55,000 over the wires.

The Chicago Tribune fund had more than $41,112.29 at midnight.

The Chicago Board of Trade, through a special committee of seventeen, had collected $16,000.

To Go to Red Cross.

All of these funds, and the rest that is in sight, are destined to go to the Red Cross for general administration. Many of the larger agencies, however, are waiting until their quota is reached to give the money in one lump sum to the Red Cross.

Last night the Red Cross here had received $114,000 from the Association of Commerce, the official body in charge of collecting the money in the city-wide campaign for $500,000. "Give, and Give Now," the slogan of the city's committee, expresses the whole situation, according to all reports from the stricken district.

Small Tells of Victims' Plight.

Gov. Len Small, just arrived from a survey of the devastated regions, held a conference with Mayor Dever, William R. Dawes, chairman of the relief committee, and David Forgan, president of the Chicago chapter of the Red Cross. The governor emphasized the distress downstate, praised the present functioning of relief agencies under the general direction of the Red Cross, and urged the necessity of funds.

Henry Baker, Red Cross national disaster relief director, did much the same thing, in a telegram of thanks to Mayor Dever.

The Larger Contributions.

About the time the telegram arrived the mayor's committee announced that it had received $175,000, of which the following are the new contributions of $1,000 and more:

Chicago Daily Journal readers and radio listeners	$12,000
The Insull companies	10,000
Marshall Field & Co.	5,000
International Harvester Co., [illegible]	5,000
Illinois Athletic club	5,000
Carson, Pirie, Scott & Co.	2,500
Chicago and Northwestern railway	2,500
Montgomery Ward & Co.	2,500
The Fullman Co.	2,500
Cudahy Packing Co. and employés	1,725
Selz, Schwab & Co.	1,337
Mandel Brothers	1,000
Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Ry.	1,000
The Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Co.	1,000
Chicago Brick exchange	1,000
The Fair	1,000
John V. Farwell & Co.	1,000
Building Construct'n Employers' Assn.	1,000
The Wieboldt Foundation	1,000

As the dollars were being amassed in Chicago medical aid of various sorts was being dispatched out of the city to the stricken areas.

The Lederle Antitoxin laboratory rushed down a supply of gas gangrene antitoxin.

Dr. Thomas A. Carter of the Columbus hospital, who returned yesterday from his volunteer service in West Frankfort and Murphysboro, had a conference with Health Commissioner Herman N. Bundesen, just before the commissioner left last night for West Frankfort with equipment and chlorine supplies to purify the water. Dr. Carter explained away any difficulty that Chicagoans might have regarding the seeming incongruity of the varying reports from the stricken district. Baker's report that "no more personnel is needed," and other messages begging for nurses and doctors at once.

Need Relief Squads.

The immediate emergency work, Dr. Carter explained, is well organized and the civilian observer in the temporary hospital thinks everything is adequate. But many of the dressings are temporary. And most of the nurses haven't been relieved. The district doesn't want any more volunteer help, however well meant. It needs relief squads for the relief workers.

"And above all, it needs underwear and night garments. Hundreds of wounded are lying about on cots wearing top coats and suits, for lack of proper clothing."

All of this work takes money, lots of it, as David Forgan pointed out yesterday in urging everybody to contribute to Chicago's $500,000 fund, to be administered under the direction of the Red Cross.

And it looks as if pretty nearly everybody is giving to this city wide fund, to THE TRIBUNE fund, or to some more localized unit of contribution.

Warn Visitors Away.

But the civilian, the "disaster fan," even the earnest lay worker, is not wanted in the tornado zone. Sheriff Henry Dorris of Benton yesterday sent the following telegram to THE TRIBUNE:

"Make it known through your columns and also broadcast that visitors and spectators will not be permitted to visit stricken territories in Franklin county tomorrow."

Similar requests came from a score of other officials.

News of the good work of contributing groups continues to come in.

Chicago Surface Lines Post 146 of the American Legion, organized but two weeks, yesterday sent more than $100 to the Red Cross. The F. B. George & Co. packed $300 worth of merchandise into a box and shipped it downstate. The Sears-Roebuck Radio station at the Hotel Sherman has piled up $55,000.

Elks Raise $5,500.

The Grand Lodge of Elks, through Secretary Fred C. Robinson, announces a collection of $5,500.

Eighteen truck loads of food, blankets, cots, and general supplies yesterday reached the Salvation Army relief depot at West Frankfort, Ill., according to word received in Chicago by Col. Alexander Damon. Girls from the Chicago training school are doing hospital work in Carbondale.

The 138 affiliated chapters of the Illinois chambers of commerce are sending in money to state headquarters, 10 South La Salle street, in response to the statewide call, "Money is needed. But it must come quickly."

The Farmers' Losses.

Loss to the Illinois farmers is estimated at approximately $2,000,000 in a survey made by the Illinois Argicultural association, which yesterday launched a campaign to raise funds for the farmers. Each one of the bureaus in 87 of the 104 counties, will be asked to raise $2,000.

With this money the relief plan is to be along these lines:

Each farm in the tornado's path is to be restocked with a cow, chickens and plow, and a sufficient amount of corn, oats and other grains. Every effort will be made to enable the farmers to plant their spring crops on schedule time.

Capt. W. G. McCarthy and Ralph A. Frederick of the American Legion canvassed the employés of E. L. Mansure company, 1601 Indiana avenue, yesterday afternoon. In less than half an hour they had collected $650.

WORLD VOICES SORROW OVER TORNADO LOSS

Red Cross Reports It Has Situation in Hand.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., March 21.—[Special.]—Messages of sympathy for the tornado-swept middle western states continue to pour into the state department from the governments of many nations. As fast as the communications have been received, Secretary of State Kellogg has made them public. Among the messages received today were communications from Canada, Italy, Denmark and several South American countries.

At the headquarters of the American Red Cross, it was stated that word received from their various directors indicated that as far as is known every sufferer is being cared for. Henry M. Baker, Red Cross national director of disaster relief, reported today that he had completed a personal survey of every devastated area in Illinois.

Red Cross Tabulates Casualties.

"On account of the response of our organization all over the country," Mr. Baker said in his report, "we have an adequate supply of all types of trained relief personnel and of supplies. Revised statistics for Illinois show 125 dead, 500 injured at Murphysboro; 11 dead, 100 injured at Bush; 114 dead, 300 missing, 500 injured at West Frankfort; 100 dead, 224 injured at De Soto, and 35 dead, 75 injured at Gorham."

Dispatches to Red Cross national headquarters state that temporary relief for Griffin, Ind., tornado district is well in hand. The known dead there are 42, with fully 200 injured. Every house in town was destroyed and the population of 400 are either in hospitals at New Harmony, Ind., Evansville, and Olney, Ill., or else scattered in the vicinity of Griffin amongst friends. Ample food supplies have arrived throughout this area, it is stated.

Sympathy from Canada.

The message from Sir Esme Howard said:

"I have the honor to request that you will be so good as to convey to the President on behalf of the government and people of Canada an expression of their sincere sympathy for all those who have suffered as a result of this catastrophe."

Minister Brun of the Royal Danish legation, conveyed the following message:

"I am directed by the Danish minister of foreign affairs, Count Carl Moltke, to express to you the sincere sympathy of the Danish government at the terrible destruction of life and property. I beg to add my own no less sincere feelings of sorrow and sympathy."

A. Rosso, counselor of the Italian embassy, wrote:

"My ambassador has read with deep emotion the news of the appalling calamity which has fallen upon certain sections of this country."

BRIGHTON PARK STORE ROBBED.

John Reiche, 3709 South Hermitage avenue, reported to the Brighton Park police last night that he was robbed of $40 by two armed men who entered his dry goods store.

The plant of the Daily Evening Independent of Murphysboro was wrecked by the tornado, but the editor scraped enough type together to get out "dodgers," like the one shown above, to be distributed to his subscribers. The dodgers gave all the news in which Murphysboro was interested—the storm and a list of the identified dead.

TORNADOES BALK FORECASTERS, U.S. EXPERT ADMITS

Washington, D. C., March 21.—One of nature's most deadly and costly freaks—the tornado—will never be understood or investigated to the point where science can accurately forecast its beginning or its path, according to C. L. Mitchell, forecaster of the United States weather bureau here.

Mitchell said today weather bureau experts were frustrated on all sides in their efforts adequately to acquaint themselves with the "whirls." The only information they can now obtain about tornadoes is by investigating and inspecting stricken areas.

"If we could be up in the sky," said Mitchell, "at the exact spot where a tornado was about to be conceived, there is a bare possibility that we might in time be able to make a fairly close forecast of tornadoes. But there is no other way we could."

Because of inevitable panics and riots the weather bureau does not even attempt to forecast tornadoes. The extent of the bureau's predictions of tornadoes now is limited to "unsettled disturbances."

"If the weather bureau were to try to predict," Mitchell explained, "that a tornado was in process of formation in the middle west and would progress in a straight line over some part of the area covered by Indiana, Illinois, Ohio, and Kentucky, it would have a disastrous effect on all the people in those states.

"It is possible that many citizens would die of heart failure or worry while the tornado might not even strike in the country where they resided.

"Moreover, if we were permitted to forecast tornadoes, the forecast would be useless because nothing can be done to counteract the 'whirls.'"

RELIEF CARRIES CHEER TO AREA TORNADO SWEPT

Hundreds Needed to Dig Hundreds of Graves.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Saddened but undaunted by the horror of Wednesday's tornado, survivors of the catastrophe in Illinois and Indiana last night announced plans for the reestablishment of the devastated areas.

Only half of the 800 dead have been consigned to hasty graves and hundreds of the nearly 3,000 injured are still in the care of doctors and nurses.

Three days of heroic endeavor by thousands of workers, spurred to their task by the desperateness of the conditions brought about by the tornado in its 300 mile sweep from the Missouri Ozarks through the Ohio valley, had wrought wonders when darkness settled over the scene last night.

Some Help for Every One.

Every homeless person had been housed in some manner. Food had been supplied for the helpless, medicines and other comforts had been made available for the wounded and solace had been afforded the bereaved.

Probably all the slain had been recovered from the debris of the hundreds of homes destroyed, and the death total last night was 808, with almost all of them identified.

The storm was one of the greatest disasters in the history of America, and the relief work sets a record, owing to the use of airplanes and radio in carrying supplies and sending out calls for help. Something like $1,000,000 was raised in three days to aid the stricken, and subscriptions for relief are pouring in hourly to increase the total.

Sixteen Illinois Towns Hit.

Sixteen Illinois towns were hit by the tornado and in those municipalities and their rural surroundings 642 lives were taken, while 2,110 were hurt, many severely.

Murphysboro was the worst sufferer with half its area devastated, 189 persons killed and 700 injured. West Frankfort came next with 123 slain and 500 maimed. De Soto with 71 dead, Gorham with 64 killed, and Parrish with a loss of 43 lives, were almost annihilated.

Griffin was the heaviest loser in Indiana and in fact in the whole storm, for only a building or two were left standing and of its meager population 34 were crushed to death and 200 were injured.

Pitiful were the stories of all burials. Neighbors would read the penciled name on the wooden box, affix the name to a cross or temporary headstone, and carry it to the grave. Women, men and children helped, turning from one group of bodies, or a funeral procession to another, lending aid.

Chicago Sends Funeral Wreaths.

Boxes of flowers sent from Chicago to De Soto were sorted in to seventy-one small sprays by women, who explained that "we have no flowers and we do not want to miss any one."

These smitten districts do not desire the sightseer, curio or memento hunter, which are anticipated over the Sunday. Military forces are thrown about the Indiana sector to keep them out. They will only hinder relief. At Benton and other southern Illinois towns the same word went out. Authorities there added that should any succeed in entering they would be put to grave digging and reclamation, although it was not in the form of an invitation.

As the complete list of dead begin to come in an increasing number of women, children and infants are shown among the dead. In West Frankfort alone nearly forty of its dead were babies.

Needs Are Quickly Met.

General satisfaction with the progress of rehabilitation was reported. Needs here and there, as quickly as they become known, were immediately filled. Debris is rapidly being removed. Some heretofore inaccessible districts are open. The generous flow of money and supplies apparently is to be without parallel in such calamities.

The early notes of optimism and encouragement for rebuilding the future were sounded by one of Murphysboro's heaviest losers. In a stirring address he elicited cheers from listeners who were still in grief and misery. Murphysboro wants its Mobile and Ohio shops rebuilt, an agency employing 1,400 men. It proposes to put it across. The Brown Shoe company, employing 800 persons, also was destroyed there, but the townspeople expect to see a new plant.

At Princeton, Ind., good news was in the announcement that the Southern railway shops would be reconstructed as well as the Heinz factory.

150 GRAVE DIGGERS BUSY

Murphysboro, Ill., March 21.—[By the Associated Press.] — Twin cemeteries high on a hill overlooking desolate Murphysboro were scenes of simultaneous funerals all day long and an army of 150 grave diggers was breaking fresh ground for the burial of victims of Wednesday's tornado.

Tower Grove cemetery and St. Andrew's cemetery had received more than fifty bodies up to 3 o'clock this afternoon.

S. J. Howell, a contractor, who had driven an ambulance for twenty-six consecutive hours, took advantage of a lull in the activity to gain a few minutes of sleep. He lay down on a cast in one of the morgues. He was awakened by a touch of a hand on his arm and the sound of a woman's tearful voice saying:

"Is this one of the bodies also?"

He leaped to the floor in fright and scared onlookers that he still was very much alive.

REQUEST FOR MORE TENTS

Carbondale, Ill., March 21.—[By the Associated Press.]—Senator W. J. Cutler and Representatives Cutler and Clark of the legislative relief committee came here today and after a conference with Col. T. O. Tripp, in charge of the military relief work, joined with him in a request to Adjt. Gen. Carlos A. Black for 500 additional tents to be sent to Murphysboro.

Henry M. Baker, national Red Cross director of disaster relief, who is in charge of relief work throughout the stricken area, visited each district last night and today and completed the organization of local relief units to handle the rehabilitation work.

With the work of caring for the injured and homeless well under way, he announced that awards for rebuilding and permanent rehabilitation of each sufferer will start in a few days.

DEAD TOWN BURIES DEAD

De Soto, Ill., March 21.—[By the Associated Press.] — De Soto, the tiny town of southern Illinois practically obliterated by last Wednesday's tornado, today buried her dead.

Sixty-five grave diggers opened the long rows of graves, De Soto women comforted bereaved neighbors, and De Soto children placed sprays of flowers on the new mounds.

Tomorrow night upward of fifty freshly made mounds, representing one-tenth of the town's population, will bear mute testimony in the little cemetery to the town's disaster.

Today's interments were the more pitiful due to the fact that scarce a family in the town did not list at least one member among the seventy-one known dead.

SUNDAY MOVIES WOULD DEGRADE EVANSTON, CLAIM

Sunday movies would make Evanston a wide-open town of the worst type, Mayor Harry P. Pearsons, candidate to succeed himself at the April 7 election, declared last night. Mayor Pearsons is the first of the three candidates for the mayoralty to announce his stand on the moving picture question which will also be decided in the election. "Sunday movies would destroy the traditions and fine ideals of our city," he said, "and will attract all sorts of undesirables."

Supt. McAndrew Speaks at Teachers' Banquet

Superintendent of Schools William McAndrew, Assistant Superintendent William J. Bogan and Hart Hanson, member of the board of education, were the principal speakers at the annual dinner of the Assistants to Principals club at the Morrison hotel last night. The dinner was given in honor of the superintendent and his staff, the members of the board, and the principals.

Arrest Husband for Boasting Wife's Shooting

Joseph Michelon, whose wife was seriously wounded by a boarder Friday in the Michelon home at 11219 Stephenson avenue, was picked up intoxicated by the Kensington police last night. "I'm celebrating my wife's shooting," he said.

GAS VICTIM FOUND DEAD ON FLOOR.

George Gilion, 68, was found dead yesterday on the floor in his room at 1644 Park avenue. Gas was discovered escaping from a lighting jet when his body was found.

THE WORK OF MERCY IN THE STRICKEN STORM AREAS

This couple's home was smashed by the great storm of last Wednesday at Murphysboro, Ill. The husband was at work and escaped injury, but his wife was hit by falling timbers when her home collapsed. They are leaving the Elks hall, which has been turned into a hospital for the injured.

PERSHING, DRAIN, AND DAWES "SUSPENDED" BY LEGION RULES

Washington, D. C., March 21.—[Special.]—Gen. Pershing, Vice President Dawes, Maj. Gen. Lejeune, commandant of the marine corps; Col. Theodore Roosevelt, and National Commander Drain of the American Legion are among a group of distinguished residents of Washington who were recently "suspended" from membership in the American Legion, it was learned today.

GEN. J. J. PERSHING.

Failure to send in $22.50 and to observe an arbitrary clause in the Legion's constitution are understood to have been responsible. Automatic suspension from membership is said to be the penalty for any post's failure to make such returns to the department commander on March 15.

STILLMAN AGAIN WARS UPON WIFE AND "BABY GUY"

Legitimacy of Child Renews Battle.

New York, March 21.—[Special.]—James A. Stillman, former president of the National City bank, has decided to press his fight against his wife, Mrs. Anna U. Stillman, it became known today.

MRS. ANNE U. STILLMAN.

Argument on his appeal from the decision of the appellate division in Brooklyn, which sustained the legitimacy of Baby Guy Stillman, has been set for April 6 before the Court of Appeals in Albany.

Former Gov. Nathan Miller, one of Stillman's counsel, has filed a brief outlining the grounds on which the appeal is based. Before leaving for her Canadian estate today Mrs. Stillman consulted with her attorney on measures to be taken to meet her husband's attack.

No Reconciliation Now.

Stillman's action in permitting his appeal to reach Albany effectually ends reports of a possible reconciliation or a truce between husband and wife. These reports became current at the time of the marriage of his daughter, Anne, to Henry P. Davison.

Friends of Mrs. Stillman today asserted that she had met the move of her husband with her usual spirit, and was confident of the outcome.

Should Stillman win a decision from the appellate division, it will mean probably that the entire case will be thrown back for a retrial. If such a trial is ordered, it may afford the unprecedented spectacle of three women who knew James Stillman lining up on the side of the wife.

His Past to Confront Him.

Foremost of these is Mrs. Florence Leeds, who denounced Stillman for deserting her and their son, Jay Ward Leeds, admittedly the son of Stillman. Mrs. Leeds has frequently communicated with Mrs. Stillman, and a short while ago Mrs. Stillman offered to take Jay Ward Leeds and see to his education.

Mrs. Joseph Truit Talbert, beautiful widow of the former vice president of the National City bank, the platonic friend of Stillman, also communicated with Mrs. Stillman, offering support and sympathy.

Only recently, Edith Lewis communicated with Mrs. Stillman, offering to give assistance, laying bare in detail a story of her purported connection with Stillman.

S. M. HASTINGS, MANUFACTURER, WEDS IN WEST

Samuel Miles Hastings, 60 years old, well-known manufacturer and for nine years mayor of Highland Park, was married in Los Angeles yesterday to Miss Nettie Ann Moore of Chicago. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. John A. Eby of the Wilshire Presbyterian church.

At the Hastings home it was learned that Miss Moore was a life long friend of the manufacturer. She lived here with her sister, Miss Ada Moore. Mr. Hastings' first wife died two years ago.

Mr. Hastings is president of the Dayton Scale company, formerly president of the Illinois Manufacturers' association, and was a candidate for governor in 1920.

HERMAN SCHIFF IS PLACED IN A LOCAL HOSPITAL

Herman Schiff, wealthy young west side banker, who disappeared five weeks ago, following a nervous collapse, was taken to the psychopathic hospital yesterday by private detectives who found him Friday in Indianapolis.

It was learned that Schiff has been touring the country since his disappearance, accompanied by his chauffeur, Erwin Euhner, and a bodyguard detective, Dudley Dunn. During most of the period of his absence the banker was stopping at a sanitarium near his country home in Louisville, Ky.

After examining Schiff, who was formerly vice president of the Independence State bank and organizer of the Merchants and Manufacturers' Security company, Dr. F. J. Gerty, superintendent of the psychopathic hospital, said that the banker was not insane but was laboring under mental excitement that made his temporary detention advisable.

Greek Papers Suspend as Printers Walk Out

ATHENS, March 21.—[By the Associated Press]—No daily newspapers appeared in Greece today owing to the walkout of printers, who quit work in sympathy with railway strikers.

BLAINE OPPOSES LAND GRANT FOR GAME PRESERVE

Madison, Wis., March 21.—[Special.]—Gov. Blaine will not sign the bill which would turn the bottom lands of the Mississippi river over to the federal government to operate as a federal games preserve he indicated today.

"The bill surrenders the sovereignty of the state over all lands acquired by the federal government in the Mississippi valley, from our southern boundary to a point opposite Wabasha, Minn., a distance of about 200 miles, declares Gov. Blaine. "As a matter of principle Wisconsin should not surrender that sovereignty."

Tornado Jerks Railway Station Out of His Hands

Princeton, Ind., March 21.—John Nelms of Griffin adds a touch of humor to the after storm stories of the tornado which swept across southern Indiana Wednesday. Nelms saw the storm coming and ran for the Illinois Central station at Griffin.

"As I took hold of the door knob that storm just naturally jerked that station right out of my hands," he said. Nelms was slightly hurt.

MISSOURI BILL PROVIDES DEATH FOR HOLDUP MEN

Passage Seems Assured in Legislature.

Jefferson City, Mo., March 21.—[Special.]—A bill fixing a maximum penalty of death on first degree robbery cases was engrossed in the house of representatives yesterday. The measure will probably be made a special order of business for final passage in the house early next week, after which it will go to the senate for final approval.

The bill, introduced by Representative Carl J. Henry of Bates county, changes the present statute, which provides a penalty of not more than five years in first degree robbery cases, to read from twenty years to death on conviction in such cases.

The laws of Missouri describe first degree robbery as cases in which any one "feloniously takes the property of another from his person, against his will, or in violence to his person, or by putting him in fear of immediate injury."

The bill passed for engrossment, in which time the last opportunity for amendment is offered, without a dissenting vote. It is thought that little opposition will be given the measure on final passage or in the senate.

COPS DENY THEY SEEK IMMUNITY IN LIQUOR CASE

Cincinnati, O., March 21.—Denial is entered by attorneys who have been retained by a majority of the forty-eight Cincinnati policemen arraigned in United States District court yesterday on the charge of conspiracy to violate the Volstead and Harrison narcotic acts, that any of the policemen have indicated a desire to make overtures to the federal authorities and to be given an "immunity bath."

Law enforcement officers have predicted additional arrests. The forty-eight indicted policemen are at liberty under bonds of $10,000 each. Several village dry agents, however, are in jail, unable to furnish bond.

Trials are expected to begin about April 15.

CONTRIBUTIONS POUR IN TO TRIBUNE-LEGION FUND—TOTAL NOW IS $41,112.29

FLOOD OF GOLD IS ANSWER TO RELIEF APPEAL

Hundreds of Pledges Are Still to Be Paid.

While refugees of the tornado devastated area in southern Illinois and Indiana wander hopelessly about the ruin of their homes, folk in the Chicago district yesterday continued to give for their relief. THE TRIBUNE-Legion fund last night had reached a total of $41,112.29.

From towns and business institutions, social and fraternal organizations and from individuals the donations poured into the office.

Community Gives $250.

A letter from the Wilmette Community Chest association is typical of hundreds. It read:

"We are enclosing a check for $250, which is the first contribution made by this organization for any charitable purpose. Our first drive for funds will be started March 23 and end on March 28.

"We feel the necessity, however, of the urgency in this matter, and are forwarding this money now before our drive for funds commences."

A check for $500 was brought to THE TRIBUNE public service bureau from the citizens of Western Springs, representing the result of a canvass of the town by a committee assisted by school children and clergy. The committee is still at work.

Pass Hat at Boxing Match.

At the regular Friday night amateur boxing exhibition at the Ferretti Health institute, 2301 South Milliard avenue, a collection totaling $163.54, started with a $10 bill from Mr. Ferretti, was taken up, and the money turned over to THE TRIBUNE-Legion fund.

The Independent Order of Free Sons of Israel voted $500 to THE TRIBUNE-Legion fund.

A boxing exhibition attracted a crowd to the Albany Park Athletic club at Kedzie and Lawrence avenue Friday evening, and when the hat was passed $292.02 was collected to swell the fund.

TORNADO ISN'T A CYCLONE; HERE'S WHAT IT MEANS

Washington, D. C., March 21.—(Special.)—Just what is the difference between a tornado and a cyclone? A tornado, at its largest, will be less than 1,000 feet wide at the base. Winds have reached a velocity of 124 miles per hour and a greater amount of wind movement is recorded in Minnesota than in any other month, says a statement today from the American Meteorological association. This is particularly true east of the Mississippi river.

"A tornado is a [illegible]nd; an upright, revolving, roaring, devastating cloud," the statement says. "But it is not a typhoon, a monsoon or a hurricane. Above all it is not a 'cyclone.' Typhoons and monsoons are storms covering large areas, hundreds of miles in diameter, and they give rise to straight winds only. The winds of a tornado have a violent rotary motion. The word 'cyclone' refers, correctly, to the great storm areas which pass week by week across the United States.

"Whenever the barometer falls a cyclone is approaching. A tornado may accompany it, provided the cyclone is of a tornado character, provided the locality is tornado territory, above all, provided it is tornado season."

HOMES ASKED FOR ORPHANS OF TORNADO AREA

Have you room in your home for one or more orphans of the storm area?

C. B. Williams, superintendent of the Illinois Children's Home and Aid society, who returned yesterday from the devastated region in southern Illinois and Indiana, inaugurated a drive to secure homes for children orphaned by the storm.

"Many homes in that part of the country have been opened to the children temporarily," Mr. Williams said, "but it is permanent care that is necessary. Their greatest need will come after the first impulse of sympathy has cooled.

The headquarters of the society is at 308 North Michigan avenue.

The Shoemaker's Globe
The nearest the Greeks came to spectacle lenses was the "Shoemaker's Globe."
This was a glass sphere filled with water which could collect the sun's rays and set fire to things.
Roman physicians later took up the Shoemaker's Globe and used it to cauterize.
They also discovered that it magnified small objects, from which it has been conjectured that the Shoemaker's Globe was used as a magnifying glass in the minute carving of gems, work which could not have been done with the naked eye.
All this time it is reasonably certain that the Chinese, half a world away, kept right on making and wearing spectacles—by the grace of Cho Tso, god of spectacles.
But, whereas they are still making them about the same way, modern optical science, as expressed in the Almer Coe Stores, brings out some new idea nearly every day; slight enough in itself, perhaps, but contributing with others to make Almer Coe eyeglass service more nearly perfect.

TRACTION PLAN TO LOWER FARE, KELKER ASSERTS

Computes Savings Under Dever Project.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

The wild statements about 15 and 20 cent fares under the pending rapid transit ordinance, on which the people will vote April 7, were nailed to the bare floor yesterday.

Ald. John J. ("Bathhouse") Coughlin first sprung the charge that the fares under the ordinance will be 20 cents. One opponent after another has repeated the charge until the imported Delos F. Wilcox said Friday night, according to printed report, that "the sky is the limit in fares."

Maj. R. F. Kelker Jr., engineering consultant of the local transportation committee, said yesterday the fare will be 6 cents after the first year of operating the combined surface and elevated lines.

Makes Careful Calculations.

He made this prediction after elaborate, careful and conservative reckoning. He not only has made an estimate for the second year of operation, but for each of the first twenty years, although his figures for only one year were made public yesterday.

"The new ordinance provides for a fare of 7 cents," Mayor Dever said yesterday. "That is the same fare which is now paid on the surface lines and is lower than now paid on the elevated lines, where the charge is 10 cents cash or three tickets for 25 cents.

"For that 7 cents we will give a free transfer between the elevated and surface lines. That 7 cents is a substantial fare reduction. It was made after the most careful investigation by the best engineering service available. It was agreed to by the bankers who may be expected to be certain that sufficient money is obtained to meet all obligations. This high fare talk is silly and intended only to mislead the public."

Predicts Fare Decrease.

After the ordinance has been in operation one year a reduction in fares of 1 cent cannot be escaped, according to Maj. Kelker. His chief conclusions on that subject are:

1. The first year of operation, with a 7 cent fare and universal transfers in effect, will yield a surplus of more than $3,000,000.

2. At the end of the first year the fare will drop automatically to 6 cents, through operation of the "barometer fare" section of the ordinance.

Maj. Kelker bases his conclusions on the latest reports of the Chicago Surface Lines and the Chicago Rapid Transit company.

"Every helpful factor was minimized deliberately; every unfavorable factor was given full weight," he declared.

"Full allowance was made, for instance, for the recent increase in trainmen's wages, for loss of revenue through the issuance of free transfers from surface to elevated lines and vice versa, for the loss of 12,000,000 fares a year from persons who now use both surface and elevated lines, paying double for, for the reduction of fares on the elevated and for creation of a renewal fund for the elevated lines.

Savings Figured Conservatively.

"On the other hand, savings that will result from unification of the surface and elevated systems were estimated conservatively. Savings in interest and other like charges were put at the moderate figure of $2,900,000."

The fares under the ordinance are to be raised or lowered as the surplus of earnings is increased or decreased, so the public will obtain service at cost. The ordinance establishes "a barometer fund" of $5,000,000. When the surplus earnings run that amount up to $7,000,000 the fare must be reduced 1 cent. If it drops to $3,000,000 the fare must be raised 1 cent.

Estimates Total Earnings.

Maj. Kelker predicts that the total revenue of the combined sytem will be $76,000,000, assuming that the new operation will start in 1926. He places the operating expense at $57,000,000 and the fixed charges at $16,000,000 more, making a total expense of $73,000,000.

That figures out a surplus of $3,000,000, which would increase the barometer fund up to $8,000,000; and fares would be automatically decreased to 6 cents. Before that reduction has been obtained it is estimated that about $25,000,000 would have been spent in the construction of elevated extensions, subways and added surface lines.

On top of those tidings came the indorsement yesterday of the Chicago section of the Society of American Military Engineers.

Those Backing Approval.

These are men who served their country during the world war. The list of officers and directors give an idea of the personnel of the organization, as follows:

President, Maj. John De N. Macomb; vice presidents, Maj. D. D. Guilfoil and Capt. Chester M. MacChesney; secretary, Capt. Clinton S. Darling; treasurer, Lieut. Col. R. I. Randolph; directors, Brig. Gen. S. M. Felton, Col. C. Van Deventer, Lieut. Col. W. G. Arn, Lieut. Col. H. L. Kellogg, Maj. Murray Blanchard, Maj. Rufus W. Putnam.

After an analysis of present defects, as to finance and transit facilities, the engineers give the provisions of the new plan as follows:

1. Acquisition of existing surface and elevated lines and construction of much needed extensions of both.
2. Construction of essential subways.
3. Purchase and operation of bus lines if approved at a subsequent referendum.
4. Financing of the purchases and construction by income certificates payable solely from earnings of the properties, at a lower rate of interest than is otherwise possible; taxation cannot be resorted to to meet any financially needs of the unified system.
5. Nonpolitical railway board to manage the properties.
6. Service at cost and universal transfers.

BEFORE AND AFTER THE PALM BEACH FIRE

This is famous Palm Beach hotel, The Breakers, as it appeared before devastating flames swept down upon it late Wednesday.

And this is how The Breakers appeared after fire had burned the huge structure to the foundations.

TRIO OF FORMER MAYORS ATTACK DEVER TRACTION

Three former mayors of Chicago, William Hale Thompson, Carter H. Harrison and Edward F. Dunne, have signed and sent a petition to Gov. Len Small asking him to instruct Attorney General Carlstrom and the Illinois commerce commission to express five opinions regarding the railway ordinance on which the people will vote April 7.

All three of these ex-mayors are said to desire the defeat of the transit plan. Mr. Harrison said yesterday he is opposed to it and will soon issue a statement giving his reasons. Mr. Dunne has publicly criticised the ordinance several times and aldermanic candidates of Mr. Thompson have opposed the ordinance. It is therefore reasonable to assume that the ultimate objective of the petition is to promote the defeat of the ordinance, if possible.

Petition as Yet Unread.

Mr. Dunne said the petition was filed with the governor either Thursday or Friday, which probably means that it was sent to his office in Springfield. It is understood, however, that the governor—because he was inspecting the tornado district—has not seen the petition. The governor said yesterday afternoon at the Congress hotel he would not take up the petition until tomorrow.

Neither Mr. Harrison nor Mr. Dunne had a copy of the petition and Mr. Thompson—reported to be in Palm Beach, Fla.—could not be found, but both Mr. Harrison and Mr. Dunne answered all questions asked regarding the contents of the petition.

From the information collected it appears that the basis of the queries of the ex-mayors involves legal interpretations. These they desire before the referendum. The principal point of the petition is legal. That is where they expect to score their greatest amount of damaging material for campaign purposes against the ordinance.

Court to Rule on Plan.

After election the Illinois Supreme court will pass on the ordinance before any attempt is made to carry it into effect. That has been the announced program of Mayor Dever for months. The bankers more than a year ago told the public that such a decision of the state Supreme court is a prerequisite to the sale of the Schwartz certificates. Regardless of any action before election such will be of little real importance compared with what the state Supreme court will say after election. The state Supreme court will settle the legal aspects of the ordinance.

"Generally speaking, the point of the questions asked in the petition is regarding the control of the Illinois commerce commission over the subject matter," Mr. Harrison said.

"We want to know what control they will claim over the matter," added Mr. Dunne.

Predict Home Rule.

Regardless of what control the commerce commission may claim, the state Supreme court probably will decide what control, if any, the state commission will exercise. Five city lawyers have given their opinion that the commission will be a minus factor under the ordinance. Their opinion probably is just as good as that of the three ex-mayors or the commerce commission and attorney general. The Supreme court has the final say and the plan cannot become effective until it has spoken.

More specifically, it is understood that the commerce commission will be asked, if the ex-mayors have their way, whether the commission has jurisdiction over the sale of the elevated and surface lines to the city. To what extent could the commission use its discretion in preventing a sale it disapproved?

At Least Two Hostile.

Edward H. Wright, member of the commission, who is the Republican committeeman in the Second ward and exercises a protectorate over the Third ward, has been reported for several days as opposed to the ordinance. Patrick H. Moynihan, another member of the commission, made a campaign issue against the ordinance in the reelection of Ald. Cross of the Tenth ward. Political lieutenants of Fred Lundin have been openly opposing the ordinance. Therefore, the attitude of the state administration on the subject can be guessed with reasonable accuracy. Perhaps that inspired the three ex-mayors to file their petition.

It is desired that the attorney general tell the ex-mayors regarding the enforcibility of the ordinance. He may write a very learned opinion on the subject before the referendum, but the view of the State Supreme court after election will be the law. It is understood that the expression desired from Mr. Carlstrom involves directly or indirectly the validity of the Schwartz certificates under the restrictions and conditions of the ordinance, as well as its service provisions.

While Dunne Was Governor.

It so happens that the railway certificates, to which the name of Ald. Schwartz has been attached, were provided for in a law passed by the state legislature in 1913, while Mr. Dunne was governor. He was reported at the time to be the father of the law. At any rate he signed it over the protests of many Chicagoans, because that law took away from Chicago home rule over utilities.

But it is certain that the Supreme court will pass on the validity of the certificates before they are issued.

It is rumored that certain backers of the petition desire also that the commerce commission shall hold public hearings on the ordinance.

IT takes more than a minute to appreciate the Brunswick Radiola. There is the entertainment it affords—the excellence of the Brunswick Phonograph with its reproduction of the hosts of Brunswick artists. In the enthusiasm of interest in radio one is apt to overlook the importance of this feature. But it is one just as serious to consider now as when radio was only an engineering novelty. Music for every mood, the music you like when you want to hear it—that is just what the Brunswick brings you.

Then there is the unending interest of radio reception. Not every radio set will do. In steel-girt cities and with a multitude of broadcasting stations a super-sensitive, highly selective set is imperative. The apparatus in the Brunswick Radiola is made by The Radio Corporation of America—the Radiola III and III-A, the Regenoflex and the famous Superheterodyne. Every item that is essential for radio reception in the home has been studied and perfected in the Brunswick Radiola. Compactness, beauty of tone and case, accessibility of parts, simplicity of operation, low first cost, economy in maintenance, durability and permanence of design and radio principles—all these are splendidly demonstrated by the Brunswick Radiola.

Urge Quick Solution of Security Problem.

BULLETIN.

Paris, March 21.—(By the Associated Press.)—The Havas News agency learns from an authoritative source that the German government is prepared to accept the demand that it enter the league of nations without reservations.

"If this is confirmed," adds the agency, "it will hasten the negotiations already opened with a view to solving the problem of security."

LONDON, March 21.—The Anglo-French relations once again have reached a period of crisis, demanding a quick solution if a disaster is to be avoided.

This is alleged to be the text of a paper circulated among the members of the cabinet and others as the result of Austen Chamberlain's visit to Geneva and his two talks with Premier Herriot. It is pointed out that M. Herriot succeeded M. Poincare when the French popular opinion had revolted against M. Poincare's stubborn attitude toward the British view on the Ruhr occupation and German reparations, and it is recalled that M. Herriot's election manifesto contained a pledge to foster Anglo-French coöperation, as opposed to M. Poincare's intransigient policy.

British observers agree that M. Herriot has carried out this promise to a degree entirely unexpected, pointing specially to his acceptance of the Dawes' scheme, but they declare the position of France has been compromised by the failure of the British to do anything to meet his conciliatory attitude.

Due to Britain's Vacillation.

The chief trouble, from M. Herriot's point of view, is the absence of any definite, clear cut British policy on the questions closest to the hearts of all Frenchmen. It is not so much a question of having the British policy favorable to France as having a definite policy which the French could regard as stable, and it is feared that if M. Herriot is not soon able to point out such a policy he will be delivered, bound hand and foot, to M. Poincare and the nationalists, who are still very strong and are only waiting for a chance to return.

The trouble, it is alleged, was intensified when Mr. Chamberlain was forced to go to Geneva without a policy. France expected the protocol to be killed, but had built hopes on the pact of guarantee outlined in the cabinet memorandum exclusively published by THE TRIBUNE three weeks ago. This policy, however, was turned down by the cabinet and Mr. Chamberlain was sent to Geneva empty handed.

Turn Back to Versailles Pact.

When the ministers met in Paris, although there was the utmost cordiality, nothing was accomplished because Mr. Chamberlain was not in a position to make any promises, not knowing how far his cabinet colleagues would back him.

The newest suggestion comes from France, to find a security pact in clause forty-four of the Versailles treaty, which declares an infringement on the demilitarized Rhine zone by Germany is a hostile act. It is contended that this, if properly interpreted and enforced, gives all the security sought, and the French are now pressing for a declaration by Great Britain that it will agree to the French interpretation of the clause.

M. de Fleurian, French ambassador to London, who left yesterday for Paris, is said to have been talking with both Mr. Chamberlain and Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin along these lines.

DISCUSS NEW PLANS

BY HENRY WALES.

PARIS, March 21.—Great Britain's newest offers of a guarantee pact, safeguarding the Rhine, were submitted to Premier Herriot this afternoon by M. Fleuriau, the French ambassador to London, who came especially to Paris with the proposals.

THE TRIBUNE is informed that Austen Chamberlain, the British foreign minister, is prepared to negotiate two distinct agreements—the first an accord assuring France and Belgium of security along lines based on the present frontier, and the second a general pact guaranteeing all Germany's neighbors against wanton aggression.

Propose Four Power Pact.

The first pact is a four power agreement with Great Britain, France, Belgium, and Germany the signatories. It provides assistance by England in case the Rhine is crossed by the Teutons in a war of aggression. The second pact would carry no defined sanctions or specific pledges for Great Britain to supply military or naval aid in case of a conflict and merely forms a sort of moral guarantee to France and her smaller allies, which the French themselves have always stated would suffice to dissuade Germany from resuming hostilities.

The French reaction to Mr. Chamberlain's dual proposals is this—why not lump them into a single pact guaranteeing all the frontiers traced by the Versailles treaty. M. Fleuriau will return to London on Monday carrying M. Herriot's counter proposals.

A Man—and $25,000

A client, highly successful in automobile accessory manufacturing, wishes a man to invest in the business and take active part in its management.

The company has been in business twelve years. For eight years it has been incorporated and operating its own modern plant; its earnings have been consistently good; its reputation in the automotive industry high.

The products are highly profitable with a demand every year increasing. The man should have $25,000 or more to invest. This money will be used solely in expansion of the business and the introduction of new products, the demand for which already has been shown.

The company is incorporated for $500,000.

We will gladly put you directly in touch with the principal.

LIFE IS LENGTHENED BY MODERN SURGERY, DR. MAYO DECLARES

Miami, Fla., March 21.—The average life of man, which was forty years in 1850, has been lengthened to 58 by the development of surgery and preventative medicine, and soon will fulfill the biblical promise of "three score and ten," Dr. Charles H. Mayo of Rochester, Minn., said today.

DR. CHARLES MAYO

"The lengthening of the human span of life has had a decided effect on the growing prevalence of cancer," Dr. Mayo said, "this being a disease which generally chooses its victims among persons past middle age. However, research work offers the hope of future success in combating this disease."

Goitre is another disease which is on the increase, according to Dr. Mayo. This is due, he said, to the fact that agriculture and erosion are gradually exhausting the supply of iodine in the soil.

Dr. Mayo said he believes the increasing tendency of wealthy men to endow institutions for medical research is the most encouraging development of modern civilization and culture.

EMPLOYES LOSE MORRIS & CO. PENSION FIGHT

Pensioners of Morris & Co. yesterday lost their plea for the establishment of a $7,000,000 fund permanently to maintain their pension system, which was discontinued in 1923, when the company was absorbed by Armour & Co.

Judge Ira D. Ryner held that Morris & Co. had discharged its full duty by the pensioners, according to the pension agreement, and that there is no law to compel the payment of further sums.

Several Hundred Affected.

While some twenty or more pensioners actually were plaintiffs in the suit, Judge Ryner's decision affected four hundred former Morris employés and their families. It was regarded also as a precedent which may bear upon the legality of pension funds maintained by hundreds of large corporations.

When the Armour interests bought out Morris & Co., the pension fund amounted to about $1,000,000. The Morrises donated a large additional sum. Now, according to testimony at the trial, only $20,000 is left in the fund, which means that the pensioners are about to be cut off entirely.

The rapid depletion of the fund is accounted for chiefly in that 3,500 employés of Morris & Co. at the time of the merger, who were not yet entitled to any pension rights, but had contributed 3 per cent of their salaries over a period of years, were reimbursed. More than $700,000 thus was spent.

Others Object to Payments.

The pensioners attacked these payments, declaring that under the pension agreement the funds should be expended only in the payment of pensions. The employés, many of whom went with Armour & Co., were given their money back to prevent their becoming dissatisfied, it was charged.

The balance of the fund has been paid out to pensioners, it being the policy of the officers to pay pensions until the money was exhausted.

Counsel for the pensioners, whose court fight was begun eighteen months ago, said they feared the cessation of pension payments woud bring many of the aged former employés of Morris & Co. into real want. Many of them testified at the hearing, declaring in some instances they had turned down offers of other and more lucrative employment because the company officials had held forth promises of the pensions they would receive.

Asked Fund or Damages.

This was the claim as advanced in the pensioners' behalf in support of their pleas for either the $7,000,000 trust fund, which it was estimated would pay all the claims, or a decree for money damages sustained by each pensioner.

It was a conspiracy on the part of the packers to deprive the pensioners of their just due, according to Attorneys C. W. Armstrong and Rufus M. Potts, counsel for the employés. They demanded that Morris & Co. be required to maintain the fund.

Judge Ryner, however, in an opinion which took him more than an hour to read, found that Morris & Co. had organized the fund of their own volition, and had carried out all of its agreements and obligations to the employés. It was bound by no implied or expressed clause in any part of the pension contract to support it indefinitely, the judge held.

Corporations which ceased to exist could not be forced to provide huge sums to sustain pension funds, unless they expressly had agreed that they would do so, Judge Ryner said.

Counsel for the pensioners indicated they would take the case to the Illinois Supreme court.

A statement issued by Attorney John McGrath, counsel for the packers, declared Judge Ryner's decision proved there was no liability, either legal or moral, on the part of Morris & Co., to its pensioners.

Holds Conspiracy Disproved.

"The decision shows," Mr. McGrath went on, "that there was absolutely no conspiracy or fraud committed on the pensioners in the sale or disposition of the assets and property of Morris & Co.

"The court also squarely held that the members of the pension fund committee, the majority of whom were elected by the employés, had carried on the duties of their trust in administering the fund strictly in accordance with the by-laws."

MOTORISTS PAID $80,000,000 FOR GAS TAX IN 1924

Washington, D. C., March 21.—[Special.]—Nearly $80,000,000 was collected from the motorist in the form of gasoline taxes in 1924 and was used or is available very largely for road maintenance and construction, according to the bureau of public roads of the department of agriculture. Thirty-five of the forty-eight states and the District of Columbia imposed a tax, the rate ranging from 1 to 3 cents per gallon in all states except Arkansas, which levied 4 cents.

The total amount collected during the year was $79,734,490. Of this, $48,711,326 was made available for road construction and maintenance under the supervision of state highway departments. A large share of the remainder was turned over to the county and local road funds. In a few states a portion is given to general funds, school funds and for miscellaneous purposes.

Although thirty-five states impose a gasoline tax, it affects only about half of the motor vehicles, since several states which do not levy a tax have large registrations. The amount paid annually by the average motorist where the tax is collected is $10.30 per vehicle.

Customer Attacks Clothier; Loots Cash Box and Flees

A disgruntled customer assailed Abraham Bercovits, proprietor of a men's furnishing store at 428 South Halsted street yesterday, knocked him unconscious, took $85 from the cash register, and fled. "He said he had been cheated of $10," Bercovitz told the police. "Then he hit me."

THE POLITICALLY FUTILE MIDWEST.

In national government it is the disposition or habit or fate of the midwest either to get clear off the reservation and run wild in the woods or to remain on the reservation and have the east or the south ride herd on it. It is either wild-eyed or ox-eyed. When it is ox-eyed it is a colonial appendage of the Atlantic seaboard. When it is wild-eyed, it is caught and shut up in a cage.

New England and New York have a tradition in federal government as old as the nation. So also has the south. The two sections differ in doctrines and agree in practices. North or south of the Potomac the government is run. It depends whether it is a Republican or Democratic administration.

The east and the south organize to do business and they know how. The dominant business of the country is in the east. It knows what it wants and how to get it. The first competent political organization was in New York in the time of Martin Van Buren with discipline, obedience, and success made certain by jobs. All the eastern seaboard is under such organization now. It gets what it wants.

The midwest, the region of the lakes, the Mississippi valley, the prairies and the plains, had two periods of blooming. We must go back a hundred years and as far south as Tennessee for the first one, for Andrew Jackson, but after his stand against New England, against the caucus, the bank, against disunion and for the Union, he made Martin Van Buren his successor, gave the most competent eastern political machine control and made the spoils system of government dominant.

The other great blooming of the midwest was again for the Union with Abraham Lincoln and the Republican party. The nation needed both these expressions of midwestern idea, and might not have continued to exist without the latter, but since then the midwest has been either groping around or raring around.

The Republicans come to Chicago to nominate a President and go east to run his administration. The midwesterners either remain docile or go loco. The party can take a President out of Ohio, but the influence will come out of the east.

The midwest started running wild shortly after the civil war with the Ohio idea for the payment of bonds in greenbacks. The agricultural regions had prospered on government war orders, and when hard times followed they wanted inflation of currency. Later the midwest produced the Greenback party, with half its strength in Michigan, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa and Kansas.

It produced the National Farmers' alliance, the Grangers and then the Populist party, Jerry Simpson who did not believe in socks, and Mr. Bryan who did not believe in sound money. It continued on with La Follette in Wisconsin, Brookhart in Iowa, Magnus Johnson and Shipstead in Minnesota, Frazier and Ladd in North Dakota.

Sometimes it mixes sound ideas with its wild ones. The Greenbackers were against Chinese immigration. They wanted sanitary regulations for manufactories. The Populists were for postal savings banks and the construction of an isthmian canal. They also were for government ownership of railroads, telegraphs and telephones, for the direct election of federal judges and the issue of enough paper money to make everybody happy.

The Pacific group, to which we attach Borah, seems largely to escape this contagion of political thought and activity, but when the midwest is not climbing trees it is submitting to programs which the solidarity of interest, ability and accomplishment in the east or the south makes possible as it comes the turn of one or the other to take the saddle.

The consequences can be seen almost everywhere in the midwest. The opposition to the lakes to the gulf waterway has been entirely competent to stop it. The midwest wants an outlet to another port. The east wants that port closed to remain closed. The midwest wants an outlet to the Atlantic through the St. Lawrence. The east wants that outlet to remain closed.

When Chicago's health was at question it was easy for a New Englander, Secretary Weeks of the war department, to impose rigorous conditions as the price of an uninfected water supply. The midwest which wants the gulf waterway would not see that the Chicago fight was for that as well as its health. Where the east and south are solid for a sectional interest the regions of the midwest divide against each other and themselves.

The Chicago postoffice is a matter of importance to the midwest. It is one of the important mediums by which the business of the midwest is conducted. That business is carried through a species of mausoleum about as adequate as Washington's monument for postoffice purposes. It was hopeless when it was designed and has remained a detriment to midwestern interests for over twenty years. But it is still there.

Conditions will remain as they are until the midwest achieves a solidity back of its legitimate interests and gets a return from the government for the contributions it makes to it. Until it gets influential, intelligent men in Washington its income taxes will be spent in eastern harbors and southern rivers and its own harbors will be closed and all its interests slighted.

AMERICAN CHARACTER IN PUBLIC LIFE.

The younger Pitt was an honest man. He would get drunk at dinner and go to parliament incoherent and tottering, but as his reputation has survived it is clean and honorable, as well as brilliant. Chatham, his father, accepted gratuities without offending the standard of the time.

George III. was a decent man in private life, whatever we think of his statesmanship. His son was England's greatest royal rogue and as regent the blackleg of London.

Marlborough was as unspeakable in morals as he was unbeatable in war. His successes against Louis XIV. were made possible by the frailty of his sister at court.

Charles I. had a reputation for private morality and he lost his head. The curious fatality of reputable kings made George III. lose half his empire in losing the United States. Charles II., a charming débauché, spent his navy's money on his women and the Dutch burned English shipping in the Thames. If France's grandiose schemes had been attracted to England at that time Louis XIV. might easily have succeeded in the invasion which Napoleon couldn't make later.

Frederick the Great of Prussia had a taint of degeneracy in his morals. Peter the Great of Russia was a moral monster. He killed his own son, Alexis, with his own hands by torture. Catherine the Great was a woman common to nobles, peasants, soldiers, and ambassadors. The relations of Lord Nelson and Lady Hamilton were a common scandal now regarded as romantic. Napoleon was a satyr.

It was not only the private morals of the men who controlled Europe's destiny which were rotten, but peculations against the state were the common practice along with the sale of public interests, the promotion of schemes by gratuities and bribes, and the obtaining of advancement thus.

When the great group of Americans who formed this republic started the movement for separation and independence the moral background of Europe was black in private and public.

The loose confederation of American states produced one man who could be reached by money, Benedict Arnold, a capable soldier without character to resist the methods Europe had employed to promote treachery, disintegrate opposing armies, and win battles and campaigns. Marlborough's bribes were as effective as his soldiers. Mr. Pitt's subsidies later were as powerful as Nelson's fleet.

In the American republic, so young in its national consciousness, there was a new standard of public morality. The men who made this nation have not handed down seared reputations either for public or private conduct. Not every section of the country had the code of the Puritan, but every section produced incorruptible men.

Washington stands in first place for character. Jefferson was a pure patriot. The New England families were austere. The greatest continuing American family, the Adams, with two presidents, our most distinguished ambassador, and with descendents distinguished in the present day, was exemplar. Hamilton, another pure patriot, had a scandal in his life, but it did not affect the uprightness of his public career.

The remarkable early American group which had no counterpart in any other country at any other time was composed of men whose characters stood out brightly against the dominant groups in other countries at their time. Their code has persisted. There have been exceptions and lapses, but not many which touched an important American. There have been grafters and dishonest men, but it has been seldom that a great man was marred or a great reputation brought low by some disclosure.

Henry Clay was a man of reprehensible habits, but Daniel Webster was of outstanding integrity. Jackson was a rock of private virtues. The men on both sides in the civil war, Grant, and Lee, and their officers, were generally men of austere or decorous life.

The American people in their community ideals are devoted to a clean code of morality. They do not sanction, or tolerate, or understand the indulgent standards which even now prevail in Europe. It would be fatal for a prominent public man in the United States to be found in moral laxness. The people are not inerrant, but they cannot accept even brilliant public service from a man of disreputable habit or loose living.

Every prominent man in public life protects his reputation from the finger of suspicion, knowing that a charge against his integrity or his moral character would be the heaviest load he could carry in his political career and that a proved charge would wreck him.

MORE STUDY FOR MUSCLE SHOALS.

Representative Longworth of Ohio, Republican floor leader in the house of representatives of the sixty-eighth congress and prospective speaker of the next, in a review of the work of the congress said that it had passed more laws than any other congress. One of the bills which failed was Muscle Shoals. Mr. Longworth was sorry for that, but he said the house, seeing that there could be no agreement on the bill, had recommended to the President the appointment of a commission for further study of the question.

Further consideration is what the question needs, we are quite sure, and there will be more confidence in the decisions when they get the fertilizer out of the water power. The making of fertilizer is an incident to the development and disposal of this water power which is second to Niagara.

It is government power on which the nation has spent $165,000,000. As water power it is wealth and in a superpower system in which the whole country would be comprehended it would be a most important hookup. Mr. Ford's proposal would have taken it for a hundred years, if not longer. The Underwood bill was at least within the provisions of the water power act limiting leases to fifty years.

The period of such a lease will be the period of superpower development and the study which is required is one which safeguards the needs of this development.

WIDEN THE ROADS.

Last Sunday was not exactly a spring day, but it was bright and people decided to take out their cars and have a look at the country. The result was a jam on the roads. This may be another bright Sunday. The same thing will happen. Later when the country is more inviting more cars will turn out and the narrow roads will be blocked with traffic they cannot carry.

Every season from now on until the roads are widened will offer less and less use of the car to its owner on the days when he most wants to use it and in the direction in which he wants to ride. We are getting wide roads in the city, but they run into bottle necks when they emerge into the country.

The Cook county authorities are awake to the need and they have interested the federal government, but it is a state matter properly, and Cook county in this, as in many other things, has not been able to get a square deal from the state administration.

If the Cook county members of the legislature made it a point to make trouble until they got state cooperation for wider roads the Cook county drivers might get some return on the money they pay the state for the improvement of highways everywhere except in Cook county.

THE COMMUTER'S TICKET.

The robins came on the twelfth, one day ahead of two inches of snow, which dropped out of a singing northwest wind. They hopped to the lawn out of the white oaks and the next day were miserable with numbed wings arched as they sat in the wych hazel. As a bad day it did not bother the wintering colony at all. The cardinals, chickadees, woodpeckers, sapsuckers, and jays made nothing of it. The chickadee sang his phœbe spring song and the cardinal called to May and all were in and out of the feeding boxes with no show of discomfort, while poor robin was a-cold. He has an unsatisfactory time with grain, seeds, and crumbs, and with the red barberries.

On the seventeenth the meadow lark started his piping from the field. This is about his usual time. Some years it may be earlier, but there is not much variation, and none seemingly caused by weather. There may be four inches of snow tomorrow, but the lark will be in the field piping.

The return of the juncoes, larks, and robins does not appear as migration, but rather as a return from just around the corner. The later migrations are as waves in the thickets and out again, waves of hermit thrush, grackles, white throats, chipping sparrow, buntings, warblers, small indomitable travelers from the Caribbean into the north.

REVISE THE MOTOR CODE.

The need for a reexamination of the state automobile laws is obvious. The color blind, unable to distinguish green from red signals, are now driving automobiles as are the mentally subnormal. It is not carrying regulation to extremes to forbid the grossly unfit to menace public safety.

The laws need revision at another point. Now there is no sharp definition of what constitutes dangerous speeding. The state law provides that a speed greater than ten miles an hour in the center of towns, fifteen miles in residential districts, twenty miles in the outskirts, and thirty-five miles on the country roads is merely prima facie evidence of recklessness. That means that the prisoner may defend himself by showing that at the moment of his arrest the speed at which he was going was not a menace to safety. It leaves too much to the judgment of policemen, magistrates, and motorists.

The confusion has been heightened by the various municipal codes throughout the state until we find Judge Olson and Chief Collins in sharp disagreement on what the law provides. For a time, Chief Collins' men were arresting motorists for violating regulations which Judge Olson's bench refused to recognize as law.

The automobile death toll in Cook county alone in the first seventy-five days of 1925 was 120. If there is a remedy it should be found.

The Other Side

KILL THE STATE POLICE BILL.

[Springfield (Ill.) State Register.]

In the last session of the Illinois general assembly the State Register helped to defeat measures proposing organization of a "state constabulary," or "department of state police," as such contabulary is now called.

The State Register renews its opposition to such measures and urges the members of the legislature to defeat them.

Some of the arguments made in defense of such legislation seem plausible, but the proposed state constabulary will not and cannot do what is claimed for it. Its influence in diminishing burglaries, holdups, and other crimes would be out of all proportion to its enormous cost. It would have a tendency to minimise the efficiency of city and county police organizations which are already too inefficient, due to political manipulation, petty graft, inaction against crime and popular indifference in primaries and elections.

The "state police bill" introduced in the senate by Senator Dunlap naively proposes a military police of "not less than three more nor more than seven" troops, each troop to number sixty-five. A so-called "superintendent" or major general of this tax eating army would receive a salary of $6,000 per annum, and a lieutenant general, or "assistant superintendent," would receive $3,500.

The governor would be empowered to name the major general. The governor and his appointee would together determine how many troops would be organized and what their salaries would be.

As a breeding place for professional politics this would be prolific. It would amaze even the taxpayers of Illinois, whose experiences justify the assumption that they know something of the ramification of politics in this glorious old commonwealth.

The State Register agrees that some measure of police supervision over hard roads should be maintained. There is such a force now.

Why did Senator Dunlap father an amendment in the last session to fix the number of hard road policemen at 125 instead of 175 as the bill originally provided?

It was doubtless to form a background for his fight for a costly military political constabulary

An increased and reasonable number of hard road patrolmen clothed with full police powers would be approved by the State Register and most other opponents of this proposed new military political army.

What could three troops of sixty-five police politicians do to suppress crime in Illinois?

They might carry only a county or two on election day, so the situation would make necessary the organization of the full quota of seven troops.

Seven troops at a very conservative figure would involve a first direct cost of from $1,000,000 to $1,200,000 per annum.

This tax burden on the backs of the people would be increased by the cost of political police headquarters to be maintained in various places.

Add to this the cost of equipment—guns, pistols, uniforms, motorcycles, ammunition—and the state already taxed to an unendurable degree would suffer another serious backset.

What could this small but very costly constabulary accomplish in this vast state of over 55,000 square miles?

What Illinois needs is less rather than more appropriations for nonessentials.

We want better police and more efficient sheriffs' organizations rather than more state police.

We want an awakened interest in primaries and elections which will produce higher class officials and a more determined local regard for law, order, and common decency.

More political state police and higher taxes will not reduce crime in Illinois. It is an absurd proposal. Indiana heard all arguments for such legislation, then defeated it!

Kill the proposed state police bill in Illinois!

The taxpayers so order!

HEALTH OF OLD PEOPLE.

A RECENT supplement to the Medical Journal and Record was devoted to the health of old people. A conclusion arrived at by that wise old man, Stanley Hall, was that nobody, neither physicians nor laity, knew very much about the health of old people.

When Stanley Hall retired from the presidency of the Clark university and began planning his work for the few years that remained, the first problem he met was to decide how long he was likely to stay on earth and how efficient was he likely to be in each of his remaining years. His next was, how could he maintain his health and efficiency at the maximum. After getting the best answer he could he mapped out enough work to keep him busy and of service to the world during expectancy.

Stanley Hall found a few medical books that helped and he got a little help from other sources. Had he lived long enough he would have added this series of articles to his library, for he could easily understand all the terms these physicians used in writing for their associates.

Dr. Osborn thinks old people should drink little or no coffee or tea. The caffein in these beverages increases general nervous irritability, causes palpitation, sleeplessness, irritability of the brain, night urination and trembling of the hands. It increases uric acid, which irritates the kidneys and causes muscle and joint pains. It raises the blood pressure. There are circumstances under which old people need and should use coffee. His reference is to the routine use of coffee and tea as a habit by the old. He thinks more favorably of the use of a small amount of alcohol by the aged. In all probability he regards the need of alcohol as about on par with that of coffee. Both are to be used under certain circumstances and for special indications. Neither is to be used indiscriminately and as a matter of routine. A little alcohol and sugar act as a fairly good food for some old people.

Since so many old people have heart trouble, Bishop advises them to have periodic heart examinations. He advises that the capacities of the heart, the pulse rate, the quality of the pulse, the blood pressure, and the presence or absence of heart murmurs be charted and that these charts be filed. When the periodic heart examination is made the new chart is to be compared with the old ones.

Especial attention should be paid to attacks of heart pains which are caused by exertion. Such pains can be avoided if the heart and other muscles are kept in vigorous condition and if exercise and work are kept well within the limits fixed by the condition of the heart.

The urine should also be examined periodically and the results of the examinations charted and kept on file.

Pneumonia is the outstanding dread of the aged. To prevent this, Thewlis recommends avoidance of people that have colds, keeping out of crowded places, wearing warm clothing.

Other papers are on foods for the aged and high blood pressure.

EAR ABSCESS.

Mrs. C. E. writes: My little girl had a very bad abscess in her ear, which left her with a running ear. I took her to a doctor. He said her ear drum was broken and it would run for a while, but it is almost a year now and it still runs. Can you give me a good wash for her ear?

REPLY.

Do not let this running continue. Sometimes, having the sun shine directly into the ear for one-half to one hour a day cures. Sunlight that has come through glass will not answer.

The best wash is Dakin's fluid, properly diluted. Have your physician show you how to use it.

Some cases require operation.

BETTER SERVICE.

Chicago, March 16.—[Friend of the People.]—Our house sets back of a lot in a short alley and we dump ashes there. But the ashman does not get around there very often and so our yard always looks dirty. How can we get better service? E. W.

Conditions complained of have been remedied and notices served to procure proper receptacles for the accommodation of refuse output from premises, as there are none at the present time. THOMAS H. BYRNE,
Superintendent of Streets.

THREE INCHES OF GROUND.

Chicago, March 16. — [To the Legal Friend of the People.]—There has been a vacant lot next to my property. The owner now proposes to build a bungalow on it so he had it surveyed. The results of the survey show that my house is three inches on his property. I wanted to buy six inches from him but he won't sell. He will sell me three inches, but I want six in order to include a fence which I have between the two properties. He says that if I do not buy, he will make me move my house. He will pay some extra if I leave up the fence. Please advise what protection I have? F. C.

In general, he is in a position to force you to buy the strip upon his terms.
TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

A NECESSARY EVIL.

Chicago, March 17.—[Friend of the people.]—Why doesn't the city remove large timbers and rubbish from the curbing on the north side of Jackson boulevard, between Clinton and Canal streets? All the congestion in this district is caused by this obstruction. This has been here about all winter. E. J. B.

The large timber along the north curb of Jackson boulevard between Canal and Clinton streets is part of the temporary retaining wall, built to keep the pavement in place, while the concrete wall is being built. The boulevard will be repaved in April and the temporary wall removed.

Chief Engineer, West Chicago Park Commissioners.

NEW YORK.—The Commercial's Hatcher's Run correspondent says: "Our troops have been under arms for thirty-six hours, expecting an attack from the rebels. Movements for several days within the enemy's lines gave rise to this expectation. An early evacuation of Petersburg is expected."

NEW YORK.—A Herald special says it was reported in Washington yesterday that Jeff Davis had abdicated as president of the rebel confederacy and handed over the reins of his sinking government to Gen. Lee, with the understanding that the latter, as supreme dictator, would make one last desperate effort, with such resources as are left within his control.

CHICAGO.—(Editorial.)—THE PRESIDENT'S HEALTH.—We do not desire to create needless alarm in the minds of the people by heading this editorial with the above ominous caption. The recent illness of the President does not necessarily indicate that the public have reason to be under immediate apprehension, but we have the best reasons, founded upon the general observations of those who, like ourselves, have been familiar with his personal health and appearance for many years, for stating that Mr. Lincoln's physical powers have been tested beyond their capacity of endurance, and that if this ordeal is to continue his naturally strong constitution must at no distant date give way. Without entering into any invidious inquiry as to those who might be called upon in any contingency to succeed him, the unanimity with which he was nominated and the heavy popular vote by which he was elected are sufficient evidences of the great interest the public has in his life. . . . On behalf of the sovereign people, therefore, we bespeak for our really invalid President a month's furlough.

CHICAGO.—The lady of Gen. W. T. Sherman arrived in Chicago last evening to attend the great Sanitary fair. Because of the late hour of her arrival it was impossible to tender her the reception due herself and her distinguished husband. She was met at the train by Judge Arrington and Dr. C. J. Beleki and taken to the Sherman house, where she will be appropriately honored today.

CHICAGO.—John E. Dean and Miss S. Ella Wood, daughter of Dr and Mrs. S. E. Wood, 3924 Michigan avenue, were married at the bride's home

WASHINGTON. — Representative Lane of Iowa introduced a bill in the house providing for the celebration of the one hundredth anniversary of the purchase of the Louisiana territory by holding an exposition of art, industries, manufactures, and the products of the soil, mines, forests, and sea at St. Louis. CHICAGO.—Prof. Henry Cohn of the German department of Northwestern university died as the result of a paralytic stroke, brought on by overwork.

CHICAGO.—Carl Hagenbeck is to sell a lot of animals at auction at Cincinnati today, and President Wickersham and George B. Byron of the Lincoln park board went down to buy as long as $2,500 holds out.

CHICAGO.—The board of education raised the salary of W. Lester Bodine, superintendent of the compulsory educational department, from $1,800 to $2,500 a year. Louis E. Larson, a clerk in the department, was made assistant to the superintendent and placed in charge of night schools at a salary of $1,800. PARIS.—More than fifty bombs were dropped on Paris and nearby villages during a raid by German Zeppelins in the early hours of yesterday morning. Some of the bombs were highly explosive while others were filled with inflammable liquids. However, little damage was done, only seven persons in the capital being injured, none of them seriously.

ROME.—Police discovered that the telephone connecting the foreign office with the Quirinal had been tapped by a German spy. Sensational developments are expected as a result of the discovery. What is believed to be Italy's final move toward entering the war was taken when the senate passed the anti-espionage and anti-contraband laws.

LONDON.—Driven insane by British artillery fire which mowed down their comrades, 300 German infantrymen were moved to an asylum near Aix-la-Chapelle after the battle of Neuve Chapelle, an Amsterdam dispatch says. A German officer is quoted as saying the casualties equaled those of Waterloo.

AGAINST PARI-MUTUELS.

Camp Point, Ill., March 16.—A news item in THE TRIBUNE of March 5 informs us that a bill has been introduced in the legislature to legalize "racing and race betting on the pari-mutuel basis."

The bill provides for the payment of fees of $5,000 a day and 25 per cent of the net proceeds to go to roads and county fairs. That seems to mean that the pari losers will be taxed by law to help the honest farmers run gambling races that they will call "fairs."

If race track gambling shall be made legal in Illinois the minds of hundreds of thousands in Illinois and adjacent states will be familiarized with the idea of getting money from other people by pari-mutuel methods. A number of cities and towns will be burdened with the cost of race tracks. Race gamblers and habitués, carrying with them pari-mutuel ethics and manners, will stay for several days at Chicago, Springfield, Quincy, Bugnolia, Shakerag—except that at Chicago the welcome is not to exceed 120 days. Do we want to subject young persons and children to a gambling atmosphere?

A gambling race track, a gambling county fair—look it! hear it! smell it! Red lemonade, hip liquor, lots of police. "Take a chance!" "Try your luck!" "Try it again!" "Knock 'em down!" "Three balls for a dime!" "See the ladies in a well!" "Everybody gets something!" "The wheel may give you a Navajo blanket or a kewpie doll!" Swindle the children! Sic 'em, fakers!

You say: "We have our doubts as to horse racing, but in doubt it is better to decide for liberty than for repression."

Of course you would commend those who happen to have opinions that are stronger than their doubts and who would vote their opinions while you would vote your doubts. C. S. BOOTH.

HE FEARS CROOKED BOXING.

Chicago, March 10.—While I am in favor of a referendum on boxing, giving the people the opportunity of having it if they want it, I would like to offer my experience of some time ago to the readers of THE TRIBUNE.

The entertainment committee of an American Legion post, of which I was at the time commander, dealing through local promoters, staged a series of wrestling bouts on a fifty-fifty after all expenses basis. The sum of $12,900 actual cash was taken in at the box office, out of which the post received only $200.

Knowing that those who are today promoting wrestling will tomorrow promote boxing, should the bill pass, I do not see how we can look with anything but disfavor upon the coming proposed bill. Older men of Chicago who would enjoy a boxing show, but remembering the Terry McGovern-Joe Gans fake and the situation prior to that, when it was impossible for any boxer to win, no matter how good, unless he or those financially interested in him were "in right," have many times told me they would be against it. The same gang who killed it before are still alive and will kill it again.

Too bad we cannot have legalized boxing with some guarantee that there will not be a return to the same conditions that outlawed it years ago.
THOMAS K. DAVEY.

CALLING THE ROLL.

Chicago, March 16.—I am a pretty religious man, but when I read such a communication as that signed by the Chicago District Ministerial association, I find it hard to restrain some very hot words and cannot restrain heated thoughts. After 1,918 years it has been discovered that our Lord did not drink wine; that he regarded all persons who partook of wine as beneath contempt and as "publicans and sinners."

Is it any wonder there is a dearth of men attending church services, or is it any wonder either that perversion of constitutions and governmental machinery so easily find cordial approval in certain quarters? JOSEPH G. HUBBELL.

THE AMENDMENT MANIA.

Chicago, March 15.—Your editorial on "The Amendment Mania," needs no correction. It should be thrown out bodily. It certainly is lacking in sound logic.

Consider the probable condition of our country were the states themselves permitted to handle such topics of vital issue as have been, and are being, passed upon by the national legislature. Consider, if you will, forty-eight states, each propounding its own doctrines and principles, each forming its own traditions, customs, and decorum, growing up into as many autocracies, continually wrangling and bickering among themselves until a country-wide war ensued. This is not a guess or prophecy at what would happen under such conditions. It is a clear cut statement of what eventually would have to take place were no effort made to prevent it.

How may such a disastrous occurrence be avoided? By the states remaining as they have always been; namely, the United States. By this, by having a government of and for the people, and by amendments to the national constitution, when necessity, common sense, and good judgment demand it.

When the states cannot see the harm or refuse to remedy it, it is the duty of the country at large to see to it that it is done. Moreover, the amendments, instead of being sent to the state legislatures for ratification, should be submitted to a strictly popular vote.
JAMES J. METCALFE.

COMMUNIST PSYCHOLOGY.

Chicago, March 17.—Last Wednesday Anna Louise Strong, communist, addressed the Chicago Woman's club. She drew a very careful picture of the wonderful things the communists are doing for the children in Russia. Property taken by the government for this and other uses was not confiscated, but was "by law nationalized as government property." Miss Strong did not so state, but it was evident from the queries later put to her that her efforts were for communists alone.

It is fair to assume that every woman who listened to her was a beneficiary, to some extent at least, of the capitalist system the communists seek to overthrow. Notwithstanding that fact, a respectful, intense attention was accorded the speaker, and the suggestion of financial aid was proffered from the floor—which was not declined.

On the other hand, consider what transpired at the Garrick last Sunday. Another Russian sympathizer was appealing for aid for those who were not communists. A group, taking the position that none but communists may receive aid, broke up the meeting. This was done by those who vilify this government because "there is no such thing as free speech."

Recognizing Russia means to place the stamp of approval upon the communist régime, nothing else. C. B. HOPKINS.

TRAFFIC EXPERT TO MAP OUT PLAN FOR WASHINGTON

New Regulations Go Into Effect Tomorrow.

Washington, D. C., March 21.—[Special.]—Washington is to have a model system of traffic regulations—a composite system patterned on the best rules in leading American cities and one which probably will set a model for other municipalities.

Maurice O. Eldridge, research specialist for the American Automobile association, who has made a study of traffic rules and devices, today accepted the new post of traffic director, created at the last session of congress.

Will Revise Regulations.

He will proceed at once to a revision of the regulations with respect to brakes, horns, lights, mufflers, and other equipment, speed and the parking of vehicles and the issuance of operators' permits. Another step will be the installation of automatic semaphore signal devices, and a probable redistricting of one way and through streets.

The automobile problem is becoming a tougher one every day here, because of the large number of cars in use and the limited amount of parking space.

"It is too early to outline policies," Mr. Eldridge said, "for these must be worked out and applied only after a complete survey of the situation.

Wants Public Coöperation.

"Much depends on the extent of the public coöperation in putting the new traffic code into effect. For this reason I am counting on the full support of the police department, of civic organizations, utility companies, motorists and all public spirited citizens."

The second deficiency bill carried an appropriation of $50,000 for the administration of the new office and it is believed that most of this will be spent in installing automatic signal devices.

WIDOW OF EX-GOV. FOLK SUES EGYPT FOR $490,000

[Copyright: 1925: By the New York Times.]

CAIRO, Egypt, March 21. — The mixed tribunal is soon to hear a case which is bound to create considerable controversy, involving the Egyptian Nationalist organization. When in Paris in the summer of 1919, Zaghloul Pasha, recently deposed as premier, anxious to arouse American sympathy and thus morally bring pressure on the British government, enlisted the services of ex-Gov. Folk of Missouri to carry out propaganda in the United States in favor of Egyptian independence.

Zaghloul sent over to America Mohammed Mahmud Pasha, who initiated propaganda with Folk, and before his return to France contracted that Folk should receive $5,000 monthly during the fight for Egyptian freedom; in the event of having to plead before the league of nations, $100,000; in the event he was compelled to carry on a campaign in the United States for a minimum period of two years, $100,000; while if his efforts were finally successful in securing Egypt's independence "the Egyptian people" would pay him £100,000 Egyptian.

Mr. Folk died in 1923 and his widow is now suing. She affirms he never received any payment for his services, merely some $5,000 to meet heavy propaganda and other expenses he incurred, and she is claiming $90,000 salary for eighteen months, plus £100,000 Egyptian (about $400,000), promised contingent on Egypt's securing its independence.

JAP FISHING CONCESSION IN MEXICO DENIED

Mexico City, March 21.—[By the Associated Press.]—James R. Sheffield, the American ambassador, announced today that the embassy had received an official denial from the Mexican government that port, fishing, and other concessions had been granted to Japanese in the neighborhood of the coaling station on Pichilingue island in the Gulf of California, which was given up recently by the United States navy.

Mexico City papers have published articles to the effect that Japanese interests have filed a petition for a concession to establish a fish packing factory on the Lower California coast and exploit a seaweed and sea shell industry throughout the extent of the Mexican Pacific coast.

These reports have caused a recurrence of the rumors that the Japanese were attempting to secure a naval base in Lower California.

The rumors are characterized in official quarters as without foundation.

Reserve Strength-Quietness-Smoothness

Give Longer Life in the New JEWETT MOTOR

NOISE in any motor indicates the presence of vibration. And when there is vibration, destruction is sure to follow. For vibration is destruction.

Knowing this scientific fact, Paige-Jewett engineers have devoted years of study and research to producing a motor, so free from noise and vibration that destruction—yes, even ordinary wear—would be postponed for years.

That is precisely what has beeen accomplished in the New Jewett Motor.

Noise is absent! Working parts are so skillfully balanced and fitted that vibration cannot be detected at any speed.

We have added power—yes, probably more than you will ever need. But Jewett's great power—its great strength—are held in reserve. So there's no overtaxing, straining, wearing destruction. Its smoothness and quietness remain unimpaired through long years of constant use.

A margin of safety! Call it that! Every great bridge has it in the form of extra capacity. Not just enough to meet average requirements—but an ample margin—over and above that—to meet any possible contingency. And thereby prolong its life.

The New Jewett Motor has an unusually big margin of safety!

And years of experience are back of it. For basically it is the same big, sturdy motor that has powered Paige-built cars for 8 years.

Think that over! Eight years of constant improvement with the same basic design. Far over a billion miles beyond experiment.

A $15,000,000 company builds it. A company whose principal executives have remained unchanged for 16 years. And a five million dollar plant produces it. The most modern plant in the industry today.

To the mechanically inclined, the story of Jewett's achievement in strength—quietness—smoothness—long life, is easily understood.

Just study the following features:

New Counterbalanced Crankshaft

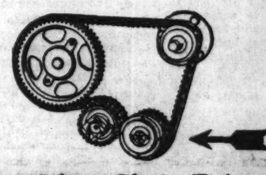
A massive new counterbalanced crankshaft—weighing 102 pounds—eliminates distortion. We know of no heavier crankshaft in any car. 30 pounds heavier than the old Jewett crankshaft. Its pins and main bearings are a quarter inch larger in diameter. Vibration is eliminated through dynamic and static balancing and the addition of counterweights. There can be no "whip" in such a crankshaft. Smooth, quiet operation through this motor's long life is thus assured.

Big Cylinders—Long Life

Extra cylinder size gives the New Jewett its amazing power. Each cylinder is 3¼-inch bore—5-inch stroke—giving the motor 249 cubic inches piston displacement. That means a motor with ample power—to carry Jewett's sturdy weight up hills and through rough going in high—without ever straining. It's the biggest motor ever put into a car in Jewett's class—so big that it makes play of the work that taxes lighter, less able motors. Jewett's power is never taxed. So it keeps its vitality longer—stays new for years.

New Carburetion

The improved intake manifold of the New Jewett is one of the biggest factors in increasing the horsepower developed by the motor. Square in shape—it provides a flat floor surface where the heavy, unvaporized ends of the fuel lie—spread out—completely exposed to the vaporizing influence of the mixture passing through the manifold. More complete vaporization is assured—hence, more power. And crank-case dilution is practically eliminated. A new top outlet carburetor is used, mounted on the right side of the motor—shortening the intake manifold. The manifold has a more intensely hot spot and functions ideally without a stove. The qualities of easy starting—quick acceleration and smooth running, for which Jewett has always been famous—are now greatly improved.



New Silent Chain Drive

A new silent chain now drives pump, cam and timing shafts. Automatic tension adjuster takes up chain wear as it occurs. You do not find a feature like this in other cars near Jewett's price. And there's no need for service. We proved this feature right with two years' use in the Paige without a single complaint. Now—improved—it is in the New Jewett. Permanent silence is the result.

Full Pressure Lubrication

The New Jewett Motor has an oiling system identical in principle with the systems being used in the costliest cars. It's a high pressure, hollow crankshaft system that forces two gallons per minute through all main and connecting rod bearings—now extended to chain drive, cam shaft and water pump drive shaft bearings. Forced out from the ends of these bearings by high pressure, oil is broken into a fine spray, lubricating pistons and pins. Metal never rubs metal—always a protective film between. Heat is carried away from bearings, insuring the absence of friction. Wear is banished. Hence—Jewett's long life—years of service-free operation.

New Double Bearing Wrist Pins

Jewett's wrist pins are large—much larger than pins used in other cars in its class. Now, instead of being fastened in the pistons and having their bearings in the small end of the connecting rods—Jewett wrist pins are clamped in the rods and oscillate in the bosses of the pistons. Wrist pin bearings are longer—bearing surface is spread over a greater area, reducing the possibility of pin noises. Here is another typical example of Jewett's new sturdiness that means long life—service-free operation.

Ask any Paige-Jewett dealer to show you this remarkable new motor. Get the facts. Then take the wheel of a New Jewett and make your own test. Five minutes will demonstrate its reserve strength, quietness, smoothness. 842-P

JAPAN WARNS U. S. BAN IS NOT A CLOSED ISSUE

To Stir at Next Session, New Envoy Hints.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., March 21.—[Special.]—Japanese exclusion, a question which congress deems has been finally and satisfactorily settled under the new immigration law, but which Japan apparently looks on as merely a temporarily sleeping issue, may be brought to the forefront again at the next session of congress.

TSISNEO MATSUDAIRA. [Harris & Ewing.]

Figures produced by Albert Johnson [Rep., Wash.], chairman of the house committee on immigration, who piloted the present law through the lower branch of congress, show that under present restrictions the Japanese influx has been reduced by nearly 90 per cent. He claims the law has shown its efficacy in an unmistakable way.

Envoy's Hint of Trouble.

But, although Tsuneo Matsudaira, the new Japanese ambassador to Washington from Tokio, has taken occasion to deny he received specific instructions before leaving Nippon to reopen the immigration question, he intimated that his government considers it far from being a settled issue.

He stated that whereas the United States regards the question as settled forever his government still entertains the hope that at some future date the problem might be taken up again and another solution found that would be acceptable both to Washington and Tokio.

It will be recalled that it was during the flareup in Japan over the passage of the present law which succeeded the "gentlemen's agreement" that certain unfortunate utterances were attributed to the former Japanese ambassador, Hanihara, which resulted in his recall by his government.

Coolidge Opposed Measure.

It also will be recalled at that time congress stubbornly insisted on the strict oriental exclusion provision of the law, despite recommendations to the contrray made by President Coolidge.

Therefore, it is not unlikely that the Japanese question will be pushed to a place of prominence next session when other questions affecting immigrants are brought up, as they are bound to be. Several bills providing for alien deportation and correcting certain inequalities in the naturalization laws failed of passage at the session just closed and will be introduced again early in December.

But any attempt to modify the present immigration law in its vital phases will be bitterly opposed by the leaders who drafted it, whipped it into shape and worked for the votes that carried it.

Americans Are Satisfied.

Mr. Johnson has stated it as his explicit belief that "the majority of the people will be content if we undertake no modification of the immigration act of 1924, which, day by day, is justifying itself more and more."

In support of this assertion he quotes figures showing that whereas 9,481 Japanese immigrants entered the country during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1924, only 453 came in during the first six months in which the new law was in operation. There were also only 1,436 Japanese of the non-immigrant class who came in during that period as compared to 7,217 who entered the country during the year previous.

"The important fact shown by these figures," Mr. Johnson said, "is that the exclusion provision of the law is functioning as congress intended it to function. Further, I believe the figures demonstrate the validity of the contention urged, when the law was being considered, namely, that the so-called gentlemen's agreement did not raise the barrier against Japanese immigration which its authors contemplated.

Dual Control Not Needed.

"Another interesting fact is that dual control of Japanese immigration, which a year ago a high official of the American government thought would be more efficacious as a barrier than any absolute exclusion measure, is quite definitely proven unnecessary.

"During the operation of the gentlemen's agreement, despite the original intent of that understanding, the influx of Japanese continued at a considerable rate. Since its abrogation Japanese immigration has dropped to a negligible figure. At the same time the new law has closed some loopholes in the Chinese exclusion act, as is shown by the 45 per cent reduction in immigration from China.

"In these results I believe there is cause for gratification. Substantially, they mean that the colonization of unassimilable races in the United States and particularly along our Pacific coast, has been brought to an end.

Legitimate Visitors Enter.

"It should be understood, however (and the figures impressively show it), that practically all persons of the Japanese race who have legitimate reasons for entering the United States may come in freely. The law is applicable only to those who seek admission for permanent residence."

The oriental exclusion features of the law are not the only ones which prove the merit of the law, according to Mr. Johnson.

"In recent published data relating to admissions and departures," he says, "may be found figures which show that the exodus of aliens from the United States to certain countries has overbalanced the immigration from them. This is one of the healthiest signs of the times and one which speaks volumes for the merits of the new immigration law.

"The countries that received back more persons than they sent us are Bulgaria, Czecho-Slovakia, Greece, Hungary, Italy, Lithuania, Poland, Portugal, Roumania, Spain, Yugo-Slavia, Armenia, China, India, Japan, Persia, and Syria.

"During the six months ending Dec. 31, 1924, this exchange of persons meant an excess of emigration over immigration of approximately 32,000.

"At the same time the countries of northern and western Europe from which we drew the substantial immigration stock of the nineteenth century, sent us a considerable population gain. Germany sent 20,419 quota immigrants and 5,006 of the nonquota and nonimmigrant classes. Irish Free State immigration is next in importance, showing 11,832 quota immigrants and 3,123 other arriving."

CUBA STUDENTS RIOT OVER ISLE OF PINES TREATY

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

HAVANA, March 21. — Protesting against a sentence of a correctional court, which fined three students of Havana university $200 each for disturbing the peace on Wednesday during a parade organized by President Zayas and his cabinet in appreciation of the United States senate's ratification of the Isle of Pines treaty, a crowd of 500 students gathered before the presidential palace at noon today. The students formed a committee to demand the release of their convicted colleagues and to see Señor Zayas.

When the commission was denied admittance, the crowd outside began to riot. "Death to the president," "Down with imperialism," "Send Crowder away," the rioters shouted. When the police arrived the students mounted the base of what is to be a monument to President Zayas, hurling defiance and firing pistols.

A free-for-all fight followed, in which the students used rocks and other missiles, and the police clubs. Many on both sides were severely beaten. Tonight students of the medical school have hoisted a banner over their college with the inscription, "Down with the corrupt judge." Charges of sedition have been filed by the government against the students' leaders.

A. C. Cameron Sued for $100,000 for Love Theft

Arthur C. Cameron, manufacturer of automobile accessories, with offices in the Roanoke building, yesterday was named defendant in the praecipe of a suit for $100,000 damages, filed in Superior court by Attorney Jacob Levy for Ray Floyd, 1348 Devon avenue. Attorney Levy declared that Cameron, who lives at 824 Lafayette parkway, is 60 years old and married, alienated the affections of Floyd's wife, Cora. Mr. Cameron said the suit was ridiculous.

INDIA UNWILLING TO LET ROOSEVELT PARTY PASS INTO TURKESTAN

Washington, D. C., March 21.—The proposed expedition of Kermit and Theodore Roosevelt into Turkestan has met with difficulties, it was learned today, owing to the refusal of the viceroy of India to permit the party to use the Hunsea pass from India to Turkestan. It is understood permission is being sought to use another route.

COL. THEODORE ROOSEVELT. [U. & U. Photo.]

The Indian government's position is based on the ground that insufficient native carriers are available this year for such an expedition. A large Swedish expedition, it was explained, has already entered Turkestan by the Hunsea pass, absorbing practically all the efficient carriers, who, owing to the small population of that part of India, are not plentiful.

The viceroy, it was said, suggested that the expedition be postponed until next year.

British Still Undecided.

New York, March 21.—[Specihl.]—Col. Theodore Roosevelt, in commenting today on the report that the viceroy of India had refused a permit for the hunting trip this year, said:

"No definite decision has been made by the British authorities. The matter is in process of negotiation with them."

NATIONALISTS OF GERMANY TALK OF CABINET BOLT

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

BERLIN, March 21. — The German nationalists tonight threatened to abandon their posts in Chancellor Luther's cabinet in order to enforce their point of view on the questions of both a security pact and valorization of German war bonds. They claim Foreign Minister Stresemann promised too much to the allies when he agreed to recognize the present western border.

The security pact, however, is not the real cause for the sudden rebellion of the nationalistic ministers. The real cause is the revaluation of the German war bonds. The nationalists promised the man who bought war bonds that at least 25 per cent of his money would be returned when they entered the government. Chancellor Luther's plan for a revalorization of the war bonds provides for a refund of 5 per cent of their prerevolution value.

Herr Luther answered the nationalists' threats with a clear ultimatum, demanding their unwavering support for his policies or immediate resignation.

EXPLORER HERE SEEKING FUNDS FOR POLAR TRIP

Ten Chicagoans who will contribute $10,000 each to equip a dirigible for a flight to polar regions are sought by Capt. Robert A. Bartlett, Arctic explorer, who arrived yesterday. The United States can add 2,000,000 square miles of polar lands to its area by making an air flight to the pole and claiming the territory by right of discovery, he said.

A similar expedition under Capt. Ronald Amundsen will start for the pole in June and Capt. Bartlett urged that an American expedition start before then.

ASKS AIR FIELDS FOR CHICAGO AS DEFENSE PLAN

More and better air fields for Chicago as one line of defense in possible future international conflicts were strongly recommended yesterday by Maj. Philip G. Kemp of the aviation reserve corps, in an address at the City club.

Maj. Kemp, who is chairman of the Municipal Aerial commission, and who has led in organization of the aerial reserve in the 6th corps area, backed Maj. Gen. Mitchell in the latter's arguments for a separate air force.

"Chicago's inland position is no guarantee against air attack," declared Maj. Kemp. "Submarines loaded with airplanes could easily land upon either coast, the planes fly to any given midwest point, make a disastrous attack and escape."

Maj. Kemp took the position that the only feasible means of attacking enemy air forces is for the United States to build up and maintain a bigger and better air force.

DEAD PEDDLER CALLED PRINCE LOST SINCE 1883

Quiz Ordered; May Clear Archduke Mystery.

BY KARL LAHM.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1925: By The Chicago Tribune.]

VIENNA, Austria, March 21.—Three days ago a peddler named Albert Goebel died in a charity hospital in Vienna. Today he was identified as Johann Orth, who as the Archduke Johann Salvator fled from Austria in 1883 with a sweetheart he had found in a Vienna cafe.

JOHANN ORTH.

Three persons, all Salvator's former servants, declared the body in the morgue was that of the former archduke of the house of Hapsburg, Leopold Oelffing—the former Archduke Leopold, who like his sister, the queen of Saxony, gave up title and fortune to live a free life—said the servants are mistaken.

"He cannot be a Hapsburg since he has a straight nose and all the Hapsburgs' noses are aquiline," he explained.

Courts Order Investigation.

Goebel's wife asserted that long ago he told her he was Orth. The Vienna courts have ordered the burial delayed until the mystery is solved.

Orth, or Salvator, was one of the most romantic figures in one of the most romantic of royal families. He met a woman, who later became his mistress, in a Vienna coffee shop and later he determined to marry her. When his family, including the Austro-Hungarian emperor, refused permission for the marriage, he fled to Buenos Aires. The steamer sank and it was supposed that he had drowned.

According to the wife's story, Goebel, or Orth, in a deathbed confession told how he had been rescued by a small boat. He returned to Europe, and after his sweetheart's death he opened a small restaurant at Saarbrucken, where he met and married a woman of the working class. His business failed and the couple came to Vienna, where Goebel gained a living by peddling knicknacks in the streets of the capital, where he once received military honors due to a son of the royal house.

The wife declares she wants nothing of the Hapsburg family, but she wishes to establish her husband's identity, so that he can be buried in the Capucine cemetery, where his family sleeps.

An old valet, Herman Montag, who is nearing 80, will be brought to Vienna on Monday to try to identify his former royal master. According to the doctor, Goebel, or Orth, was past 70. The Archduke Salvator would have been 74 this winter.

ONCE A U. S. THRILLER.

Older Chicagoans recalled the sensation created nearly sixteen years ago when Archduke Johann Salvator was reported working in Painesville, O., as a $15 a week machinist.

The archduke was declared to have been found as the result of a series of historical mysteries written by Albert Payson Terhune and published in a Chicago paper. One of these dealt with the disappearance of Archduke Salvator. In the narrative it was stated that the archduke had been married twice. Immediately Mr. Terhune received a letter signed by a Johann Orth, from Painesville, in which the writer claimed he was the much hunted noble and that he had been married but once. He wanted the mis-statement corrected, he said, and added that his wife and children were killed in an eruption of Mount Pelee, Martinique.

On receipt of the letter a flood of newspapermen and high Austrian officials from Washington descended on the little Ohio town to verify Orth's claim.

Called an Impostor.

Austrian embassy officials, after questioning Orth for several days, declared him an impostor. But a man named Alois Jaeger, who said he lived in Chicago, appeared and stated that in 1875 he had been employed as a valet in the Salvator palace in Temesvar, Hungary, and that he immediately recognized Orth as the man for whom he had worked—Prince Johann Salvator, noble of the Hapsburgs, and cousin of the emperor, Franz Josef.

The attendant publicity proved too much for Orth and a few days after his discovery he vanished from his boarding house, going in his working clothes and leaving an untouched supper on the table.

A short time later—May 17—a man, shabby and unkempt, his clothing soaked from exposure to a heavy thunderstorm, walked into the office of Dr. Otto Graff, Austrian consul, in the Woman's Temple, Monroe and La Salle streets, and announced that he was Orth and that he had come to make the consul recognize him officially despite the repudiation by the embassy at Washington. Orth said he would write to the emperor if necessary and force recognition that way. If he did there is no record of it.

Claimed He Whipped Emperor.

While here Orth told newspapermen, who recognized him as the one they had seen in Painesville, that he left Austria not because he wished to flee with the woman of his heart, but because he had blackened Emperor Franz Josef's eyes for remarks he made about her.

Then Orth disappeared and did not figure in the news columns again until April 1, 1924, when dispatches from New York stated that a man who died in the Bronx hospital under the name of O. N. Orlow, had been identified as Archduke Salvator.

The doctor who attended "Orlow" was convinced he was the archduke and made out the death certificate in the name of John Salvator.

Wife Charges Husband Kidnaped Their Baby

Chicago and Oak Park police were asked last night to look for William F. Shaw of Oak Park after Mrs. Shaw had reported that her husband had kidnaped their 19 months old baby girl, Isabelle. The kidnaping, Mrs. Shaw said, was the climax of domestic troubles betwewen her and her husband.

HAFFA'S FIGHT ON JUDGE DELAYED ANOTHER WEEK

One Municipal court judge, his two bailiffs and their attorneys, on the one side; on the other, a Barrett-Crowe committeeman, his attorney; the alderman from his ward and his fifty witnesses, marched up and down the stairs in the Criminal court building yesterday trying to find a judge who would listen to their grievances. And it's a big one by now.

And when they were all tired out, they were told to come back again next Saturday morning.

It was just another installment in the serial fight in which Titus Haffa, committeeman in the Forty-third ward charges Judge Henry M. Walker and Bailiffs Henry Bornhuft and William D. Beatty, with assault and battery.

The original incident is alleged to have occurred ten days ago in the Chicago avenue police court when Judge Walker, according to Haffa, denounced him as a professional bondsman and ordered the bailiffs to eject him. They did.

The Municipal judges had a reluctance to try a case involving a fellow jurist. So Judge William Lindsay over in the Criminal court issued the warrants. The case came up Friday, but Judge Lindsay was busy and referred it back to Chief Justice Jacob Hopkins for reassignment. The chief justice sent it to Judge Hosea Wells, but he was out and the matter went over until yesterday morning.

Haffa had a large group of witnesses, men and women, it is reported, who have been previously heavily fined by Judge Walker. The judge had Attorney John J. Healy, personal counsel, and representatives from the Chicago Bar association.

FOREIGN TRADE WITHDRAWS AS CHINA CRUMBLES

Capital Loses All Hope; Chaos Grips Nation.

BY CHARLES DAILEY.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1925: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PEKING, March 21.—In spite of the rehabilitation conference, now in session, and other internal efforts, to put the struggling and cumbersome Chinese republic on its feet, conditions in China grow steadily worse. Here is a country of illimitable wealth, with natural resources that all the world can utilize, but held back by the internecine fighting and political maneuvering, which are one and the same, for no political party can succeed without an army behind it.

Year by year, since the days of the inception of the republic thirteen years ago, the hand of the militarist has steadily been strengthened, his voracious appetite has grown apace, and the robbing of the people, the interruption of trade and the disregard of the rights, both of the natives and of the foreigners, has grown by leaps and bounds. How long it will be before the end shall come—when or how—no one will venture a guess, and the longer one has been in China the less inclined is he to venture an opinion.

Many Groups in Control.

At the moment China is partitioned among many militant politicians. Now and then two or more unite against some other group, but as quickly as they attain a victory the victors fall apart and new partitions occur.

Meantime the vehicles of transportation and communication are falling to pieces; trade is virtually at a standstill although steadily soaring prices make the volume as expressed in dollars or taels appear to be largre; increasing millions in the shape of defaulted loans and other obligations bring the great country with 440,000,000 people to the verge of bankruptcy.

No leading Chinese can see a way out. Some of them, in an effort to divert the limelight from themselves, have started an anti-foreign agitation, and in some respects it is making headway.

Arms Force Loyalty.

The Kuomingtang, so long headed by the late Dr. Sun Yat-Sen, holds Kwangtung and Kwangsi, and is able also to maintain disorder in Kiangsi and Hunan. Shansi is a sort of self-governing province, and Shensi, remote from railways, but rich in resources, is in the hands of a militarist clique.

The few provinces loyal to the Peking government are those held so purely by force of arms. Even among those provinces not all the revenues are remitted to Peking, but are squeezed at the source, while in the other provinces they are retaind entirely by the groups controlling them.

It is no wonder the people of foreign countries do not understand the situation in China and cannot make out from the news dispatches just what is happening.

Railways Going to Pieces.

The railways and equipment are going to pieces through the use of the leading lines by the militarists. Few trains can be run on any of the lines, and on some none at all, for the cars are used to house troops and to transport their supplies. There has been no through traffic from Shanghai to Peking since last autumn.

The telegraph service, which should be highly profitable, is unable to meet its foreign loan obligations because of the retention of the daily receipts. The postal service, also highly remunerative, suffers from the interruption of railway traffic, requiring costly rerouting, and its money, notably the postal savings, is saved from seizure only by energetic action on the part of the foreign co-director, who may not be reëmployed.

In order to protect the billions of foreign capital invested in China, much of which is now imperiled, some sort of foreign intervention in China is necessary.

Within the month the United States Steel Products company and the Pressed Steel Car company have abandoned their Peking offices, seeing no hope of a government with which they can contract. The American Locomotive company and the General American Car company continue to maintain a representative, but only to try to collect what has been owing from the government on behalf of the railways for several years, even the interest being defaulted. Individual railway supply firms long since have given up the game as hopeless.

Everybody is waiting for the outcome of the rehabilitation conference and the national convention, which Tuan Chi-Jui has promised shall follow it. This convention is to put China on its feet, is to reform the government even to the extent of a new constitution, a new parliament, new provincial boundaries, and new officials. Most observers are of the opinion that all these are a long way off, even if seriously contemplated, and that meantime the group of men now in power will further fatten off the revenues.

No Quorum at Conference.

The rehabilitation conference went for fifteen days after its inaugural meeting before a quorum could be obtained, and then only by means of representatives of the chosen delegates, who were practically hand picked by the promoters of the conference.

Enough proof already has been adduced to damn the conference and to impugn the sincerity of the promoters and the delegates.

Most of the provinces use 50 per cent of their entire revenue upon their armed forces. The best showing of all is made in the province of Chekiang, where the cost of military upkeep is 40.35 per cent of the provincial revenue. This percentage probably does not include the cost of the fighting in that province last autumn and winter, and so even this estimate must be accepted with reserve. The total revenue of the country is stated in the memorandum to be $458,881,337, of which $261,923,375 is expended for military purposes.

The great army of the Manchurian war lord, Chang Tso-Lin, is not included in the total stated.

Because of his domination of Peking the Christian general Feng Yu-Hsiang forced upon the government the so-called national army he formed out of the people's army, which he formerly called his own troops. He is powerful enough to have Tuan Chi-Jui at his mercy. It is because of the fact that Tuan Chi-Jui must either yield to Feng and incur the hostility of Chang Tso-Lin or defy him and rely upon the army of Chang Tso-Lin to rescue him that the failure of the conference can so definitely be forecast.

Washington, D. C., March 21.—[Special.]—Starting today at Pittsburgh, Senator Frank B. Willis [Rep., O.] began a tour of speechmaking that will take him into several states of the west, and which is generally accepted by his friends as the beginning of a campaign inaugurated by Mr. Willis with a view to making himself a candidate for the presidential nomination in the Republican national convention of 1928.

Mr. Willis has engaged to deliver forty-five speeches in as many cities in Ohio, Pennsylvania, Michigan, and other states.

C. OF C. OFFICIAL TELLS COOLIDGE BUSINESS IS O. K.

Washington, D. C., March 21.—[Special.]—R. F. Grant, president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States told President Coolidge today that business is gradually improving throughout the whole country and that prospects for better conditions are prospering.

Mr. Grant's visit to the White House was primarily to invite President Coolidge to speak in the Chamber of Commerce building at dedication exercises May 20, when between 3,000 and 5,000 business men will attend the annual convention of the chamber.

TWO DRY AGENTS HELD GUILTY OF WINE PLOTTING

First Verdict of Kind in Illinois.

Two prohibition agents, Bernard Rumps and Albert Bennett, Harry Ex, reputed millionaire wine wholesaler, and three sacramental wine dealers face possible terms of four years in the penitentiary and fines of $20,000 each, under the terms of a sealed verdict opened yesterday in Federal Judge Cliffe's court.

The fines of the prohibition agents, added to the $10,000 the trial is said to have cost each, would represent their total salaries for fourteen years in the government service. The treasury department paid each $175 a month, the maximum dry sleuth wage.

The conviction of the two prohibition agents, for offenses committed while in the service, was the first in the history of the dry era in Illinois. A case of a former agent who extorted money while posing as an agent was recorded two years ago.

Convictions were voted by the federal jury after several weeks' trial of charges that the agents and the wine dealers conspired to violate the prohibition act. Co-defendants with Rumps, Bennett, and Ex were Herman Schiffman, Max Gerber, and Charles Koenigsberg, alleged lieutenants of Ex in the wine ring.

The trial was the first of a series growing out of the activities of the discovery of widespread abuses of the sacramental wine privileges of the Volstead act. More than 100 persons, including a number of rabbis, are expected to be hit in subsequent trials.

The next trial is scheduled to open Monday. Rumps, Bennett and Ex, with a new set of alleged conspirators, are named. In virtually every case now being prepared, the prohibition agents appear as co-defendants with persons charged with playing active parts in Chicago's former $5,000,000 wine racket.

The first case, like many of those scheduled for the future, was based on a plan which utilized fake Jewish congregations in obtaining permits to withdraw and distribute port, sherry, and muscat wine.

First Assistant District Attorney William P. Waugh directed the investigation which revealed that many wine dealers, if not posing as distributors for nonexistent congregations, were violating the law through faulty keeping of records.

The prosecution before Judge Cliffe was conducted by Assistant District Attorneys Klein and Duck.

Judge Cliffe set April 11 as the date of arguments for a new trial. If the motion of defense attorneys is denied sentence will be passed on that date.

This tells how you, too, may enjoy this greater comfort in winter. Mail the coupon and you may have further, important information on the subject.

Eleven engineers produced it

One of the world's oldest and largest manufacturers of oil-burning equipment have given to home owners a perfected oil-burning system. It is Kleen-Heet—simple, scientifically correct, completely reliable. There are sizes for large homes, small homes, and the homes in between.

It was too big a job for one man—or two—no matter how great their knowledge. Eleven leading engineers contributed their scientific knowledge and ability to the perfecting of this, the world's simplest completely automatic oil-burner!

Thousands upon thousands are in use today—heating their homes perfectly. In the sub-zero spells of mid-winter as well as in the milder cold of Fall and Spring. Plenty of heat, always.

Reduced winter ills

There's no work or thought necessary in maintaining the exact temperature you desire. That is controlled in a simple, trouble-free way. No dirt, no ashes or coal to bother with.

Temperatures are constant, uniform. This means better health. Authorities agree that 7 out of 10 winter ailments are caused by irregular, uneven heat. Such as coal gives.

No noise or odors annoy you in the operation of this modern, perfected Kleen-Heet. There is no dirt, no smoke. A very low-priced grade of oil is burned—of which you can always secure plenty. Coal shortages never worry you.

Proved reliability

With dirty, cumbersome coal removed—and with no ashes—your basement becomes a valuable, usable part of your home. Clean, pleasant extra room for recreation, work, or important storage use.

And Kleen-Heet is perfectly reliable. It is the simplest automatic oil-burner in the world, and is absolutely guarded against mischance in operation. It has been passed upon favorably by The Underwriters' Laboratories; New York City Board of Standards and Appeals; Massachusetts Dept. of Public Safety.

Facts about cost

The proper size Kleen-Heet plant for your home may be installed, quickly, in your present heating plant, without expensive alterations.

And it is a permanent improvement in your home—so that the reasonable cost, divided over many years, is ridiculously little when compared with the greater comfort, the freedom from labor and trouble Kleen-Heet means to all your family!

Low-priced oils are used as fuel—hence heating costs are comparable to coal. But you have great advantages over coal-burning: constant, even heat; freedom from dirt, ashes, coal-handling; and freedom from work and bother.

Now is the time to think—and to act. Mail the coupon below—or telephone—and get all the facts, at once. Then, as 78,836 other people have done, you will have robbed winter of at least half its discomforts. Clip the coupon right now.

There is a Kleen-Heet model exactly suited to any size home or building. Installed in present heating plant. Has only one moving unit. Scientific combustion chamber and air supply. Noiseless. Odorless. Automatic valve and safety trip-pan give double dependability and safety. Simplest automatic oil-burner in the world. Fully guaranteed.

SECESSIONISTS WIN VICTORY IN MEXICAN SCHISM

Reform Catholics Are Given Church.

BY JOHN CORNYN.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1925: By The Chicago Tribune.]

Mexico City, March 21.—Orders were issued today to turn over the famous temple of Santa Teresa to the members of the new Mexican Catholic church. Santa Teresa has been serving as government offices for some years and numerous attempts have been made by the Catholics to get possession.

The promises made under former President Obregon for its restoration to them were never kept. As Santa Teresa is in the center of the city and of prepossessing appearance and vast historic interest, the reform Catholics have a magnificent home.

Reform Element Warned.

With the order to deliver the church comes a recommendation by the government to the Mexican Catholics not again to disturb the public peace by attempting to seize other churches.

The church will be taken over Monday formally by the Knights of Guadalupe, who were organized in opposition to the Knights of Columbus.

It is reported semi-officially that other churches will be given to the Mexican Catholics in other cities of Mexico. The Knights of Guadalupe are preparing a campaign for the Mexican church throughout the republic. The Roman Catholics have issued literature, scattered over Mexico, urging the Roman Catholics to form a properly organized civic union to fight the secessionists and other enemies of Catholicism in Mexico.

Church Disorders Grow.

Mexico City, March 21.—[By the Associated Press.]—Additional disorders growing out of the schism in the Mexican Catholic church are reported in dispatches from Aguascalientes and Guadalajara.

In the former city a priest and a group of Catholics were arrested and fined for violating the law by organizing a procession and marching through the streets until dispersed by the police.

In Guadalajara three unknown persons attempted to set fire to the house of Archpriest Manuel Alvarado. Only the street door of the building was destroyed, the flames being extinguished in time to prevent them from spreading.

Vancouver Hotels Begin Sale of Beer by the Glass

Vancouver, B. C., March 21.—[By the Associated Press.]—Eighteen Vancouver hotels today began the sale of beer by the glass.

DENEEN'S VOTES SHOW HE WILL STAND BY THE ADMINISTRATION

Washington, D. C., March 21.—[Special.]—After having a taste of senatorial life during the brief but turbulent special session which ended Wednesday, Senator Deneen [Rep., Ill.] prepared to leave for Chicago on Monday.

CHARLES S. DENEEN.

Senator Deneen expects to remain in Chicago most of the time until congress opens in December.

The new Illinois senator, who took office a few days before the end of the Sixty-eighth congress, following the death of Senator McCormick, and then began his six year term on March 4, made no speeches during his two weeks in the senate.

In voting Senator Deneen showed that he intends to be strictly "regular" and support the administration. As a member of the judiciary committee, he had a hand in the Warren case and supported the nomination.

Senator Deneen has been made chairman of a subcommittee of the committee on privileges and elections to handle the contest over the seat of Senator Schall [Rep., Minn.], brought by former Senator Magnus Johnson [Farm-Labor, Minn]. Besides being assigned to the judiciary and elections committee, Senator Deneen has been appointed on the committees on agriculture and claims.

DAWES STARTS HOME AFTER 3 HECTIC WEEKS

Washington, D. C., March 21.—[Special.]—After a strenuous three weeks during which he astounded the country by boarding the senate in its sacred chamber in defiance of hallowed traditions and kept his name on the front pages longer than any other Vice President in the history of the country, Gen. Charles G. Dawes returned to Evanston today.

At the station to see him off were many of his old friends who wished him good luck in his promised fight this summer on the rule in the senate that permits filibustering.

Before leaving for the union station Mr. Dawes dropped in on several friends at the department buildings and stopped a few minutes at the White House, where he conferred with the secretary to the President. As he left the executive offices, White House reporters bombarded him with questions about his summer plans.

"After two weeks on the hill, do you still think you can persuade the senators to do away with the filibuster rule?" one reporter asked.

Vice President Dawes smiled. "Good-by," he replied.

HARRY O. STOKES' WIFE IS GRANTED DECREE, ALIMONY

Harry O. Stokes, president of the White-Stokes company, food products manufacturers, simply packed up and left his wife, Mrs. Minnie M. Stokes, she declared yesterday before Judge Joseph Sabath as she accepted a divorce and nearly $200,000 in alimony.

The packing occurred over two years ago in Sept., 1922, declared Mrs. Stokes, who lives at 5529 Hyde Park boulevard. They had been married nearly thirty years, she said.

Strenuous efforts to cloak the case in secrecy were made, but Judge Sabath ruled that the case, as all others, must run the usual course through his court, and so it came to notice.

Stokes did not appear in court, but was represented by counsel, who declared they had no wish to contest the hearing. The alimony settlement was arranged out of court, and submitted to Judge Sabath for approval.

It provides for the payment to Mrs. Stokes of $32,000 in bonds; real estate worth $10,000; stock worth $25,000, and insurance in the sum of $15,000.

A block of 1,042 shares of stock in the White-Stokes company of a reported par value of $104,200 is placed in trust, the income to be paid to Mrs. Stokes during her lifetime.

Upon her death the trust income reverts to the only daughter, Mrs. Mabelle J. Earl, and her children, Jane and Betty Earl.

Ask Tribune to Aid in Search for Missing Youth

An appeal was made to THE TRIBUNE yesterday to locate a missing youth for the sake of a mother who is near death from grief due to his absence. Ernest Relaford, 16 years old, the youth, has been missing four months from his home at 237 Highland avenue, Indianapolis, Ind. The youth is believed to be employed in Chicago or another city under an alias.

And here is another reason why this is Chicago's most popular dining place and feeds approximately 2 million people a year

North American portions are so big that 2 people often share them and thus cut dining costs in two

Instead of following the custom of other high class restaurants and hotels the North American Restaurant makes no extra charge for portions shared by two people. And we purposely make them so big that usually they are ample for two. So that, by sharing portions with a companion, you can practically cut your dining costs in half.

A splendid example of this is the delicious Chicken a la King which you get here any time from 11 in the morning until midnight. The portion is usually plenty for two people. In size and quality it is equal, and often better than that for which you will pay around $1.25 in most places. Yet our price is only 65 cents.

Even our cuts of pie are frequently enough for two people. That's unusual, we know. Yet you often see two people sharing one piece of pie here—something you never see in any other dining place. All of which is another reason why it pays to "serve yourself" here.

Among our other quality items at low prices are:

Whole Baby Lobster fresh from the sea, tender and sweet with melted butter and chili sauce
Boiled (cold) 90c
Broiled (hot) $1

Halibut and Peas: The portion is usually enough for two people 40c
Pork Tenderloin: 45c
Fried Chicken: Premium chicken with bacon and cream gravy or giblet sauce. Dark meat . . 55c
White meat 65c

And for Breakfast:—
Honey Waffles: With 3 strips of bacon or Mickelberry's Old Farm sausage, butter and pure maple sap or honey 25c
Bacon and Eggs: Two fresh eggs, fried in butter and 4 strips of bacon 30c
(To order from 7 a. m. to midnight)

You Remember The Man In Jail

His attorney said "they can't put you in jail". But he was in.

Some say that Auburn cannot build as good a car for the money as the large quantity-producers.

But it's here — The Auburn 8-Eighty-Eight.

Any dealer who interprets this as a challenge is welcome to a comparison of any and all points; engineering, materials, workmanship, performance, comfort or body design.

How can Auburn do it?

Because Auburn's only purpose is to see how well they can build, not how many.

Because Auburn is financially sound—free from high finance and stock speculation; no bonded indebtedness; no inflation!

Because there are many fallacies in the claims of economy due to volume production.

Because Auburn, or any of its officials have no affiliations or financial interest in companies manufacturing parts. Therefore our engineering department is free to select the best quality units which the market affords without interference from men higher up.

There are other "becauses" but they are not as interesting as the car itself.

All owners of these finer, exclusive types of cars, know the difference between the unusual and the commonplace—they know what this difference means in pride of ownership, in better service and in economy of investment over a longer period of time.

We have only one "selling argument"—see, study, and drive the new Auburn-8 Eighty-Eight yourself. If it does not sell itself, we will not try to.

GOOD WILL.

The whole difficulty is to gain good will—to keep it is easy.
When a business is started, an attempt is made to gain the confidence of the public. This favor is hard to attain, as the people have to be shown.
After the confidence is won, a careful guidance of policy and service will preserve it. Wise men know that the way is long on the Road of Service unless we get a lift from Favor.
The old established stores have gained the good will of the public and through hard work and constant watching have been able to keep it.
Otherwise, would they endure?

CONSTANTINOPLE, March 21.—The Princess Chivekiar of Egypt, who named the former Mrs. John Spreckels II. of San Francisco, now Princess Suad Chakir Bey, as corespondent in her suit for divorce from Capt. Selym Bey several months ago, was granted a decree today. She left for Paris immediately to undergo an operation for appendicitis.

PRINCESS SUAD. [P. & A. Photo.]

The princess, who is the former wife of King Fuad, failed to prove that her husband and the American woman acted improperly during a motorboat trip to Prinkipo on Dec. 31.

The divorce was granted on the basis of a letter which Capt. Selym gave his wife a year ago, after she had learned of his relations with other women, in which he agreed to give her a divorce if she at any time in the future discovered he was having questionable relations with another woman.

A Bit of Turkish Law.

"As adultery is illegitimate, the preliminaries to an act of adultery also are illegitimate," was the extraordinary statement of Princess Chivekiar's lawyer in summing up the case.

"For Capt. Selym to promenade with a strange woman in a lonely place after nightfall is not legitimate in Turkish civil or religious law," the judge announced in giving the princess a divorce.

American Asks Damages.

Princess Suad started a damage suit against Princess Chivekiar for striking her and taking her fur coat as evidence when she debarked from the motorboat on her return to Constantinople with Capt. Selym, but the case was postponed.

Capt. Selym went to Cannes when his wife started suit for divorce. He is now living on former Kaiser William's yacht, the Meteor, which is now called the Pharaon.

The Turkish civil court treated the American woman with fairness.

New Quebec Quake

Quebec, Canada, March 21.—[By Associated Press.]—An earthquake of such intensity as to set buildings trembling and frighten the populace, visited today the region where the more severe quake of three weeks ago is believed to have had origin.

It occurred between 10:24 and 10:26 a. m. and lasted only a few seconds. It was most noticeable in the St. Lawrence and Saguenay valleys, in the parishes of Baie St. Paul, Murray Bay, St. Simeon, Limiolou, St. Roch, Loretteville, Charlebois, and St. Sauveur.

Telephone service was disrupted. No persons were injured and the property damage was small.

GREEK CABINET AT FUNERAL OF SLAIN AMERICAN

Athens, March 21.—[By the Associated Press.] — Premier Michalakopoulos, cabinet ministers and two former premiers were among the notable personages who attended the funeral services held here today for Dr. John Logan of Gainesville, Ga., who died March 18 of wounds received when he was attacked recently by bandits at Arta, Southern Epirus.

The U. S. minister, Irvin Laughlin, and a large number of the American colony in Athens, as well as every prominent archaeologist in Greece, both foreign and native, also attended. Wreaths were sent by the Greek government, the American Near East Relief organization and the American school of Archaeology.

Dr. Logan's body will be buried temporarily in the local mausoleum, pending instructions from his relatives in America.

Raid Warehouse; Find Alcohol, Booze, Wine

Prohibition agents who last Wednesday night raided a warehouse, at Erie and Kingsbury street, in search of a quantity of alcohol rubbing fluid, yesterday announced that while searching about the warehouse they came across sixty-nine barrels of wine, 17,150 gallons of alcohol, and a quantity of booze and cordials. They also discovered 4,750 cases of the rubbing fluid.

DIES FROM FALL DOWNSTAIRS.

Eugene O'Neil, 26, 6722 South Loomis street, died yesterday from a fractured skull which he suffered when he fell downstairs at 301 West 23d street, March 8.

U. S. ENDANGERED BY EFFEMINACY, FISKE DECLARES

Attacks Wilson's Policies Before the War.

President, withdrawing his request, and the President never went out to target practice. Some time after that I spoke of this incident to ex-President Roosevelt. 'That explains many things,' said he. 'The man is a physical coward.' I answered that it seemed to me that it was merely a case of nerves.

Didn't Realize Duties.

"I am still of that opinion; and it seems to me to give the basic cause of Mr. Wilson's conduct as commander in chief of the army and navy. You remember that the first duty of the President, as prescribed in the constitution of the United States, is, 'He shall be commander in chief of the army and navy.' Yet Mr. Wilson seemed to consider that it was his last duty. In fact, until he realized, early in 1917, that we should have to go into the war he showed little, if any, appreciation of the fact that he had any duties whatever in connection with the army and navy.

"As Mr. Wilson was a man of intelligence, it is inconceivable that he should have reached this state of mind by a process of reasoning. He must have reached it by yielding to his feelings. Many a man reaches a state of mind, and adopts a course of conduct in consequence of that state of mind, by merely yielding to his feelings. Sometimes this means yielding to temptation.

Nervous Horror of War.

"Now, if a man's nervous system is very weak, he is unduly sensitive to noise, confusion, and unpleasant matters of all kinds. As war includes all of these things, he becomes unduly sensitive to even the idea of war. He comes to feel a nervous horror of war, from which he easily passes to the belief that war is wrong. It is easy to believe that a thing is wrong if you do not like it.

"Now, Mr. Wilson had led a life that was almost totally scholastic, with the natural result that his nervous system had become weak. This made even the thought of war obnoxious to him. This, by a natural association of ideas, made the army and navy obnoxious to him. The result was an attitude towards army and navy officers which was almost hostile, and was the exact reverse of the attitude that one would naturally expect from their commander in chief.

"This attitude he maintained until he realized that he should have to enter the war, and that it would be on army and navy officers that he would have to rely, to save the country from the results of the unpreparedness that he himself had caused, in spite of their remonstrances.

"Note the difference between him and President Roosevelt. As a boy, Theodore Roosevelt had been extremely delicate nervously; so much so that he was really a physical coward. Instead of yielding to this, he combated it with all the force of his will and finally conquered it. To accomplish this, he resorted to physical exercises of all kinds and even took up the life of a cowboy on the western plains.

"Now, of all the foes of healthy nerves, on the other hand, the greatest single foe is effeminacy. By continually trying to enjoy the soft things of life and shirk the hard things, the hard things are made to become increasingly distasteful. No person and no people who repulse into effeminacy can endure hardness; and inability to endure hardness has been the direct cause of all the downfalls of all the great nations of the past.

Proved by History.

"Every great nation, without any exception whatever, that amassed wealth and lived for a long period in peace, became effeminate and ceased to practice the exercises and the self-denials needed to maintain a virile condition. The result was that a poorer but more virile nation conquered it and seized its wealth.

"Now please do not imagine that this is a small danger to your country, or a distant one. It is a great danger, and actually present at the moment. To realize this, all you have to do is notice the difference in the bearing of the young men that you see in the streets today, as compared with that of the young men who came back from the war.

"All you have to do is walk down 5th avenue and note that our grandest avenue is almost monopolized by gaudy fashion shops, in which women gratify their supreme ambition, by buying excessively expensive jewelry and clothes. All you have to do is to watch the dancing any evening in any hotel, in any city."

Admiral Fiske discussed the underlying causes of war.

"During the twenty years ahead of you it is clear that one of the most important factors in external politics will be an increasing foreign trade," he said. "This means increasing liability of conflict with competing nations because of the enormous amount of money involved. This means increasing probability of foreign war.

"I am not prophesying; I am merely pointing out that the increasing volume and importance of foreign trade are making it probable that wars on the ocean will be much more frequent and tremendous in the future than they have been in the past.

Force Always Needed.

"Now, in order that the United States shall be able to take her rightful part in this foreign trade, something more than mere intelligence will be needed. He must have a realization of the fact that force is needed, always has been needed, and always will be needed, to support one's rights.

"This being the case, the utmost we can do is to conduct our national affairs in such a way as to avoid armed conflict so long as armed conflict is avoidable, and yet in such a way that, if a conflict comes, we shall enter it on at least equal terms with our adversaries. This means that we must always maintain a state of reasonable preparedness for war."

NEW ANTISEPTIC CALLED SUCCESS AS DISEASE FOE

Baltimore, Md., March 21.—[Special.]—Successful results in treatment of disease by hexylresorcinol, the powerful new antiseptic, were made public today by its discovered, Dr. Veader Leonard, chairman of the committee of the international antiseptics of the National Research council.

Hexylresorcinol is fifty times more active than carbolic acid in its power to kill disease germs in the genito-urinary tract. Dr. Leonard's work was carried on at Johns Hopkins.

Three types of disease germs, staphylococcus, streptococcus and bacillus coli, Dr. Leonard said, have been combatted successfully by the antiseptic. The first two, he declared, gave in after the treatment ranging from two to nineteen days, but the third, bacillus coli, a germ which infests the large intestine, requires more patient effort, since its point of origin is not subject to the local action of hexylresorcinol.

The effect of hexylresorcinol, Dr. Leonard said, was to combine with secretions of the kidneys and make those secretions themselves antiseptics. This, he declared, was true as long as the secretions were acid in character.

As hexylresorcinol is an irritant to the stomach, it is put up in olive oil solution in a gelatinous capsule.

$1,000 A BANDIT! ILLINOIS TO PAY IT IF BILL WINS

Senator Asks $100,000 to Protect Banks.

BY PARKE BROWN.

Springfield, Ill., March 21.—[Special.]—Wanted—100 bank robbers; price $1,000 each; deliver to state of Illinois, dead or alive.

State Senator Harold C. Kessinger of Aurora will introduce in the general assembly this week a bill to appropriate $100,000 in rewards for a finish fight against bank robbery in Illinois.

His proposal is that this amount shall be set up as a fund for the biennium, thus making $50,000 available this year and the same amount next year to be paid out in sums of $1,000 each as rewards for the capture or killing of holdup men who attack banks of the state.

Would Discourage Visiting Yeggs.

On this basis the maximum catch would be 100 robbers in two years and Senator Kessinger believes that a bag of that sort would clean up the state, not only of all the bad men now active here but also of any newcomers. Awards would be made by a board consisting of state officers.

While a few years ago bank robberies were confined almost entirely to the larger cities, automobiles and hard roads have extended the field of operations into the smaller communities and even into semi-rural sections. The number of small town banks raided in the last year has aroused so many districts that Senator Kessinger believes it certain the $100,000 will be voted.

Police Bill to Committee.

Advocates of the state police bill are expected to support Senator Kessinger's appropriation. It is probable that the military affairs committee of the senate, headed by Senator John S. Brown, Monmouth, will hold a hearing on the Dunlap police bill on Wednesday. The author, Senator Henry M. Dunlap, is confident the committee will act favorably on it and that senate concurrence will be obtained in the following two weeks.

WIFE DIVORCES O. N. CALDWELL OF OAK PARK

Oliver North Cadwell, 55, long a member of the engineering firm of H. W. Caldwell & Son company, was divorced yesterday by Mrs. Amelia T. Caldwell of Oak Park, who charged habitual drunkenness. They were married twenty-eight years ago and have one son, Wiley North Caldwell, 24.

The bill, filed by Attorney Edward C. Kohlsaat, asked that the Caldwells be at liberty to marry again, and divorced as though they never had been married. Judge George Fred Rush granted the divorce. An alimony settlement was arranged out of court.

New Scandals?

LONDON, March 21.—[By the Associated Press.]—That part of the English public which is interested in the more piquant doings of Mayfair already is looking forward to the ending of the Dennistoun case early next week and is wondering what is coming next in the line of fashionable court proceedings.

While the rules of English courts forbid newspaper revelation of the details of cases in advance, it has been intimated that unless a settlement is reached shortly there will be another "society trial" within the near future, and while the names are not mentioned it is said that persons of higher rank than any of those involved in recent sensational cases will appear and that titled celebrities will enter the witness box. It also is intimated that the persons involved will not be confined to residents of the British isles.

Meanwhile the greatest interest is centered in the winding up of the Dennistoun trial, a verdict being expected from the jury on Monday or Tuesday. The plaintiff's counsel is expected to sum up on Monday morning, presenting the case of Mrs. Dorothy Muriel Dennistoun, who is suing her former husband, Lieut. Col. Ian Onslow Dennistoun, now the husband of the dowager countess of Carnarvon, for money Mrs. Dennistoun claims she loaned him before their divorce.

Informed that persons at the poor farm at Oak Forest were buying liquor from saloons near the institution Sheriff Hoffman sent seventeen deputies to raid every place in the town. Two places yielded booze, and the owners were arrested.

MURDER AGENT IN TONG WAR IS HELD TO JURY

John V. Clark, who confessed that he was paid $100 for each Chinese he murdered, was held to the grand jury yesterday by Judge Howard Hayes on charges of assault to kill and conspiracy to kill.

Clark told the police that he received $2,000 in all from Willie Wong, alleged paymaster of the Hip Sing tong, 503 South Clark street. Wong and two companions, Joe Chan and Eddie Wong, were also held over on the same charges.

Tom Kee, 158 North Ashland avenue, and Sam Sing, 1021 Blue Island avenue, told of being assaulted and shot at by Clark and his Chinese confederates.

Says He's Crowe Aid; Is Fined $200 and Costs

It cost John Walsh, 25 years old, 4322 Kenmore avenue, $200 and costs yesterday to assert that he was an investigator for State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe. Policeman John Pillebon found Walsh early Saturday morning at 34th and State streets. Walsh said he was doing a "little investigating for Crowe." Pillebon demanded Walsh's credentials. Walsh demanded Pillebon's credentials. The policeman took Walsh to the station. Judge Joseph W. Schulman decided Walsh had been intoxicated.

TURK WAR CLOUDS ABOVE MOSUL GROW BLACKER

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

CONSTANTINOPLE, March 21.—The Turk threat against Mosul is growing more formidable daily.

With encouragement from the bolshevists and Wahabites, Mustapha Kemal Pasha has decided to fight rather than accept an unfavorable decision from the League of Nations on the Mosul question. A powerful army of 75,000 is assembling at Kurdistan, under Gen. Kemeledine Samy Pasha, ostensibly to crush a few thousand miserable rebels, but really to parade the Turk military power as a polite notice, to Great Britain particularly, that Turkey is resolved to have its share in Mosul.

The bolsheviki, who are continually urging the Turks to throw out the British from Mesopotamia, have promised arms, munitions, airplanes and petrol. Angora took a significant step yesterday in approving the government's urgent project to send two battalions to guard the Mosul frontier.

Kemal has chosen Gen. Kemeledine Samy Pasha as commander in chief because he is one of the ablest and most forceful of officers. Gen. Kemeledine resigned from the ambassadorship to Germany today. He is forbidden to exempt or excuse a single officer mobilized with the classes for any reason.

The general staff not only has mobilized the youngest classes in more than half of Anatolia, but is mobilizing animal transport everywhere.

PROVES THEORY, BUT BOY GOES BACK TO MOTHER

Parent Who Beat Lad Gets Him Back.

Miss Marie O. Anderson, assistant state's attorney, yesterday proved her case but lost her ward when Judge William L. Morgan returned 7 year old Jackie Nelson to his mother.

Miss Andersen proved that she could handle the boy for two weeks without resorting to the hickory stick method, having accepted a dare from the boy's stepfather.

Jackie proved that in spite of the beatings that left his body covered with welts and abrasions, he still loved his mother with all the devotion of which a 7 year old is capable.

Witnesses Tell of Treatment.

No sooner had he been admitted to the courtroom than, catching sight of his mother, he went to her and stood smiling up into her face, whispering to her while she was found guilty, through the testimony of several witnesses, of having abused him to a degree said by Charles McDonough, humane officer, to be unequaled in his twenty years' experience.

A solemn consultation between Judge Morgan and Jackie, in which the boy whispered his willingness to accompany his mother, prefaced the decision of the court.

So Jackie has gone home with his mother, and she has gone on a year's probation, during which time a violation of probation will incur a $200 fine and a sentence in the House of Correction.

"I realize," Judge Morgan said, "that children need discipline, but you have been too severe. Find some other method of controlling the boy."

Kindness Theory Wins.

"I've had letters from Maine and from California about Jackie," Miss Andresen said, watching the boy leave the courtroom clinging to his mother's hand, "and I've proved my theory that children can be governed by kindness. For one case like Jackie's that is brought to light there are hundreds we never hear of. I hope it may make a difference in Jackie's future."

DRY AGENT RUNS BEER; HIS CHIEF ISN'T SURPRISED

Harrison, N. J., March 21.—[United Press.]—Surprised while transferring 2,500 cases of beer from motor trucks to freight cars, twelve men, including Clyde Chessman, New York prohibition agent, were arrested here today on charges of illegal possession and transportation of liquor.

One man was slightly wounded in an exchange of shots with police.

Informed of Chessman's arrest, R. Q. Merrick, divisional enforcement chief of New York, said:

"I'm sorry, but in a way I'm not surprised."

U. S. LINERS ARE MYSTERY SHIPS TO ARGENTINES

Hazy Operation Swings Trade to British.

BY JOSEPH PIERSON.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1925: By The Chicago Tribune.]

BUENOS AIRES, March 21.—American vessels are the mystery ships of South America. "Flying Dutchmen," an Argentine shipping agent says. All except one line are owned by the shipping board, it is said, but who runs them? Munson line officials say they run the S. S. Western World and its sister ships, but why then are they called the Pan-American line? The Munson line says it gets the cargoes. Why then the fine offices and ample personnel of the United States shipping board offices in Buenos Aires?

Why do the Munson line ships carry more officers and larger crews than any other ships of like tonnage? Here is a young Harvard student, who never has been on a ship before, wearing the uniform of an officer and drawing $150 a month and found.

Have "Phantom Crews."

On the other hand, here is the only independent American line, owned, operated, and cargoed by a big steel products corporation in the United States. One of its ships carries passengers, but in proportion to its tonnage it has less than half the officers and crew of the shipping board vessels.

"The fact of the matter is," a Yankee skipper says, "that these shipping board boats are manned by a phantom crew. First there is the real crew, about 60 per cent of the total having berths aboard. Then there is the 40 per cent which ought to be paying fares. But in addition to this there is ashore the business firm which seems at times to be running the ships. Then there is the phantom corporation with high salaries that no seaman ever got and finer offices than any steamship line ever had. I mean the shipping board. Who runs the ships? Ask me an easy one."

British Get Business.

Figures obtained at the office of the United States commercial attaché in Buenos Aires indicate that in 1923 only 38 per cent of the exports of the United States to Argentina was carried in American bottoms. Just how much of the other 62 per cent were British bottoms could not be ascertained, but almost one-half [45 per cent] of the ship tonnage arriving in Buenos Aires in 1923 was British.

In 1924, British arrivals in the port of Buenos Aires increased to 46.75 per cent of the total tonnage. In 1913 the figure was 59 per cent. Meanwhile the arrivals of American ships in Buenos Aires by tonnage steadily has fallen from 16.25 per cent of the total in 1920 to 6.75 per cent in 1924. These figures are from the statistics of the United States consulate in Buenos Aires. Therefore, the phantom management of the United States merchant fleet is rapidly running it out of existence in the southern hemisphere.

JAILED 2,149 DAYS FOR REFUSING TO SUPPORT WIFE

Elizabeth, N. J., March 21.—Vitelo Baginolo, 79, after spending 2,149 days in jail for refusing to support his wife, was forced to accept his freedom today by a court order signed by County Judge Alfred Stein.

Baginolo was first sent to jail in 1919 for six months. At the end of that time he was asked if he would support his wife.

"I will not" he replied. So they put him back again. At intervals thereafter the same thing occurred until officials decided that it was too expensive.

Baginolo, leaving under protest, went back to live with his wife.

"But I won't support her," were his last words to Warden Dyer.

GIVE SHEPHERD CASE TO PUBLIC, OLSON URGES

Moves to Put All Evidence Before the Inquest.

his chair but his attorneys paid no attention to him as Faiman told of asking for $100,000 for his part in the plot against McClintock.

Shepherd Enters Courtroom.

The man who was bequeathed $1,000,000 by the 21 year old youth in whose home he lived was brought into court by two deputy sheriffs. These acted as his guards during the hearing, and when court adjourned he was led into the county jail again.

State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe asked for a moment's reply. He was aided by Assistant State's Attorneys George E. Gorman, John Sbarbaro, Joseph P. Savage, and Harold Levy, and he informed the court that the burden of proof was upon the defendant to show cause why he should be admitted to bail.

Faiman repeated his former statements, relating his meeting with Shepherd and his conferences with him in loop hotels.

He said he had given Shepherd all the information he had on the subject of typhoid fever and typhoid cultures. As he mentioned each of the meetings he had with Shepherd Attorney Stewart would ask:

"Did he at that time mention McClintock? Did he say he was going to murder any one with the germs? Did he give you any money?"

Later Visits Described.

The answers were "no" until Faiman reached one of the later visits. Then the questioning and answers were as follows:

Q.—Did you meet him again? A.—About a week and a half later at the same place. We went into the grill again and the conversation started out about Billy McClintock and Miss Pope. He said he thought they were going to get married soon. He said McClintock was becoming of age. He said he would have the will arranged suitable to him. I told him about the girl, to consider her, too. He said it would be easy enough to use some of the typhoid cultures.

Faiman continued.

"We spoke about the will and he said he could make it out suitable to himself. I asked him more about the history of the boy and he told me the father was killed when the boy was 2 years old and that his mother then lived with them. He said when the boy was about 4 or 6 years old the mother died and his wife was made guardian. That's about all that was discussed at that time."

No Mention of Money.

Q.—Was anything said about money at that time? A.—No.

Q.—Did you ask for any, or did he offer you any? A.—No.

Q.—Did he say that he planned to give any of the cultures to the boy? A.—I thought of it afterward, but nothing specific was said.

Q.—When was the next meeting? A.—About the 1st of November, 1924, in my office.

Q.—When you left him at the last meeting was it arranged to have another? A.—Not definitely, he said he would call me up. He came down to my office.

Q.—Did you ever ask him where he was experimenting with these cultures? A.—I understood at his home.

Q.—Did he tell you that? A.—Yes.

Q.—What was the date of this meeting? A.—Between Nov. 1 and 6.

"The charge here is murder," he began. "If this were a case of shooting or stabbing there might be some contention that it was the result of a fight and that the defendant acted in self-defense or in defense of his habitation.

"But this is a case of murder by poison and the only defense that can be raised is that the defendant didn't do it. All other defenses are eliminated. If he is guilty this certainly is a capital case."

Judge Olson wished to be heard as a friend of the court but the defense objected and he was compelled to speak through State's Attorney Crowe, who then said:

"I call your honor's attention to the fact there has been a coroner's inquest in this case and all these witnesses, excepting Faiman, were subjected to cross-examination. The defendant, Shepherd, refused to testify, claiming his constitutional rights."

Stewart Questions Faiman.

Attorney Stewart called Faiman as a witness.

"He is your witness," Prosecutor Crowe reminded Stewart. "You are vouching for him."

"Not me," Stewart replied. "I suggest the court examine him."

The squabble was settled when Stewart proceeded to question Faiman. He asked Faiman if he had signed an immunity waiver before testifying in the grand jury room, but Judge Hopkins ruled the witness need not answer.

Faiman said he was a graduate of the St. Louis College of Physicians and Surgeons, but admitted he had no license to practice medicine. He is president of the National University of Sciences, he testified, and when Attorney Stewart asserted that plumbing, dancing, etc., were taught there Faiman said, "That's a lie."

Confine Questions to Crime.

Stewart persisted and State's Attorney Crowe objected with:

"He is presumed to be guilty on this motion. All that Mr. Stewart should ask this witness is what he knows of the crime."

"Isn't it applicable to disclose who it is says this man Shepherd is a murderer?" asked Stewart.

"Isn't that the province of a jury?" the court suggested, and Stewart was allowed to proceed.

Q.—Tell us what happened at this meeting. A.—Shepherd came in and said there was something in the files that was of interest to him. He asked if we kept a file, and I said we keep card and letter files. I said there is the letter file, and motioned over to him to look at the file. He said there was something of great importance to him, and he turned to his initial and found the letter and folded it up and put it in his pocket.

Q.—Do you know which one he took? A.—The one about the course.

Q.—Is that all that was said. A.—He handed me $50 and said, "forget about it." He said I should not know anything. I thought it was a kind of odd procedure. The witness added:

"If any one would have asked for any of the letters I would have given them to them, but his actions drew an air of suspicion and I asked about it. He said for me to forget I ever saw him. I told him I did not want to get mixed up in any affair because I had a school and a lot of money invested and it was paying pretty good. He said the will was arranged the way he wanted it, and he seemed disturbed and excited. He said he would see me soon and let me know how things were coming."

Agree on Faiman's Share.

Q.—Was anything said about the will? A.—I said I ought to have some interest, about one-quarter of it. He laughed it off. I said I thought it was worth a couple of hundred grand anyhow. Finally we compromised on a $100,000, if everything went along all right.

Q.—When was the next time you saw him?

A.—The last week in November, on a Wednesday.

Q.—Tell us about that, doctor.

A.—Well, I just saw him for a little while. We did not even go and sit down. We went into a kind of a blind lobby. He told me Billy was very ill. I asked him if he called a doctor and he told me he had given him some pills, and had called a doctor, Stolp, wasn't it? We talked about treatment. I told him that a cathartic would aggravate the condition and he said he had given him cathartic pills.

Q.—Have you told all about it now? A.—The substance of it.

Q.—Did you hear from him? A.—Yes, over the phone, four or five days after the death, he called me at my office.

Q.—What day of the week was it? A.—The end of the week.

Q.—What was said. A.—I asked him if any of the help knew about the death, and he said no, none of the immediate house knew anything. He said he was going away in a few days and would not be able to see me.

Crowe Objects to More.

At this time Mr. Crowe objected to any further questioning of the witness.

"They have reached the point of the death, and any further questioning is a fishing expedition to get the state's testimony," said the prosecutor, who, however, was overruled.

Q.—Did you see him again?

A.—The inquest started Dec. 23. It was a few days after when he called me on the phone and I told him that it looked pretty warm. He said no one had any idea; this hearing won't amount to anything. He said everything would be all right and as soon as it was over he was going south for a while.

Then Objections Are Sustained.

Q.—You told the same story before Shepherd in the state's attorney's office, and what did he say to you?

Prosecutor Crowe objected, and was sustained.

Q.—Shepherd said you were lying, didn't he?

Another objection was sustained.

Q.—You are the same Charles C. Faiman as the one named in this indictment as a co-defendant?

A.—I guess I am.

Q.—Has the capias been served on you?

Objection was sustained.

Q.—Where are you living?

An objection was sustained.

Stewart States a Point.

"I offer to show that this witness is not in the county jail, where he belongs, but is living at the Briggs house, and his expenses are being paid by the state," Stewart said.

Q.—Have you been promised any immunity?

An objection by Crowe was sustained

Q.—Who were you first questioned by in reference to this case?

An objection was made and overruled, and the witness replied, "Judge Olson."

Q.—In your first statement you said you did not know Shepherd, didn't you?

A.—I didn't see him until a number of days after the inquest started.

Court adjourned until Monday, with Faiman still on the stand and the lawyers still ready to cite authorities on the question.

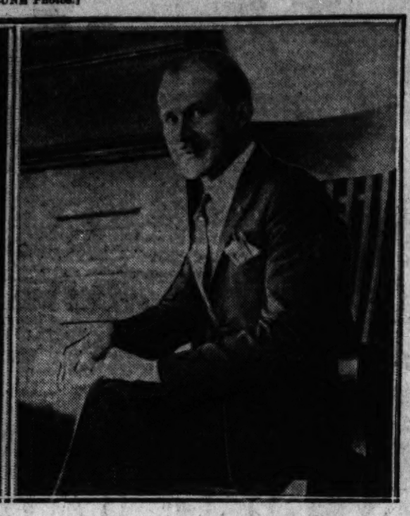
William D. Shepherd, indicted for the murder of his millionaire ward, William Nelson McClintock, as he appeared in court yesterday during hearing of his plea for release on bail.



C. C. Faiman, indicted with William Shepherd for the murder of William Nelson McClintock, was placed on the witness stand in Chief Justice Hopkins' court and questioned regarding previous confession.

MINE OWNERS FIND WAY TO PREVENT SMOKE

Improve Way to Burn Screenings.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

Transformation of nine screenings into a smokeless, sootless fuel of high heat value now has the attention of Illinois coal operators.

At a meeting yesterday of the Illinois-Indiana Coal and Coke committee, made up of traffic representatives of western trunk lines, it was announced that one corporation, with twelve mines in Franklin and Williamson counties of 50,000 to 60,000 tons daily capacity, has developed a method of treating its screenings.

By a process of low temperature distillation, it has been able to convert some of its screenings into a product that has as high heat value as anthracite and that can be sold at much less than the cost of anthracite of smokeless bituminous.

May Affect Chicago Problem.

It has a bearing on the abatement of Chicago's smoke nuisance which causes a property damage of more than $50,000,000 a year without considering the detrimental effect on health. It also bears on the rehabilitation of the mining industry in Illinois, which for some time has been on the rocks, due largely to the competition of the non-union field in West Virginia and Kentucky.

Screenings for a quarter century have been an increasing waste in Illinois mines. In twenty-five years screenings have grown from 19 to 50 per cent of the total output. More than half the coal hoisted now is dust and small stuff. It is sold for less than cost of production, the actual loss averaging about 50 cents a ton more.

The loss is ascribed to the fact that the increasing volume of screenings gives a surplus far beyond the consuming capacity of the industrial plants which are equipped to use them. What the mines lose on the pulverized output has to be made up on the prepared sizes, lump, furnace, and small egg, and the householder helps pay for the waste. Experts figure it adds a minimum of 50 cents a ton to domestic sizes.

Would Close Financial Leak.

If processing could be applied to all the screenings, it was pointed out, Illinois mines would be able to caulk up one of the great leaks in the industry. Dr. F. C. Hennold told the committee that twenty mines during the last four years have lost an average of $3,000,000 on screenings. On a movement of 4,900,000 tons in the nine months ended Dec. 31, 1924, the actual loss per ton was 50½ cents, or approximately $2,500,000.

Coal mining in Illinois has had an extended period of depression, largely to nonunion competition, and at present the southern coal fields of the state are operating at less than one-half normal output. It is figured that since last April they have run an average of not more than 130 days, and at no one time during the year were more than two-thirds of the mines in operation. Less than one-half of the mines are operating today, according to latest figures.

Yesterday's meeting of the traffic men was to consider the propriety of a bituminous lump coal rate on the new smokeless, sootless product from screenings.

Dr. Hennold estimates that if the freight rate is granted, the next five years will see the building of plants to cost $20,000,000 by the mine operators of Illinois, capable of converting at least half the mine screenings of Illinois into processed fuel.

National Anti-Spitting Week Starts Tomorrow

National anti-spitting week starts tomorrow. The Chicago Tuberculosis institute, the local organization affiliated with the National Tuberculosis association, financed by Christmas seals, is promoting the campaign in Chicago.

Spitting in public places, it points out, is prohibited by law. If all spitting was stopped, the institute says in a bulletin, the tuberculosis problem would be solved.

SECOND COUNCIL FIGHT GOES INTO HIGH THIS WEEK

Traction Issue Expected to Draw Big Vote.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

The second aldermanic campaign is going into high this week. In each of the fourteen wards where a second election was made necessary by the close contests of the February election, the candidates and their freinds are preparing to start the fireworks.

With traction the overwhelming issue on April 7 a big vote is expected to be brought out. The independents, or stay-at-homes, hold in their hands not only the transportation question but the fate of the aldermanic candidates.

Wards with Contests.

The contested wards, with the candidates, are as follows:

8—Ald. William D. Meyering against Edward Schneider.
11—Ald. Timothy A. Hogan against John P. Wilson.
12—Ald. Ernest J. Kunstmann against John G. Pelnch.
17—Robert E. Barbee against C. S. Kelly.
19—Ald. Donald S. McKinlay against Benjamin S. Wilson.
31—Ald. Stanley Adamkewics against Joseph T. Baran.
37—Ald. Wiley W. Mills against Otto Kasch.
39—Ald. Frank J. Tomczak against Frank R. Ringa.
40—Ald. Christ A. Jensen against John W. Chapman.
44—Albert F. Loescher against Richard C. Mazer.
47—Ald. Harry W. Klinke against John J. Haelles.
48—Francis L. Bostell against Willett H. Cornwell.
50—Ald. William H. Pentow against William F. Lippe.

Revised figures of the first aldermanic election show that an enormous number of voters, chiefly women, remained at home. In the Nineteenth ward, for instance, only 25 per cent of the voters went to the polls to choose an alderman.

How They Voted Before.

The voting in the contested wards was as follows:

	Men voting.	Men registered.	Women voting.	Women registered.
8	9,061	14,919	5,786	10,712
11	6,604	9,123	3,451	4,859
12	8,030	11,496	4,766	6,639
17	6,825	12,315	5,165	9,963
19	9,341	16,502	6,087	12,603
31	5,119	6,573	2,562	3,027
37	6,167	8,563	3,153	4,297
37	11,239	19,423	6,887	14,523
39	9,717	18,579	4,620	10,470
40	9,484	18,386	4,595	11,854
44	7,379	11,403	4,510	8,083
47	10,430	15,786	6,169	10,959
48	6,340	12,934	3,956	10,232
50	8,504	14,885	4,685	10,475

The city hall organization is interested chiefly in the eight wards where the sitting Democratic aldermen are threatened. The most interesting struggles will be in the north side wards, the Forty-fourth, Forty-seventh, Forty-eighth, and Fiftieth.

M. V. L. Issues Bulletin.

The Municipal Voters' league issued its first special bulletin on this election yesterday, stating that the election of Feb. 24 left the council weaker than ever, and that the April 7 election presents the only chance the voters will have for two years to improve the council.

"Ald. Donald S. McKinlay, Wiley W. Mills and William D. Meyering without question should be elected," the report states. "Robert E. Barbee would make a fine alderman for the Seventeenth ward, as well as for the city. John W. Chapman in the Fortieth, Albert E. Loescher in the Forty-fourth, John J. Hoellen in the Forty-seventh, former Senator Cornwell in the Forty-eighth, and former Ald Lippe in the Fiftieth are exceptionally well qualified.

Importance of One Vote.

"In the short time remaining before the election the voters should study the aldermanic situation carefully for themselves. One vote may decide an election, for these battles are close. Look beyond the immediate circumstances of the candidate. Forget whether he is Democrat, Republican or Socialist. Never mind what he thinks about the traction ordinance. Is he honest and capable? Has he enough energy to make his election worth while? Will he be his own boss and vote on public questions on their merits? Men who can stand such tests are the ones to send to the council."

"Ding," Cartoonist, Has Peritonitis, Doctors Find

Des Moines, Ia., March 21.—Jay N. [Ding] Darling, well known cartoonist, is suffering from peritonitis, it was reported at the hospital here today. Surgeons from Iowa City called for consultation with a local physician have not determined as yet upon the advisability of an immediate operation. While Darling's condition is still considered serious, a slight improvement was noted last night.

BY HOWARD ROBERTS.

Atlantic City's phenomenal swimming team, continuing the terrific pace set in the preliminaries, romped away with first honors in the tank events in the thirteenth annual interscholastic meet conducted by Northwestern university in Patten gym yesterday afternoon with a total of 27 points. The eastern preps not only more than doubled the score of Detroit Northern, their nearest competitor, but lowered the two relay records which they set Friday.

In the track events, Cedar Rapids, Ia., surprised the dopesters by winning the meet with comparative ease. The Iowa lads totaled 20 points. Oak Park and Evanston trailed with 15 and 13¼, while Hyde Park, last year's title holders finished well down on the list with only 7 markers. Three tank and two track marks fell during the meet.

Preps Beat College Record.

The ease with which the eastern swimmers outdistanced their rivals in a majority of the races shows them to be without question one of the greatest aggregations of prep tank stars ever gathered together, their work being superior to that of most college squads. Records seem to mean nothing to the youths from the boardwalk city.

The mark of 1:17 1-5 for the 160 yard relay set by the Jersey boys in the preliminaries was thought to be one which would stand for a long time. But the Atlantic City preps evidently didn't think so, for they immediately proceeded to chop it down to 1:16 3-5, more than two seconds faster than the conference record. The Northwestern relay quartet is the only college team which has ever surpassed that mark, the "four horsemen" of the Purple doing the distance in 1:16 in a dual meet with Illinois this winter.

Better More Marks for Fun.

The seaboard paddlers also set a new mark of 2:06 2-5 for the medley relay, breaking the old record of 2:07 3-10, which they set Friday. In an exhibition swim, staged after the regular events had been completed, the Atlantic City wonder squad, in search of further honors, bettered the interscholastic marks in the 400 and 500 yard relays. Their time in the former was 3:57 2-5, which bettered the old mark of 3:59 2-5 held by the same men. Their time for 500 yards was 4:58 2-5. The former mark of 6:24 1-5 was held by the Adam Smith high school of Erie, Pa.

Still another prep record was relegated to the discard when Walaitis of Detroit Northern churned his way through the forty yard free style event in 19, lowering the former mark of 19 1-5 set by Gaw of Duluth in 1921, and equaled by Dick Howell in 1922. The Detroit swimmer was high point man in the meet with ten markers to his credit.

Clip 880 Yard Track Record.

In the track events Gist of Hyde Park, running in the second heat of the 880 yard race, clipped a full second from the mark set by Stocking of Stanford in 1923, finishing in 2:04 2-5. The Blue and White runner ran a fine race, judging his pace perfectly and finishing with a burst of speed on the final lap which swept him to victory by twenty-five yards.

The last record to fall came in the final event, the four-fifths mile relay, when the Senn quartet, running two laps to a man, broke the tape in 3:18 1-5, knocking 1 1-5 seconds from the mark hung up by Deerfield a year ago.

The victory of Cedar Rapids in the track events came as a surprise to most of the fans who had picked Oak Park and Evanston as the two to fight it out for first place. The triumph of the Hawkeyes can be traced to the great work of Zvacek, who annexed nine points in the three closing events to pull his teammates out of the ruck. The big Hawk took first in the pole vault with a leap of 11 feet 3 inches, placed in the shot put, and fourth in the high jump.

Kennedy High Point Winner.

Kennedy of University High took down the medal for individual points, by winning both the high and low hurdles for a total of ten points. He accounted for all the markers scored by his school. Borsom of Hinsdale and Moody, the colored runner from Peoria, were other outstanding individual performers.

Retired to Champaign, coached by Harold Osborn, holder of the world's

PREPS BATTLE FOR TRACK TITLES IN PURPLE MEET

These husky high school athletes were winners in their various events in the national interscholastic meet yesterday in Patten gym. The picture on the left shows Gist of Hyde Park breaking the tape in the half mile and setting a new record. Next is Kennedy of University High, individual high point man and winner of both hurdle races. The lad just squeezing over the bar in the high jump is Robinson of Burlington, Ia., who won that event. At the right is Robbins of Deerfield about to hurl the shot in the effort which gave him first place in that event. [TRIBUNE Photos.]

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

Monroe, La., March 21.—[Special.]—There was plenty of speed on the White Sox today and they romped over Jack Lelivelt's St. Joseph club of the Western league on the latter's training grounds by a score of 9 to 1. The Sox were hitting in style, running the bases at top pace, hitting the dirt, pegging men out at the plate and doing all the things that come up in real battles.

It was the best showing the Sox have made in any of the exhibition games so far and indicated they are far advanced in condition, in fact just about ready to fight a championship battle. Boss Collins used three recruit pitchers in the affair with the idea of getting a line on them for future purposes.

"Dav" Wild, but Effective.

Joubert Davenport, the stalwart left hander, took the first three rounds, Kenneth Ash the next three and Milton Steengrafe the final three. Davenport displayed great stuff and did not allow a hit, but still was a trifle wild though it wasn't costly. He walked three men, one in each inning, but no one got anything that looked like a base hit. "Dav" slightly turned his ankle in running out a hit in the first inning and for a minute it looked as if he would have to quit, but he would not listen to it.

Ash wasn't quite so effective and allowed the one run to be scored in his final frame when two hits were bunched with an infield out. He allowed four hits all told one in each of his other two rounds, but he had splendid control, walking no one and always getting the ball over with plenty of stuff on it.

Sox Do Heavy Stick Work.

No runs were permitted by Steengrafe, but he was touched for five blows, four of them coming in the ninth inning, and yet not a run got home, because Bill Barrett turned loose one of his long distance pegs from left field and killed a man at the plate. Steengrafe appeared to have wonderful speed and was most effective in the seventh and eighth, but apparently eased up some in the ninth when his mates were eight runs to the good.

The Sox did some solid hitting in the game that was quite encouraging. They poled thirteen blows all told. Earl Sheely, with two doubles and a single in four times up, was the hitting chief, but Young Spencer Harris again smacked the ball like a big leaguer, getting two singles, a double and a walk in six times at the plate. Collins, Davis, and Crouse each poled a double and Bib Falk rammed out a couple of singles. There is no doubt about the Sox ability to knock the cover off the ball.

Happy Gus Hurls Today.

The Sox remained here tonight for another contest with Lelivelt's team tomorrow. So many people here know Happy Gus Foreman, that Collins wired him tonight to come on over and show himself in the game tomorrow. He had been left in Shreveport along with a squad of pitchers, Ray Schalk, and Harry Hooper. Tonight it was announced all over town that Happy Gus will pitch tomorrow and a park full of people is expected.

Yankees Help Oxford Beat Ancient Rival

LONDON, March 21.—[By the Associated Press.]—With ample American aid, Oxford defeated Cambridge by six victories to five in their fifty-seventh inter-varsity track and field competitions at Queens club today. Three of the six firsts scored by the Dark Blues were won by Americans, R. L. Hyatt, formerly of Harvard, capturing both the pole vault and the weight putting event, while W. E. Stevenson, ex-Princetonian, broke the tape in the quarter mile run, three yards ahead of D. G. A. Lowe, star of the Cambridge runners.

Records Fall; What About It?

Three inter-varsity records were broken, but two of these events, the pole vault and the 220 yard hurdles, have been contested only three years, so no great credit is taken by those who won them today because they did better than their predecessors.

But A. E. Porritt, the New Zealander who won the 100 yard dash in 9 9-10 seconds, accomplished something that seems to be of consequence in the long record of rivalry between Great Britain's two ancient universities. The Dark Blues have raced against the Light Blues over the 100 yard route since 1864, but never until this afternoon has one of them dashed the distance in less than 10 seconds. Even the great Abrahams of Cambridge, who defeated the best sprinters of the world at the Olympic games last summer, never got below 10 seconds.

Yank Wins Despite Weather.

Stevenson, former Princetonian, greatly impressed the Oxford supporters by his victory in the quarter mile. Lowe of Cambridge was thought likely to defeat the American, who obviously was not enjoying the uncomfortable weather. However, he overlook Lowe as they turned into the finish stretch and won with a lead of three yards in 51 seconds.

H. M. Cleckley, another American, was third in the 200 yard hurdles.

The pole vault, which still is a novelty to most English athletes, was an easy victory for two Americans, R. L. Hyatt, and C. B. Wright of southern California, who represented Oxford. Hyatt got over the bar at 11 feet 6 inches, but Wright failed to do so.

Porritt, the hero of the 100 yard dash, was defeated in both the low and high hurdles by Lord Burghley, of Cambridge.

This is Oxford's twenty-fifth victory in fifty-seven meets, Cambridge having won twenty-six, while six were ties.

SECOND AUTO RACER HURT ON TRACK DIES

San Francisco, Cal., March 21.—Ralph Johnson, Philadelphia and Los Angeles automobile racing driver, died in a hospital here today from injuries suffered late yesterday when the automobile he was testing out at Tanforan park plunged through a fence bordering the track.

He was one of several drivers who were "trying out" their cars in preparation for a series of automobile races to be held at the park tomorrow.

A short time before Johnson suffered his injuries William Reid, Los Angeles driver, was killed when his automobile ran off the track and capsized.

BY FRANK SMITH.

Los Angeles, Cal., March 21.—[Special.]—The Cubs almost won a ball game today, but finally succumbed to the Vernon Tigers, 5 to 4. The score would indicate that they were always in the racket, but all they could notch in the way of hits were six in the nine innings, three of which were gathered in the final round when they all but knotted the count.

For five innings the Cubs were unable to get the pill out of the diamond and no team can win ball games unless it compiles a few blows at the right time. Wee William Ludolph took up Weinert's burden in the sixth and held the Cubs hitless until the ninth, when Kerr, batting for Jonnard, hit safely to left.

Cubs Start Strong.

Poor hitting and a couple of sleepy errors on the part of Friberg were responsible for the defeat. The North siders started off as if they were going to clean up the locals. Adams first up in the opening round, sailed a double to center and after Heathcote had fanned, Statz shot a single to center and the sand dabs scored. Statz was caught overrunning first and Miller sent a puny grounder to second for third out.

Vernon knotted the count in its half. Moore singled to center, was sacrificed ahead by Wolfer and scored on Warner's double to left center.

The locals went ahead in the second. Finn sent a safety to center and advanced a base on one of Friberg's errors. Slade sent an easy grounder to the acting captain who gummed it in fancy style. Weinert tried to sacrifice Finn and Slade along, but forced the former at third. Moore was safe on Adams' error and scored along with Slade when Wolfer sent a safe one to center. Wolfer was forced at second for the third out by Warner.

Cubs Knot Count.

The Cubs tied it up in the third. Adams took one in the ribs and went to second on Heathcote's single. The boys pulled a double steal safely. Statz fanned and while Slade was throwing out Miller, Adams scored, while Heathcote went to third. Weinert wild pitched Cliff home and after Friberg was passed, Slade threw out Jonnard.

In Vernon's fourth, Friberg started things along by fumbling Slade's grounder. Ludolph sent a long single to center and Slade scored, Ludolph going to second on the throw in. Moore sacrificed Ludolph to third from where he scored on Wolfer's screaming triple to right. The next two men were easy outs.

The Cubs came to life in the ninth. Friberg sent a puny grounder to Ludolph and was thrown out. Kerr, batting for Jonnard, singled to left. Grimm shot one in the same direction and Pittenger followed suit. The bases were loaded and it looked as if the Cubs might at least tie up the game if they couldn't win it. O'Farrell, batting for Root, sent a long fly to center and Kerr scored. Adams wasn't equal to the task and lifted to center and the game was over.

IN the WAKE of the NEWS

NEW YORK GIANTS.

NEW YORK'S GIANTS will open the National league baseball season a month hence as favorites to win their fifth consecutive pennant.

Previous to 1924 no team in modern baseball ever had won four successive championships. Tradition was against such performance. Manager McGraw shattered that tradition. It is now his ambition to creat an all-time diamond record.

We have to go back to early history of the game to find performances equaling what the Giants already have accomplished, and those feats were recorded when competition was less keer.

In the old National association, which preceded the National league, Boston won the pennant in 1872-'73-'74-'75. In the American association, the St. Louis Browns, under the régime of Charles A. Comiskey, acquired the gonfalon in 1885-'86-'87-'88.

Those tenures, with that of the present Giants, stand as the record for all time in major leagues. No other teams have won more than three pennants in a row.

Staggering through to victory in a desperate finish last fall, the Giants, on paper, appear to have a better chance this year, for the law of averages would not accord them so many injuries and mishaps. Pittsburgh and Brooklyn appear their most formidable rivals.

Chicago's Cubs, with Maranville in the lineup, would have been at least dangerous. Without him, and with Friberg and Hollocher doubtful, the outlook is not rosy for first place.

Strange things happen in baseball. Washington won a world's pennant when most critics thought it would be lucky to finish in the first division of its own league. Perhaps a "dark horse" will tumble the Giants. Otherwise, they will set another new baseball record.

Vanished Days.

In the haze of summer days
Walked they through the meadows sweet:
Daisies bright, with petals white,
Grew 'mid grasses at their feet.
In the guise of Paradise
Came those days with love replete.

Fields are bare and life less fair,
Each heart filled with saddened pain.
Tearful eyes and sad good-bys,
Then that parting in the rain.
Oh, cruel fate, they'd met too late—
One must go and one remain.

Memories sweet of love complete,
Told in robins' roundelays;
Time of youth, long gone, forsooth.
Coming back with summer's haze.
Days wax old, and love, grown cold,
Feeds on thoughts of vanished days.

Miami Beach, Fla., March 21.—Louis Chevrolet, piloting Hialeah, emerged as winner of the Biscayne Bay speedboat races, which featured the closing day of Miami Beach midwinter regatta on Biscayne bay today. BY HOWARD MARTIN.

A do or die spirit coupled with some remarkable sharpshooting by one Leahy, enabled St. Mel Academy of Chicago, to remain in the running for the National Catholic High school basketball tournament championship at Loyola university last night. By overcoming Calvert Hall, of Baltimore, Md., 14 to 13, the local tossers qualified for the semi-finals this afternoon.

The other three teams which have something to say about dividing the championship spoils, are Aquinas Institute of Rochester, N. Y., Marquette University High of Milwaukee, Wis., and Catholic High of Decatur, Ind.,

Semi-Finals This Afternoon.

Aquinas and Marquette meet in the first semi-final at 3 o'clock, while St. Mel clashes with Catholic High in the other bracket an hour later. The two winners will tangle for the title at 9 o'clock and the two losers will meet for third place an hour earlier.

With the exception of Marquette each of the three other surviving quintets came out on top only after close, gruelling struggles which bristled with action. Aquinas lowered the colors of Rockhurst Academy of Kansas City, Mo., 21 to 18, Marquette trimmed St. Louis University High, 24 to 13, and Decatur eked out a 18 to 12 win over St. Viator Academy of Bourbonnais, Ill.

St. Mel Comes From Behind.

Keeping in the select four was a difficult task for St. Mel. Behind during a greater part of the game, save for a few minutes in the opening quarter, St. Mel displayed real gameness in finally coming out on top.

Elgin Takes State Basket Title, 27 to 15

Urbana, Ill., March 21.—[Special.]—Elgin won the state prep basketball title for the second straight year here tonight when, before 4,000 rabid fans, Champaign bowed to the Watchmakers in a hectic battle, 25 to 17.

Elgin got started first and kept the lead, although sometimes by only a one point margin. Champaign fought all the way, and the pace was terrific. Wells of Elgin was high point man with four field goals, Slavic and Mills following with 7 and 6 points. McCallister got three baskets to lead Champaign's attack, but his poor floor game and desire to shoot probably lost for his team. Elgin's cool front and steady offensive were the deciding factors.

Canton earned third place in the tourney for the third successive year by beating Marion, 33 to 17, in an uninteresting game. Marion never had the lead after the first few minutes and was held scoreless by the tight Canton defense in the second quarter. Canton led, 23 to 8, at half time, and Allen and McGinnis, with 9 points each, led their scoring. Elgin-Champaign lineup:

PLANT CRACKS WORLD RECORD; NURMI DOESN'T

New York, March 21.—[Special.]—Willie Plant of the Morningside A. C. played the rôle of Paavo Nurmi tonight and set a new world's record for the mile and a half walk in the eleventh annual games of the New York Postoffice Clerks' association. His time was 10:05 2-5, bettering by 2-5 of a second the old mark of 10:06 made in 1912 by George Goulding in Brooklyn.

Nurmi was also present, again feeling fit, but he left the breaking of records to Plant. However, it was only by a small margin he failed to equal his own world's mark in winning the mile and an eighth run in the good time of 4:59, 3 1-5 seconds slower than his record of 4:55 4-5.

HARRY P. WHITNEY KNOCKED OUT WHEN POLO MOUNT FALLS

AIKEN, S. C., March 21.—[Special.]—Harry Payne Whitney was knocked unconscious this afternoon while playing polo, when his mount tripped and after falling rolled on the rider. Whitney was assisted by Dr. Robert H. Willis and Goelet Gallatin to his villa and tonight it is announced he had received only bruises on the head and face. The accident was caused when the mallet swung between the forelegs of the horse, throwing him.

KIECKHEFER GETS DOUBLE SETBACK FROM WAKEFIELD

Cleveland, O., March 21.—[Special.]—Harry Wakefield of this city defeated Augie Kieckhefer twice here today in a National Three Cushion Billiard league series. He won the afternoon game, showing a brilliant brand of billiards, 50 to 23, in 48 innings and came out on top in the evening block, 50 to 20, in 45 frames.

Wakefield had a high count of 9 in the afternoon tilt and Augie registered a 5. In the evening competition Wakefield scored 6 while the best Augie could accomplish was 4.

FRANKFORT WINS INDIANA TITLE

Indianapolis, Ind., March 21.—Frankfort, last year's runner up, won the fourteenth annual Indiana high school basketball championship here tonight by defeating Kokomo in the final game, 34 to 20.

ONE BAD RACE KEEPS QUATRAIN FROM TOP RATING

BY FRENCH LANE.

There have been few studies of form in racing more fascinating than in the classification of Quatrain, horse of the hour in America, overwhelming favorite to win the Kentucky Derby and the first entry in the Chicago Derby, according to Joseph A. Murphy, veteran racing official.

While serving as presiding steward at the Fair Grounds track in New Orleans, where Quatrain began one of the most meteoric careers in the history of American racing, Murphy followed the development of the great son of Omar Khayyam from the time he appeared, looking like a rather ordinary nag, until his leap into fame in a sensational race to win the $25,000 New Orleans handicap.

He will not go so far as to suggest even that Quatrain may be an Man o' War, rather holding the opinion that unless something out of the skies it will not take a Man o' War to be the standout 3 year old of the year. But he admits there are possibilities that Quatrain may be that horse.

Quatrain Likes All Tracks.

"Quatrain has the tremendous advantage of being equally at home in the mud or on the dry," Murphy said. "And he has demonstrated, despite the questionable staying qualities of his dam's side of the family, going back through Commando and Domino to Alarm, he has inherited all of the stamina of his illustrious sire."

"We had a chance in Chicago last season to get a pretty good line on the class of eastern 2 year olds through Senator J. N. Camden's colt, Pas Suel, which has since died," Murphy continued. "Pas Seul showed few marks of real greatness in any of his races at Hawthorne and personally I was not clear that Lee O. Cotner was not the better colt of the two, and Cotner's three-quarters in 1:11 4-5 with his weight up was unquestionably more impressive than anything we had from Pas Seul. Yet the latter colt, right from his campaign at Hawthorne, showed at Saratoga that he was not many pounds away, if any, from the best the east could muster.

"Quatrain's earyl racing at the Fair Grounds did not have the stamp of greatness, and his defeat by Adolphus was not encouraging, no more so than had been the showing on numerous occasions of many of the highly regarded 2 year olds of last year. It might be urged six furlongs is not Quatrain's race, but he got Adolphus a sixteenth out and then hung.

"Quatrain redeemed this defeat handsomely in his preparation for the New Orleans handicap and then completely wiped it out by his brilliant performance in that race.

"During my many years in racing, two performances of 3 year olds stand vividly in my memory. One was a 3 year old owned by Barney Schreiber some years ago in San Francisco, which ran the first mile of a 4 mile race in March in 1:42, and then was beaten less than a length in record time by the good horse Judge Denny. The other was Quatrain's race in the New Orleans handicap.

"Quatrain's performance in the Louisiana Derby must not be taken too seriously. The 3 year olds back of him beat each other with such regularity with small shifts in weights we must accept they were little better than high class selling platers.

"I can't see that Quatrain's classification in racing is clearly established. His defeat by Adolphus was ordinary. His victory in the rich handicap was one of the most brilliant in American racing."

WINTER BOOK ODDS SHORT

Louisville, Ky., March 21.—[Special.]—Kentucky race followers are not impressed favorably with the first quotations of winter odds on Kentucky Derby candidates. The bookmakers, who for several years have been scorched by accepting too many wagers on the winners, seem to be dreading the fire this year.

No wagers are being accepted on Desming and Hedgefence the latter winner of the Tijuana Derby. The operators here will lose $20,000 if either of these horses win, and they have put out the "Enough" sign by the side of their names.

The future odds quoted below are offered by one of the biggest operators in Kentucky. This book paid off all obligations last year when Black Gold won, losing thousands of dollars.

CHICAGO PINMEN GET HIGH A. B. C. SCORES

Buffalo, N. Y., March 21.—[Special.]—Chicago was the leader of the first squad of five man teams tonight as a result of Birk Brothers' team hitting 2,803. Starting with an 872 the Windy City lads came back with 1,008 and a 923 to put them in the van.

The Mineralites, one of Chicago's leading teams, found the going rough but finished in the money with a 2,746. For some reason the members of this team seemed to have an off night with the exception of Kartheiser, who rolled 608.

Chateau Fritzi Scheff, with 2,783, Scheneman, Inc., with 2,716, and National Metals with 2,704 were the only other Chicago teams to get inside the money. Chicago scores:

Leading in the day's assault was a Toledo pair, Charley Brown and Jimmy Binsley. They hit 1258 in the two man event and slipped into second place, five pins over Peterson and Devries of Chicago. Though none of the leaders were shoved out of position in the singles dents were made in the prize money allotted to this division.

SENATORS TAKE CLOSE WIN OVER GIANTS, 5 TO 3

Sarasota, Fla., March 21.—[Special.]—Two of the most evenly matched baseball teams that ever trod a diamond hooked up again here this afternoon and the Senators won from the Giants in the ninth, 5 to 3. It was their turn, but they had to go the limit to get the verdict. As is always true when these clubs meet, it was anybody's ball game until, with the tying run on, Grover Hartley's fly dropped down into the waiting mitt of Roger Peckinpaugh.

BOARD OF SEVEN URGED TO RULE ILLINOIS RACING

A board of seven stewards made up of sportsmen from Chicago and downstate Illinois will be asked to take over the control of thoroughbred racing in the state at the annual dinner of the Hawthorne Jockey club to be held at the Rainbo gardens in the near future.

The board of stewards, functioning in this state as the Jockey club does in New York, would, according to present plans, be given the power to assign racing dates, formulate rules and regulations and appoint a license committee to issue a uniform license to trainers and jockeys at all sanctioned meetings.

It is the plan to have the board of stewards take jurisdiction over all running races that may be held in Illinois except such as are run at the state fair in Springfield and at county fairs.

Not Opposed to Race Bill.

How the board of stewards will be selected was not made known by Joseph A. Murphy, president of the Chicago Business Men's Racing association who has proposed the plan. The Hawthorne Jockey club of which A. D. Plamondon is president, was organized last year as the social cog in the revival of racing program at Hawthorne, and as the date for the annual dinner will not be named until Plamondon returns to Chicago, it is believed this organization will present the names of the men most desired as members of the board of stewards.

"This move must not be construed in the light of any opposition to any proposed racing legislation," Murphy said. "It is purely an ad interim action that will be vacated if such legislation be passed and will be finally vacated when the proposed western jockey club becomes a realty. We feel there must be such a governing body for the protection of racing in Illinois and the game could not be in better hands than under the control of the real sportsmen of the state.

Won't Push Outlaw Rule.

"We shall not attempt to enforce an outlaw rule but are trying to work out a big problem through which racing can expand and develop and I feel very sanguine the better class of breeders, owners, trainers, and jockeys will be glad to place themselves under such jurisdiction."

ARMY POLO FOUR GET SET FOR BRITISH TOUR

Washington, March 21.—The United States army polo team began its final preparations at Fort Myer, Va., today for a friendly invasion of England. It will sail from New York March 28 on the Minnetonka to meet British army players in the military world championship games next June.

The team, which defeated the British, in the first matches between the two army fours at Meadowbrook, Long Island, in 1923, will be inspected tomorrow by Maj. Gen. John L. Hines, chief of staff.

The American personnel includes six officer players and thirteen enlisted men, and twenty-five ponies.

All expenses of the American team on this side will be paid by the American Polo association. Those in England will be borne by the Hurlingham club, whose guests the visiting players will be.

TILDEN WINS TENNIS TITLE

The scores were 7—5, 6—1, 6—4. In the first set Richards pressed the champion and at one time the score was in favor of Richards, 4—2. Tilden, however, soon regained his top form.

The Inquiring Reporter

Every Day He Asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question.

The Tribune will pay $5 for each question accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send name and address with your question to "Inquiring Reporter," Chicago Tribune. For today's question $5 is awarded The Tribune Ice Fund.

The Question.

Will the injury to Rabbit Maranville prevent the Cubs from being pennant contenders this year?

Where Asked.

Diversey boulevard and Clark street.

The Answers.

Barney O. Romin, 1137 George street, realtor—Personally I think Maranville's value to the Cub team has been greatly over estimated. And if they should finish near the the top this year they will finish there with or without the aid of this so-called great shortstop. Give me Charley Hollocher for mine.

John Keyes, 2016 Holly avenue, police officer—I do not think the Cubs will be flag contenders in the National league race with Rabbit Maranville out of the game. The loss of Maranville will seriously cripple the team this season. Pittinger, who is filling the shoes of Maranville, is having a hard job, as the Rabbit always is full of that baseball spirit while on the diamond.

William H. Feigenbutz Jr., 1521 Oakdale avenue, real estate salesman—The loss of Maranville certainly comes at a very critical time. Rabbit's fighting spirit certainly will be missed by his teammates and the forth side fans. The loss of Maranville is certain, I believe, to prevent the Cubs from finishing anywhere near the top this year.

Emil Boettcher, 1444 Oakdale avenue, police officer—My belief is that the Cubs will finish somewhere near the top of the heap. With Rabbit Maranville out of the game it will handicap Boss Killefer at the opening of the season but he will be of some aid to the team during the latter part of the race, when his broken bone will have mended and he is able to play again.

George Sutter, 1320 Nelson street, salesman — The Cubs always were a hard luck team in regards to their players. With Maranville out of the lineup it will prevent the Cubs from finishing in third position and the team's standing will be about the same as last year. With Maranville out of the game the team will not have the pep and spirit.

The BULL'S EYE
Editor and General Manager WILL ROGERS

Another "Bull" Durham advertisement by Will Rogers, Ziegfeld Follies and screen star, and leading American humorist. More coming. Watch for them.

What an Ad Is Supposed to be and What This One Is

Here is the regular conventional Advertisement that I should write, "Picture accompanying the ad of me rolling Cigarette and smiling satisfied smile," reading under Picture, "After a hard day's writing and acting in Ziegfeld's Famous Follies, trying to amuse the great American Public, I find your Cigarette so satisfying. Even in my Phonograph recording it is a perfect joy, and in my tiring movie work I could not exist without it. It relaxes me, It clears one's mind, I wouldn't be without it."

Now wouldn't that be a fine lot of Apple Sauce, and if anybody believed it they should be shot. In the first place I don't smoke and if I did, and you took one kind away from me, I would get another. In the second place, nothing can clear your mind, if it ain't clear to start in with. My friends tell me, though, they get lots of enjoyment out of 'Bull', so there must be something to it.

Will Rogers

P. S. I'm going to write some more piece that will appear in this paper. Keep looking for them.

TRIBUNE NAMES 2 KANSAS CAGERS ON ALL-WESTERN

BY FRED H. YOUNG.

[Copyright: 1925: By The Chicago Tribune.]

Hazarding a guess on the best basketball talent in the west is even more of a problem than picking the outstanding men in the Big Ten, for there is a lot of excellent basketball played in the middle west, outside of the big conference. Many of the smaller colleges often have just as good material for basketball as the larger schools, which is usually not true in the other major sports.

In picking the all-western team this year, the writer will not attempt to include those sterling cagers on the Pacific coast, but will confine his choice to the middle west, where the game has grown greatly the last ten years.

The western conference, with its big field houses, naturally has the edge, although there are some sterling performers in both the Missouri valley and the nonconference schools entitled to recognition.

Miner Chosen for Forward.

Johnny Miner, Ohio State's wonder forward, who has been practically unanimous choice of every critic for two years, is chosen for one of the forward positions on the all-western quintet. Miner sank 53 baskets and 27 foul throws in the twelve conference games he played, and he was a marked man in every contest. His wonderful shooting eye, his fine floor play, and his defensive work are all that could be asked of any man.

The other forward post goes to Maurice [Red] Robinson, the Wabash flash, over such sterling performers as his teammate DeVol, who is also a corking good man; Vandiver of Franklin, the outstanding player of 1924, who was injured and out of the game for ever a month of this campaign; Logan of Indiana, Haggerty of Michigan, Van Drashak of Beloit, McBride of Oklahoma, and Bunker of Kansas Aggies.

Robinson Heavy Scorer.

Robinson was a big cog in Wabash winning the Indiana state title, a real feat any year, and was a heavy scorer like Miner, while his floor work was also remarkable.

Had Vandiver, Franklin's great player, been in the game all season, he would have been given rank over any man in the middle west, but because he was injured in midseason, and out of many important battles, he is relegated to the second team this year.

Van Drashak of Beloit was a great player on a small college team. He is a wondrful left handed shooter.

The crop of good forwards included Capt. Wheat of Missouri, Sande of Iowa, Earle Murphy of Lombard, Spradling of Purdue, Hough of Hanover, Ward of De Pauw, Harmeson of Purdue, Minner of Washington, Trautman of Creighton and Daugherty of Illinois.

Jayhawker at Center.

Capt. Tustan Ackerman of Kansas, three time Missouri valley champion, is first choice for center. His third and final year in collegiate circles was his best, and though he was guarded like a hawk he was not stopped all season and wound up his career in a blaze of glory. In the three years he has been a member of Dr. Forest Allen's quintet the Jayhawkers have lost only three games in sixty-one starts. He is not only a great scoring machine, but a wonderful defensive man as well. Ackerman was again the individual high point man of the Missouri valley, with 58 baskets and 48 free throws, a total of 166 points.

Only a share behind him is Chadwick, Wabash's giant center, and "Cookie" Cunningham, Ohio State's pile driving pivot. Chadwick had a great season, and was one of the most improved basketeers of the year.

Goodson of Nebraska, Alvea of Chicago, Nyikos of Notre Dame, Anderson of Illinois Wesleyan, Wallace of Bradley Institute, Grant of Franklin, and Griggs of Butler are other fine centers in the west.

Wisconsin Leader Picked.

Although Wisconsin had one of the poorest seasons in its history, few will dispute the placing of Capt. Diebold at guard on the honor quintet. The Badger is a marvelous guard and a whole defense himself, and his play was not affected by the slump of his team. In fact, he played a stronger game than in 1924

Diebold is one of the greatest guards that Dr. Meanwell has ever turned out, and that coaching luminary has turned out more than his share of great guards.

Brewster of the Washburn college five, National A. A. U. champ, is picked as his teammate. He was the outstanding star of the National A. A. U. tournament at Kansas City this month, and is almost as effective a guard as Diebold.

Here is the speediest bunch of basketball tossers in the west. Miner and Robinson each had a good year at finding the hoop for frequent tallies and played a fast passing game. Kansas contributes two of the star quint in Ackerman and Brewster. The former of Kansas university led in the Valley conference scoring and is placed at center. Brewster, a guard, was a member of the Washburn college five which won the national A. A. U. title. The other guard is Diebold, Wisconsin, who showed his great ability as a guard in spite of being on one of the weaker Big Ten teams.

GRIFFS' BUS CRASHES THROUGH BRIDGE ON WAY TO GIANT GAME

SARASOTA, Fla., March 21.—[Special.]—The Washington Senators were dangerously near meeting with a catastrophe today on their way from Tampa to take part in the exhibition game here this afternoon with the Giants. The entire squad of Senators occupied a huge bus, and as the heavily laden vehicle was half way across the bridge spanning the Manatee river at Palmetto, near here, there was a crash, and the wheels of the motor bus broke through the wooden roadway. Projecting girders, however, kept the bus from falling into the river, though for a minute it appeared as if the vehicle would make the plunge. The players were not hurt, but suffered a severe shaking-up.

ROSENBERG TOOK LOTS OF KNOCKS IN RING START

BY HARRY NEWMAN.

New York, March 21.—[Special]—Charley Phil Rosenberg, the new bantam champion, who plastered the former incumbent, Eddie [Cannonball] Martin good and plenty for fifteen rounds in Madison Square Garden on Friday night, has been kicking around the boxing game for several years with more or less success until he grabbed the title when Martin floundered for the moment.

Born in Harlem, a section of this town, Charley had to kick his way through some of the tough kids of the neighborhood, which, from all accounts, is a very rough sort of section.

Rosenberg has stumbled into some hard knocks since joining the fight game. Losing a decision here and there while he plugged along grabbing a verdict in many spots, he never stopped trying until he caught up with the Martin man the other night.

Got Socked in First Bouts.

Starting as a flyweight, Rosenberg did most of his fighting at the small clubs for several years until he joined the bantam class. Rosenberg's first fight was with a boy named Charley Benyo at the Commonwealth Sporting club when Rosey stepped out of the audience to substitute for the other principal, who failed to appear.

Rosenberg got all of $14 and a sweet pasting in that rumpus, but it served to send him off in the boxing game. Rosenberg was a substitute in his second fight and he got another beating, while Al Diamond nearly killed him in Charley's third fight. Then Rosenberg got a twelve round bout with Bobby Bolen, and while he lost, he made a great impression on the fans for his gameness.

Begins to Win Gos.

Rosenberg next met Frankey Genaro at the Commonwealth club and bet his end, $300, that he would be there at the end. Charley was there, but lost the decision. That was the fight that really made Rosenberg. Following that scrap with the clever Genero, Charley took on a score of youngsters and beat most of them.

Then Rosenberg got another match with Genero at twelve rounds, in which he lost the decision after a tough fight. Incidentally Rosey says he got his cauliflower ear in that row.

Then Rosenberg served for a brief spell as sparring partner for Joe Lynch, the old bantamweight champion, when the latter was getting ready for a bout with Midget Smith. Lynch staked Charley to a brace of tickets to see the fight, but on entering the building Charles was asked to fight Curley Wilshire of Canada. Once more Rosey did a subbing act and made a great fight with the Canuck considering the fact that he took the fight at a moment's notice.

Tough Time with Duane.

Rosenberg beat Johnny Innhouse in ten rounds, lost to Johnny Rose and again to Willie Darcy in ten rounds. The hardest fight that Rosenberg ever engaged in was his first fight against Carl Duane which went six rounds. Shortly after he met Duane again.

It was another fierce go. Duane nearly tore Rosenberg's head off with a right uppercut and Rosey almost ripped Duane's trunks off when he grabbed Carl as he pitched toward the floor.

After that fight Charley beat Harry London, but lost a close decision to Buddy Taylor after a great fight in the Garden. Rosenberg followed that fight by stopping Bill Pimpus in Philadelphia in four rounds. Rosey was on the floor himself for nine in the first round.

Loses to Martin Twice.

Then came Rosenberg's first fight with Eddie Martin in the Garden for six rounds in which he lost the decision. In the next fight against Martin, Rosenberg blew another decision, but held the Cannonball even in the third meeting for six rounds.

Rosenberg is a smart boxer and while he does not go in very much for knockouts he does hit pretty well when in danger. In his fight against Martin he outsmarted and outpunched the former champion.

Rosenberg is a good club fighter, always in there trying all the time, pegging away with both hands and making an opponent look bad. While Rosenberg may not be a very showy fighter, he is a most effective one. With a good left hand and a good right hand it will take a lot of fighting to knock him out of his new title.

ZEI WINS SHOOT AT LINCOLN PARK

D. Zei won the 75 target distance handicap shoot at the Lincoln park traps yesterday by breaking sixty-seven from eighteen yards. E. G. Hall was a close second with sixty-six from twenty yards. PURPLE WILL PLAY HERE

This is the architects' drawing for the new stadium which will be built at Northwestern university. It is to be ready for use by the fall of 1926. The three balcony idea is a new one, which, it is said, will give every one in the stands a clear view of the football field.

Canadians, Thistles Collide Today for U.S. Soccer Title

The Canadian Club of Chicago will face the Cleveland Thistles on DePaul field today in the finals of the western division for the honor of competing in the grand final of the national cup competition. Chicago has yet to have one of its teams find its way into the grand final, although several squads have worked up to the western final.

The Canucks, however, are at the top of their form and are confident that they will break the jinx which has hung over local entries in other years.

Davidson in Shape.

The Canadian lineup will probably be the same as last Sunday. Frank Davidson, outside right, who played three games against Harvey while suffering from stomach trouble, is again in condition and is expected to hit his old stride in the title tilt.

The Thistles invade the city with a reputation of being one of the best teams in the country, although inclined at times to be erratic. After defeating some strong teams in the national cup games, they were forced to defeat last Sunday by the Turuls in a fight for first place in the city league.

Canadians' Defense Strong.

The Cleveland squad will have to have one of its good days to win today, for the defense is one of the strongest in this section.

Chief among the stars on the Thistles is Ramsay, outside right, who is a fast and shifty player, and his passes to Johnson, the center forward of the Ohio champions, have accounted for most of his team's markers. Difficulty over the selection of a referee has been ironed out and John B. Stark of Detroit will handle the game.

BORG SETS NEW SWIM RECORD

Detroit, Mich. March 21.—Arne Borg, European swimmer, set a new mark in the 440 yards free style swimming event at the Detroit Athletic club here tonight when he covered the distance in 4:34 2-5. The previous record, held by Johnny Weissmuller, was 4:40.

NORTHWESTERN PLANS NEW GRID STADIUM

The first three-decked solid concrete football stadium to be built in the United States is to be constructed by Northwestern University during the year which ends Sept 1, 1926, and will be ready for the home games of that season.

With the end stands completed the total capacity of the new plant will be slightly more than 74,000 persons but, for the opening year, it is doubtful if anything more than the stands between goal posts will have been finished. The seating capacity will be about 54,000.

Robert W. Campbell, president of the board of trustees, and William A. Dyche, business manager of the university, who comprise a special committee in charge of stadium plans, are of the opinion that no kicked football will be invisible to any spectator in the proposed stadium. The stadium will be of solid concrete construction with the following measurements: Width at center, 610 feet over all; length over all, 702 feet.

There will be many features of the proposed Northwestern University stadium, which will be worth public attention. Sports editors of Chicago and other newspapers have been consulted as to various innovations and improvements. The press stand, at their suggestion, will be placed at the top of the west stand, with telephone service to the teamrooms and field house. It will be glass inclosed, with ample seating capacity.

SCHIKAT MEETS EUSTACE ON MAT TOMORROW NIGHT

Richard Schikat, the German, generally considered the best foreign wrestler who has come to America since the days of Yusiff Mahmout, and Allen Eustace of Wakefield, Kan., will take holds in the main event of the wrestling show to be conducted by the 202d coast artillery in the Broadway armory tomorrow night. They will wrestle to a finish, best two in three falls, and will be in the ring ready to wrestle at 10 o'clock.

Eustace and Schikat met at a Coliseum show recently and wrestled fifty-five minutes to an interesting draw. It was one of the cleanest and best bouts staged during the season. Following the contest, fans clustered around the ring shouted their approval and requested the promoters to rematch them in a finish struggle. Tomorrow night's contest is the result of these appeals.

Both Skilled Grapplers.

Schikat knows more of the American style of grappling than most foreigners He is expert with the double wrist lock and head scissors. He also can apply the body and short arm scissors together with head locks and toe holds. He is strong and a clever defensive grappler.

Eustace has meet the leading heavyweights in the game. He has defeated some of them and succumbed to others, including Lewis, after hard struggles. Like the German, the Kansan knows most of the fine points of the game. They are about evenly matched in weight and both are over six feet tall.

John Freberg and Wallace Duguid, local heavyweights, will tangle in one of the preliminaries. Two other bouts complete the card.

Mondt to "Go Slow."

Before he signs articles for the championship match with Wayne Munn at the Coliseum on March 31, Joe Mondt wants it understood he intends to take his time when he crawls through the ropes to meet the cornhusker giant. At a recent meeting with Promoters Krone and Cutler and the city athletic commission, the Colorado cowboy made known his plans of playing a waiting game. He believes the best way to beat Munn is to keep away from him so that Wayne will tire. His standing crotch and half nelson then will not be so effective and Mondt believes he will have a chance to win.

These plans are acceptable to the promoters and commission. Both are now awaiting a reply from Gabe Kaufmann, manager of Munn. Mondt is bent on winning the title and he wants to wrestle the way he has chosen and not in the manner to be dictated by fans and promoters. "Toots" wants these angles to be acceptable to all parties concerned before he signs. Kaufmann, however, is expected to accept the terms and both men will be here early this week to complete preparation.

Something definite in the way of a Munn-Lewis match is expected this week. New promotional blood has entered the field and intends to talk terms with hard cash, not checks.

ANOTHER "HACK"

Richard Schikat, the German grappler who meets Allen Eustace at the Broadway armory tomorrow night, is considered the best foreign wrestler who has come to America since George Hackenschmidt and Yusiff Mahmout. Contrary to the usual run of European wrestlers, Schikat knows more of the American style of wrestling than most Americans. Schikat and Eustace wrestled fifty-five minutes to a draw at a recent Coliseum show.

Major Goodsell Captures World's Sculling Title

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

SYDNEY, N. S. W., March 21.—In the world's sculling championship held on the Clarence River, New South Wales, Maj. Goodsell beat McDevitt, holder of the title, by default and won from Paddon by ten lengths. Goodsell before becoming professional was amateur champion of New South Wales.

TOMMY GIBBONS OFFERED $75,000 TO MEET TUNNEY

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

Billy Gibson, manager of Gene Tunney, the American light heavyweight champion, yesterday asserted he has received an offer for Tunney to meet Jack Dempsey in a twelve round no-decision contest in Los Angeles in June. Gibson has taken the offer under consideration and said he will take the match providing present negotiations for a bout with Tom Gibbons fail to materialize.

According to Gibson, the St. Paul heavyweight has been guaranteed $75,000 to meet the American light heavyweight champion and he cannot see how Manager Eddie Kane can refuse considering the fact he had previously agreed to a Tunney match in Madison Square Garden a short time ago for $25,000.

Gene Takes on Weight.

Tunney, according to Gibson, is the logical opponent for Gibbons. In the last year Gene has taken on weight and is now well over the light heavyweight limit, although he can scale 175 pounds without much trouble.

The American light heavyweight champion stopped off in Chicago for a day to work at a local gymnasium in preparation for his ten round clash with Harry Greb, boss of the middleweights, in St. Paul next Friday night. Fighter and manager left last night for the twin cities.

Kane Tells His Terms.

When told of the offer Eddie Kane, manager of Gibbons, asserted he will accept a Tunney match providing he is given a flat guarantee of $75,000, with a privilege of the percentage. Kane claims Gibbons is an 8 to 1 better drawing card in New York than Tunney and as such is entitled to the largest slice of the purse. Kane also stated he had talked of such a match with Gibson on his recent trip to New York. If the match is closed it will be held in June, according to Kane.

Local boxing fans will make another pilgrimage to Milwaukee tomorrow to see the ten round bout between Peter Sarmiento, the Filipino, and Connie Curry of Iowa. Sarmiento is a strong favorite with local and Milwaukee fans because he is of the aggressive type which tries at all times. In another ten rounder Eddie Anderson of Moline will meet "Irish Johnny" Curtin of the east. A four and a six round preliminary will complete the card.

Sammy Wolff will run a special train over the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul. It will leave the Union station at 5:50 o'clock tomorrow evening. Flght and train tickets can be secured at 153 North Clark street.

Eddie Kane, manager of Sammy Mandell, claimant of the world's lightweight championship, has signed articles for Sammy to meet a worthy opponent in Madison, Wis., on April 3. It will be Mandell's first start since he won a fifteen round decision over Sid Terris in New York. Mandell injured his left shoulder while training for that fracas and has given the injured member complete rest ever since. Mandell and Manager Kane will be interested spectators at the Milwaukee show tomorrow night.

Amateur boxers and professional wrestlers will donate their services on March 31, when a mammoth athletic show will be staged by Jim Mullen in the St. Philip's gymnasium, 5140 W. Jackson boulevard. The Rev. M. Miller has donated the gymnasium and the entire proceeds will be turned over to the local fund for use in the storm-swept areas of Illinois and Indiana.

CHERRY CIRCLE DROPS DELANEY AS MANAGER

Martin A. Delaney, for sixteen years general manager of the Chicago Athletic club, has resigned and will be relieved of his present duties on April 1, President Charles Thompson announced last night.

Failure of a majority of the members of the C. A. A. to indorse Mr. Delaney's policies of the club was given as the cause of the resignation, Mr. Thompson pointing out that there was no personal friction and that he and members of the board hold Delaney in the highest regard. He denied that the club in any way held Delaney responsible for a decline in athletics of the club.

Mr. Delaney last night refused to comment on his resignation. There is said to be a chance that he will be offered the post of athletic director, but he refused to say if he would accept it.

Delaney came into prominence as manager of the Olympic games in St. Louis in 1904 and came to the C. A. A. from the Kansas City A. C. in 1909. He was a member of the American Olympic team coaching staff both in 1916 and 1920 and has produced many winning teams at the C. A. A.

UNIFORM TENNIS BALL REQUIRED FOR 1926 MEETS

PARIS, March 21.—[By the Associated Press.]—A tennis ball of uniform weight, size and resiliency will be compulsory in all international matches played after Jan. 1, 1926, the International Tennis federation decided today at its annual meeting, in which twenty countries were represented.

The federation also adopted the American foot fault rule. It received favorably applications for Austria, Hungary, India, Ireland, Greece and Ecuador, who will become full-fledged members in due course. No request for admittance was received from Germany.

No Company Gets Monopoly.

Regarding the new uniform tennis ball, the federation decided that no monopoly would be given to any company, but that the ball presented by any manufacturer in order to be accepted, must meet the specifications laid down by a committee of four which the federation appointed.

The adoption of the American foot fault rule seems likely to raise havoc among the most prominent French players, the French interpretation having allowed the server to drag the pivot foot across the base line at the moment of impact, giving the server a few feet "fudge."

Both Feet Behind Line.

Henceforth the American method of forcing the server to stand with both feet behind the base line, without touching it, and demanding that one foot remain in contact with the ground during the entire service action, will be rigorously applied.

Italy, where the server has been permitted to spring before the moment of impact of racquet and ball, voted against the rule.

MORE THAN 500 DOGS ENTERED IN SHOW THIS WEEK

With more than 200 exhibitors from the central west and east entering more than 500 dogs, the twenty-fourth annual dog show of the Chicago Kennel club, to be held at the First Regiment Armory, March 26, 27, and 28, promises to be a record breaking event.

Many imported dogs will be on exhibition, particularly among the more than 100 German police dogs entered. The wire-hair pincher, one of the newer breeds in this country, will be well represented, as well as the doberman pinchers.

Twenty-five chows will vie for the honors, the leading local exhibitors being Mrs. H. Earl Hoover and Eugene Byfield. The latter has groomed her Nee-Phos of Manchoover for the event and Byfield will show his Chee Nee and Chino Lionheart.

Arrangements are being made to bring a team of huskies from Quebec, due to the interest aroused in the breed by the sensational trip recently of a team of these dogs carrying anti-diphtheria serum to Nome, Alaska.

IZAAK WALTONS PLAN BIG CONVENTION HERE

More than fifteen hundred sportsmen will meet here April 2, 3 and 4, and for the third annual convention of the Izaak Walton League of America. Sportsmen from all parts of the United States, representing the fifteen hundred local chapters of the Walton League, will come here for the 3 day meet at the La Salle hotel to formulate conservation, hunting and fishing, and reforestation policies.

K. M. Landis, commissioner of baseball, will be toastmaster at the annual banquet on the evening of April 4. The principle speakers of that evening will be Senator William E. Borah [Idaho] and Democratic House Leader Finis J. Garrett [Tenn.]. Hal G. Evarts, outdoor editor of the Saturday Evening Post, will speak on the evening of April 3.

The convention will convene at 9 a. m., April 2, and formal opening will be at 2:30 p. m., when Mayor Dever will welcome the delegates. The message of Will H. Dilg, president of the Walton league, will follow. The second day will be given over largely to talks. Among those who will address the delegates are Dr. H. J. Donaldson, chairman, and Seth Gordon, executive secretary of the Pennsylvania game and fish commission; Dr. Henry Baldwin Ward of the University of Illinois; Col. W. B. Greely, chief of United States forestry service, and Henry O'Malley, commissioner of the bureau of fisheries, and many other celebrated conservationists.

There are six chapters of the Walton League in Chicago—the North Shore, Woodlawn, Humbolt Park, Calumet and the Pioneer, Boy Scouts and Chicago chapters. The Chicago chapter numbers 2,100 members, and is the original chapter of the Izaak Walton League of America, formed by Mr. W. H. Dilg and fifty-three others three years ago, from which the national organization has grown.

GOLFERS CAST LONGING EYES AT SOFT GREENS

63 YELL "FORE"

GULFPORT, Miss., March 21.—A party of sixty-three golfers, representing the Olympia Fields, Flossmoor and Calumet clubs of Chicago, arrived today for a week of play here and at adjoining resorts. They will sleep in three Pullman cars parked at the union station here until they leave next Friday for a brief visit to New Orleans en route home.

BY MORROW KRUM.

Golf clubs besieged with telephone calls—indoor courses crowded—sport goods stores jammed—policemen waving would be players from public park courses—greenkeepers treading lightly over spongy soil—these are signs of the times. Though it may rain or turn cold today, there were hundreds, perhaps thousands, of golf fans in Chicago yesterday who wanted play golf.

But, alas, it is too soon. There'll be but little golf played for another fortnight. Reports yesterday from clubs were optimistic, but all greenkeepers and professionals agreed that it's too soon. Give the sun and the wind another ten days and the greens may be in shape. But not now. The ground is too soft.

Only one course in the city will be officially open today. That is the No. 2 course at Olympia Fields, and it is probable 100 of the 1,500 Olympians will be out there this morning swatting the tiny pill. Other clubs may have golf today, but not many.

900,000 Games or So.

Great preparations are in progress, however. Especially is this true of the public park courses in Chicago. Rough estimates, which may have been slightly exaggerated, were made yesterday. The figures indicate that perhaps 900,000 games of golf will be played this year over the five public park courses operated in Chicago.

The five courses are Jackson park, Columbus park, Lincoln park, Garfield park and the new course at Marquette park. Jackson park will be the most popular. There there are two courses, an eighteen hole course and one of nine holes.

Last year more than 300,000 games of golf were played over these two courses and there will be about that many this year and perhaps more if old J. Pluvius is more reasonable.

Jackson Open in April.

The nine hole course at Lincoln park may give golfers more than 200,000 games. Columbus park probably will have 150,000 games and the same number will probably be played at Garfield park. Marquette park, the opening date of which has not been definitely set, will probably have 150,000 games over the new and sporty course.

Jackson park will be open on April 1 or a few days thereafter. Columbus park will stage a celebration some time late in April, with park officials, famous professionals and prominent citizens shooting off the first day. Howard W. George, president of the Columbus Park Golf club, has announced Walter Crowe, Illinois state amateur champion, will show his golf on the gala day.

So it does not seem unreasonable that 900,000 individual golf games will be played for the 15 or 25 cent fees charged by the public courses, and that, you'll admit, is some golf for a city. And it does not take into consideration the scores of private and daily fee courses.

The golf clubs that are members of the Chicago Daily Fee Golf association have announced they will be ready about April 15. The association's press agent also advises The Hub will be the reservation headquarters for the season. That's a press agent notice, but it will interest thousands of golfers.

Raymond J. Daly, chairman of the tournament committee of the Chicago District Golf association, announced yesterday the organization's amateur championship meet will be held June 25, 26, and 27 at some west side club, the team event will be held July 9 at Indian Hill, and the club relations day championship is to be at Beverly, Sept. 3. The caddy and caddie masters' events will be scheduled later.

It is expected that T. J. McMahon, executive secretary of the United States Golf association, will announce the dates and courses for the sectional qualifying rounds of the national open tournament in a few days.

A Spanish professional, name of Senor Angel de la Torre of the Real Club de la Puerta de Hierro, Madrid, Spain, is to play in the national open this year.

A rumor is going around Miss Edith Cummings of Onwentsia will represent our fair and windy city in the British woman's national. Miss Glenna Collett of Providence, R. I., has already sent in her entry blank.

Jack Bloom has won the Walsh brothers' trophy at the Tavern Golf club, defeating A. D. Moynihan and O. D. Landis.

NAVY FENCERS BEAT PENN.

Annapolis, Md., March 21.—The Navy bladesmen had little trouble defeating the University of Pennsylvania fencers in an intercollegiate match staged here this afternoon, the count being 9 bouts to 4.

700,000 AUSTRALIANS PAY $325,000 TO SEE FIVE CRICKET GAMES

NEW YORK, March 21.—[Special.]—Attendance at the five test matches played by the English cricket team in Australia reached the amazing aggregate of 700,000, compared with 400,000 on the previous tour. The receipts of the tour, which ended recently, were $325,000, compared with $185,000 on the former trip.

Followers of cricket outside of Australia often have wondered how that country, with its small population, can provide such large crowds. This is explained in a letter, written by a Sydney woman to an English friend while the first contest was in progress, as follows:

"The test match is in progress. My husband goes, but I do not, for I cannot manage to stand all day. Unless one is on the ground at 9:30, all chance of a seat is gone. Practically all the men in Sydney go and business has to wait. Almost every office and business makes arrangements for its staff to see the cricket."

BETTER HOMES ARE STRESSED AT EXPOSITION HERE

Fifth "Own Your Home" Week Under Way.

Mayor William E. Dever, assisted by S. Charles Iverson, president of the Chicago Real Estate board, and the mayors of several suburban towns yesterday aided in opening the fifth annual "Own Your Home" exposition at the Coliseum, which started with the good wishes of President Coolidge, Herbert Hoover, and a number of state governors.

The exposition this year is planned to emphasize the campaign for better homes, rather than the urge to buy and build new homes. Good construction practices and new and approved materials and equipment will be stressed, and visitors to the displays will be taught to look for places where unscrupulous contractors are likely to substitute inferior materials for those that will give good normal service.

Conference Next Wednesday.

A national conference on home building will assemble at the exposition on Wednesday for the purpose of recommending methods of raising the standard of American homes built in the future and to encourage efficiency in residence construction.

Charles G. Edwards, president of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, will preside at a general conference on Thursday, following a number of divisional conferences on Wednesday. A dinner will be given Thursday evening by the national association to the delegates and exhibit committees.

Conditions More Favorable.

"Building conditions are more favorable now than they were in 1924, due to the fact that there is a much smaller investment than usual in large building projects. A greater supply of skilled labor is available, which should tend to raise efficiency and stabilize wages," stated Joseph K. Brittain, chairman of the zoning and city planning committee of the Chicago Real Estate board.

Although homes can be built at less cost now than has been possible for several years, the next two years will see an increase in home building costs, real estate men said, as real estate values are influenced by street improvements, transportation improvements, zoning, and other developments now taking place in Chicago.

Sen. Reed and Col. Miller Sail to Visit Battlefields

New York, March 21.—Senator David A. Reed of Pennsylvania and Mrs. Reed were passengers on the Leviathan, which left today for Europe. They will visit, in company with Col. T. W. Miller, alien property custodian, the battlefields of France. Both men are members of the commission on American battlefield monuments.

POLA NEGRI SAILS FOR EUROPE; DENIES SHE WILL MARRY ABROAD

New York, March 21.—Pola Negri, motion picture actress, sailed today on the steamship Leviathan. She said she would be abroad about six weeks, visiting her mother in Posen, Poland, and enlarging an orphanage maintained by her in the same place.

POLA NEGRI.

Questioned about the veracity of reports that she might marry while abroad, she pointed to a diamond ring on her right hand, declined to disclose the name of a "conservative American" to whom she alluded, and then asserted she would "not" wed in Europe.

On mention of the recent marriage of Gloria Swanson, she made the comment.

"Ah, she is a fast worker."

LEGION SPURS RELIEF WORK FOR VETERANS

BY CAPT. J. M. DICKINSON JR.

[Chairman American Legion rehabilitation committee for Illinois, Michigan, and Wisconsin; formerly of 149th field artillery, A. E. F. He explains why the Legion seeks an endowment fund of $5,000,000 for welfare of orphans and disabled veterans.]

There doubtless are many people who wonder why the American Legion should maintain an extragovernmental organization to insure for the disabled the just care and treatment already provided for them by a grateful nation through governmental agencies. Such wonder, at first natural, should vanish on consideration of a few facts.

The code of laws known as the veterans' act is not a perfect instrument. The American Legion, which largely was instrumental in securing its adoption, is constantly working through its rehabilitation service toward discovery and clearing up of inconsistencies by interpretation and elimination of injustices by amendment.

Bureau Still Imperfect.

The fact is that the United States Veterans' bureau, while functioning with increasing efficiency, still is an imperfect machine, subject to human frailties and errors of judgment. The American Legion, which led in the demand for the creation of the bureau, is, through its rehabilitation service, constantly studying, criticising, and working for its improvement. Its salaried personnel appear before the various boards of the bureau as representatives of veterans, who are practically prevented, under the terms of the law, from employing lawyers for that purpose.

The fact is that hospitalization and medical care of the disabled, while much improved, still are inadequate and below the highest standards recognized as being desirable.

The elimination of undesirable contract hospitals, the increase in number and in standard of care of government hospitals, has been the concern of the American Legion since its beginning.

Legion Seeking Cure.

The recognition of cure, rather than mere compensation, as the true goal with respect to the sick and disabled, now so actively engaging the interest of the rehabilitation service, is an indication of the sound reasoning of its personnel and a guarantee of what may be expected of it in the future.

The fact is that the rehabilitation service is the means set up by the American Legion to make good the declaration made by successive conventions that our first and paramount duty is the care of our disabled comrades.

ST. PATRICK'S DAY PARADE IN N. Y.

New York, March 21.—[Special.]—The Loyal Sons of St. Patrick marched up 5th avenue this afternoon in their annual St. Patrick's day parade which was postponed from Tuesday because of rain. Green, of course, was the predominant color — green mingled with the orange and white of the tri-color of the Irish free state.

Gov. Smith was the grand marshal. He and Mayor Hylan reviewed the procession from the grandstand in front of the hotel Savoy at 59th street and 5th avenue.

Cardinal Hayes was an interested observer from the main door of St. Patrick's cathedral.

CALL NOTABLES FOR SUIT OVER GOMPERS WILL

Washington, D. C., March 21.—[Special.]—Gov. Alfred E. Smith of New York heads the list of many prominent persons who have been subpœnaed as witnesses in the suit brought by Mrs. Samuel Gompers to break the will of her husband, late president of the American Federation of Labor.

It is alleged in the suit that Mr. Gompers, who left most of his property to children by a former marriage, was unduly influenced by his son, Samuel J. Gompers, with the result that Mrs. Gompers, according to the bill filed in her behalf, was cut off with only her dower rights.

Others subpœnaed are Senator Robert M. La Follette, former Senator A. O. Stanley, Representatives Sol Bloom and Louis McFadden, and William Green, president of the federation of labor. These, with Gov. Smith, were subpœnaed by counsel for Samuel J. Gompers, who is contesting the caveat filed by the widow.

The estate left by Mr. Gompers has been found to be worth between $40,000 and $50,000 instead of $30,000, as originally estimated.

Performance

Canadian Border—to Tia Juana, Mexico!—

1558 miles in 40 hours, 47 minutes—all the way down the Pacific coast—"Under Three Flags":—

Over three mountain ranges—Cascades, Siskiyous and Tehachapi:—

Whipping, right and left, around acute "hair pin" turns—up and down switchback roads—with vertical cliffs on one side—bottomless chasms on the other.

Lowering the former record by nearly twelve hours; beating the best that any previous car could do, by nearly twenty-five per cent:—

That's performance!

Only a Rickenbacker with its powerful motor, its perfect steering, and its wonderful 4-wheel brakes could do it.

Only a frame and axles of "double strength" could withstand the strain.

And only on those "Cradle" springs and balloon tires could any human being endure 40 hours, 47 minutes of top-speed driving, without relief or sleep.

Here is a combination of all those qualities you have long desired, but never been able to obtain in any other car.

Drive this Rickenbacker yourself—it will be a revelation to you.

Largest Builders of Permanent Garages in Chicago

Official Washington rules:

"Chicago's Water Waste must Stop!"

400,000,000 gallons of Chicago's water daily thrown away!

SECRETARY of War Weeks has named in the plainest terms the conditions under which Chicago may divert water from Lake Michigan. Chicago's water must be metered. Every drop used must be counted—traced to the consumer and paid for.

Chicago is now wasting half the total pumpage—every day we throw away more than 400,000,000 gallons. The cost of it is appalling—enough in thirty years to buy the surface and "L" lines and dig a serviceable subway.

Every one of us—not merely the building owner—must pay his share. But there is a silver lining to this cloud: we can cut the cost to a fraction—if we like.

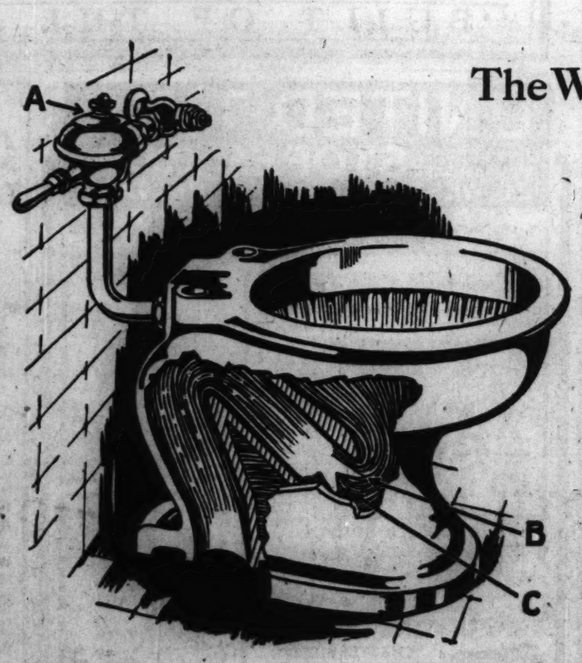
WATROUS
DUO-JET CLOSETS AND VALVES

Save 3 to 6 gallons of water at every flush

Defective plumbing and closets that flush inefficiently are wasting over 200,000,000 gallons of Chicago's water every day. City Engineer Ericson gives 150,000,000 gallons as the quantity wasted daily by old-fashioned closets! The Watrous Flush Valve and Duo-Jet Closet can eliminate all this waste.



The Watrous Flush Valve and Duo-Jet Bowl Cut the Cost to One-Third

Tests conducted by the laboratories of the Armour Institute of Technology, Chicago, show that Watrous valve-and-bowl combinations use 30 to 38% of the water required by the most efficient of all other combinations. Most types show a far greater contrast.

The Watrous Flush Valve (A in the illustration) has a regulating device that governs the amount of water passing through the valve. When installed with the water-saving Watrous Duo-Jet Bowl, it is adjusted to supply the exact quantity of water required by that bowl for a complete flush and refill—and no more.

Two powerful converging jets (B and C) instantly empty the bowl. This, and the refill that follows, consume less than 2 gallons of water, against the 5 to 7 gallons used by bowls which waste most of the flow in starting syphonic action.

Note the wide outlet—the narrowest diameter is at the entrance to the trap. This prevents the clogging and overflowing—and the resulting expense—to which closets of the syphon type are liable.

MOTORDOM

Hope to Avert Motor Deaths by Uniform Marking

National Highway Code Is Urged by Auto Association.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Millions of motorists using the traveled highways of the country are in constant danger of running headlong into lurking accident traps because of the lack of a uniform roadmarking system for the country as a whole, declared a warning broadcast from the national headquarters of the American Automobile association yesterday.

According to the A. A. A., which is now engaged in working out the features of a practical safety program in conjunction with the Hoover conference on street and highway safety, too many automobile accidents are directly traceable to the lack of uniformity in the danger and road signals on the national highways. A comprehensive study of the roadmarking systems of the forty-eight states of the Union was recently concluded by the association.

Urging the imperative need for immediate action, Thomas P. Henry, president of the association, described the situation relative to highway signs today as "highly alarming and a standing menace to every user of the roads."

"The investigation," he said, "has thrown fresh light on one of the contributing causes of automobile accidents. Instead of having one national highway marking system, we have now practically as many systems as there are states, while not infrequently the wayfarer runs into marked differences of practice within the same state. Even with regard to the most serious accidents, hazards such as railroad crossings, through roads, and curves, there is practically no uniformity. The motorist runs into every kind of design, color, and symbol, and he must learn a new set of hazard signs whenever he goes into new territory. This lack of uniformity which is the bane of the highways today applies to all types of signs, the caution signs at danger points, the traffic control signs, and the distance and direction signs as well.

"The situation confronting the automobilist on the highways today resembles that which would exist if the railroads of the United States had a different type of block signal, warning sign, and crossing signal for every state in the Union, except that as compared with the motorist the railroads would still have an advantage in that trains are run on protected rights of way, in charge of trained crews, and under an orderly train dispatching system. On the other hand, whereas the railroads carried 35,000,000,000 passengers over a distance of one mile in 1924, it is conservatively estimated that automobiles carried 160,000,000,000 passengers.

"Proper roadmarking is essential to maximum service, while poor roadmarking and the variety of signs for the same purpose constitute a standing menace to every motorist. The inevitable reaction of the motorist to the confusing variety of signs is that while motoring he misses the warning for a bad curve or a sunken road entirely and is further confused by the prevalence of commercial signs, many of which specifically imitate warning signs. Up to the present the business of marking the highways has been entrusted to a variety of bodies, state highway commissions, automobile clubs, and even advertisers. There was all the room in the world for experimentation. There was no uniform legal obligation on one single body. Many states have not yet adopted a standard marking system of any kind and an extraordinary amount of diversity has crept into the posting system of the states whose roads are on the whole well mapped.

"Before there is uniformity there must be a national code subject to ratification and adoption by all the states. This is something behind which all motorists can get, and the A. A. A. is putting it forward as a practical and urgent step in a safety program."

Safety Measures.

Automobile club bulletins giving information on road conditions are now carrying safety suggestions on spring driving with reference to the need for chains on certain roads during the rainy season. The California State Automobile association and clubs in other territories where spring weather is now well under way are performing a valuable service to members in this direction.

No Other Car Delivers Such Results as These

The real reason for the remarkable Chrysler Six sales record its initial year—a volume of more than 32,000 cars—is its departure from ordinary motor car practice and performance.

Its three-inch motor gives a high speed range from 2 to over 70 miles, combined with gasoline economy safely over 20 miles per gallon.

With a touring car weight, ready for the road, of 2875 pounds, the Chrysler Six can be driven in comfort at 60 miles over rutted roads or cobbled streets. A new type of spring mounting makes it possible to take a turn at 50 miles an hour. Side-sway and road-weaving are eliminated.

The Chrysler Six adheres strictly to the soundest principles. Only the results are radical. You must ride in the car to appreciate what they are. We are eager to give you a Chrysler ride.

Good Roads, Fine Trips—A Fine Overland To Go In

A DOZEN or more paved main highways link Chicago with the great outer world of budding trees, chirping birds and greening fields—and there is talk of widening and boulevarding some of these roads, thus adding still more to the pleasures of motoring!

Meet Springtime this year in a new Overland . . . Overland, the world's lowest priced car with sliding gear transmission . . . Overland, lowest priced line of cars with bodies entirely of steel . . . Overland, noted for its power, noted for its comfort, noted for its endurance, noted for its economy.

The all-steel body construction of the new Overland adds immeasurably to your safety. Giving you the protection of steel's greater strength. Giving you greater driving vision, particularly in the Overland closed models. Slender body posts of steel are used instead of bulky, sight-obstructing wooden body posts.

Overland is a real automobile—with a real automobile's disc-type clutch, modern braking system, heavy axles, cellular type radiator, foot accelerator, big power, easy-riding Triplex Springs (patented). Closed models are finished with Duco, the touring car with baked enamel.

The new Overland All-Steel Sedan—the great leader of the fine new Overland line—is the closed car sensation of the year. Roomy comfort for five passengers, four doors, rich upholstery—a wonderful car for all-year-round enjoyment—and very much a favorite with the people of Chicago.

It is all to your advantage to drive an Overland. You save money in the price, save money in gasoline, oil, tires and upkeep—and have all the pleasure of Overland's continuously fine performance. See these cars. Spring is at hand, and sales are breaking all records in volume—therefore only orders that are placed early can be assured of early delivery. Easy terms.

Factional Fight Holds Up Work on State Highway

More Through Pavements to Be Opened This Spring.

BY E. E. PIERSON.

BLOOMINGTON, Ill., March 21.—[Special.] In the hope that warring interests will bury the hatchet and thus enable the completion of the Meridian highway or route two of the state bond issue through De Witt county, the board of supervisors adopted resolutions this week urging that the location be left to the state highway engineers and that the necessary right of way be promptly furnished. The county lawmakers expressed the opinion that all persons who are using their influence to hinder the construction of this important thoroughfare have a secondary interest to that of the people of the entire community affected and the state at large.

The supervisors urged all such obstructionists to cease their opposition and join in the general movement to put the road through for the benefit of the majority. The difference of opinion concerning the routing through Clinton and north to Wapella has left the ten mile gap which the state highway department is anxious to close this spring and which would have been constructed last year with the remainder of the sections through McLean and De Witt counties but for the petty controversy that developed.

A new scenic route between Chicago and St. Louis via Peoria will be opened probably on June 1, giving a solid concrete road down the Illinois river valley for the entire distance between the two metropolitan cities. The only open gap is between Depue and Spring Valley in eastern Bureau county, a distance of ten miles. The grading contract has been one of the heaviest yet experienced by the state bond issue contractors and was first commenced in 1923. A steep hill has been cut down at Marquette and the grade will be ready for the concrete slab by April 14, according to the present outlook.

The last gap should be closed by the middle of May and opened for traffic not later than the first of the following month. Tremendous fills required to overcome the heavy grades were responsible for the slow progress. The maximum grade that will be encountered when the road is completed will be 5 per cent.

At Smoky Hollow and Nigger Creek valley, where the heaviest fills were made, the highway department will likely place a gravel surface for a short distance temporarily in order to be certain that the fills settle thoroughly. This will avoid detours or other inconvenience.

By June, therefore, motorists will be permitted to follow route seven from Joliet to Depue, thence route twenty-nine to Peoria, and twenty-four to Springfield, connecting with the Illini boulevard, route four, to St Louis. The distance is about 400 miles between Chicago and St. Louis via Peoria, about 100 miles farther than over route four, but there is the advantage of the Illinois valley scenic attractions which are expected to appeal to those who have the time to spare and to whom the greater mileage offers no objection.

Costs You Money to Damage Coast Trains with Automobiles

MOTORISTS who run into Southern Pacific trains are now called upon to pay for any damage to railroad property resulting from such encounters. Where appeal has been made to the courts the railroad company's claims usually have been allowed. Here from San Francisco is the latest:

"Hugh Jamieson of San Mateo must pay the Southern Pacific company $67.72 for smashing up a steam locomotive with his automobile. Justice of the Peace Walter Bird gave the railroad company a judgment against the motorist yesterday.

Testimony was introduced to show that Jamieson drove his machine down the railroad right-of-way, parked it on the tracks and went to sleep. Members of the train crew said they had to wake Jamieson up after they had carried him on the pilot of the engine for ninety feet. The court rebuked the motorist for his carelessness in failing to sleep on a railroad track.

"The damages to the steam locomotive were carefully specified. These are the things Jamieson has to pay for: New pilot, $44.69; labor, $8.43; supervision, $0.98; general expense, $6.34; two pilot knees, $4.06; store expense, $3.50; shop work, $1.35. There was a credit of $2.03 for scrap iron which the railroad company salvaged from the wrack."

Margot Drives.

English women of the leisure classes have begun to drive their own motor cars about the streets of London and the highways of the countryside, just as American women have been doing for years. Among the prominent drivers of their cars are Margot Asquith, Megan Lloyd George, and Princess Bibesco.

Tax Them Higher.

Oregon, the first state to initiate the gasoline tax, is contemplating raising the tax to 6 cents a gallon. The gasoline tax originated in Oregon in 1919, starting at 1 cent. In 1921 it was doubled and in 1923 the tax was raised to 3 cents, and at the next meeting of the legislature the 6 cent tax will be considered.

UNWISELY USED.

A hammer, unwisely used, will ruin more parts of the car than any other steel tool in the kit.

New Mt. Wilson Record — 24 minutes, 47.04 seconds.

Pike's Peak Record — 18 minutes; 15 seconds.

All without tire change—again emphasizes stamina and advantages of Full-Size Balloon Gum-Dipped Cords.

You'll find that Gum-Dipped Balloons save you money. They deliver longer mileage—protect your car from road vibration—reduce depreciation—increase re-sale or trade-in value.

Practically all car makers equip their new models with Balloon tires.

Firestone Gum-Dipping made Balloon tires possible. This special process insulates each fibre of every cord with rubber giving great strength and flexing endurance to the cords. This makes light, strong side walls of extreme flexibility which avoid punctures by yielding to sharp objects that often drive through the stiff, bulky tires of higher air pressure.

Firestone Balloons grip the road even at high speed—holding the car steady and sure on the dangerous curves.

See the nearest Firestone Dealer. Let him show you how easy it is to equip your car—and how inexpensive.

Don't put it off any longer. Begin now to enjoy the comfort, safety and economy of these wonderful tires.

Chicago Is Called "Garden Goat" of Gas Tax Schemes

Highway Men Suggest a Fuel Tax for County Revenue.

BY J. L. JENKINS.

CHICAGO tax experts yesterday made their first serious analysis of the four gasoline tax bills now under consideration in the Illinois legislature.

It is their opinion that Chicago and Cook county will be called upon to pay the lion's share for all state road improvement under any of the proposed additional revenue measures, in just about the same ratio that this district contributes to the highway bond issue funds through automobile license fees.

There are four separate bills concerning gasoline taxes before the legislature. Senate bill 42, sponsored by Senator Duvall; senate bill 69, by Senator Telford; house bill 31, by Representative Teel, and house bill 9, by Representative Bancroft, are said to be slightly different from one another. But in each, according to the Chicago report, there is a marked similarity in the thought that Cook county is a ripe plum for financial plucking.

Bill 42 proposes that automobile operators shall pay 2 cents a gallon more for gasoline in Illinois. The tax would be collected by salesmen and the money would revert to the counties in proportion to the tax that the counties pay in, except in counties where there is a city of 500,000 or more people. In this case one-half of the county's tax quota goes to that city. This bill is considered the most equitable from the standpoint of local returns if motorists grant that more money than that provided by the $60,000,000 and $100,000,000 bond issues is needed for road purposes.

The Telford bill proposes that all of the money collected from a gasoline tax be turned over to the state.

It is estimated that Cook county pays approximately $4,000,000 a year to the state now from automobile license fees. This amount, if it were returned to the county in roads, would pave 100 miles of highways annually. The state will receive this $4,000,000 a year from Cook county every year for the next thirty years under the bond issue plan. Approval of the last issue mortgaged Cook county license fees to the state for that period. In reality less than one-tenth of Cook county's license money comes back in the form of roads here, although the Chicago terminal is conceded to be in vital need of double width pavements over all of the existing main roads and of new paving on some 1,400 miles of important roads which are now unimproved or improved with gravel surfacing.

The Chicago tax students consider that, through this contribution of $4,000,000 a year, the county has been sufficiently generous in completing downstate roads and that further collections by gasoline tax for the state would be an unreasonable sacrifice.

After all, they add, Frank T. Sheets, state highway engineer, has advised the senate that the state does not need the proposed gasoline revenue at present, and his statement should kill any further talk of a fuel tax for the state alone.

The Teel bill also suggests that all of the gas tax money be turned over to the state except $5,200 a month, which would go to the state general fund.

The Bancroft bill proposes that all gas tax money be returned to the counties and be divided up as follows: One-half to the state road bond fund, one-fourth equally among all of the counties, and one-fourth to the county in proportion to the amount of fees it collects.

If Cook county collected $4,000,000 a year under this proposal, $2,000,000 would go to the state, $1,000,000 would be divided equally among the counties, with Cook receiving $10,000 of it, and the remaining one-fourth could be kept here. In other words, the report shows, Cook county would pay something like $4,000,000 for the privilege of keeping $1,010,000 for local road purposes.

Since the state engineer appeared before the senate committee, sentiment for a purely county revenue fuel tax has been growing in many parts of the state, particularly among members of county highway departments. It is the opinion of many county superintendents that, even if the gasoline proposals for state revenue are forgotten at this session, they will be revived in a few years and the possibility of counties adding to their road funds in this way will fade away.

Local highway men believe that a gas tax reverting exclusively to the counties would solve many local road problems. There are a number of counties in the state that are called on to improve, repair, and maintain their roads with only about $100 or $200 a mile for the work. Maintenance eats up this small quota and the counties have no way to really improve their roads. Such a measure would receive the support of highway interests in practically all parts of the state.

Farmers Return to Automobile Market with Heavy Orders

THE farmer has staged a healthy comeback as a leading purchaser of automobiles, according to figures being received from some of the leading farm states by Detroit automobile manufacturers. North Dakota increased 613 per cent in automobile purchasers in January, 1925, over the corresponding month of 1924. Iowa 24 per cent and Indiana 42 per cent.

Unmistakable signs that there will be a heavy demand from the farming districts of the west and southwest for both passenger cars and trucks. The demand, in fact, is already under way, and an unprecedented number of vehicles are booked for these districts. Two boat loads of cars and trucks will be shipped to Duluth as soon as ice conditions in the Straits of Mackinac will permit.

Buy That Tag.

Have you paid old Dad Dearborn your wheel tax fee? If you haven't, you had best hurry down to the city hall and attend to this matter at once, for the Chicago Motor club legal department is broadcasting a warning that the police are issuing slips to motorists who have not as yet secured their tags for 1925.

ROADS IN TEXAS.

Texas is spending nearly $72,000,000, of which $32,000,000 comes through federal aid, for the construction, improvement, and maintenance of its roads. Upon completion of the program the state will have 5,000 miles of improved highways.

Railroad Invites Patrons to List New Bus Fares

AGGREGATE losses annually on 186 miles of branch lines on the Boston and Maine railroad which the railroad wishes to replace with motor bus and truck service are $536,656, according to W. A. Cole, attorney for the road, testifying in hearings at Boston and Concord, N. H., before Interstate Commerce Commissioner B. H. Meyer.

Communities affected by the projected discontinuance of branch line service are invited to form committees with power to determine how much bus service shall be given and what fares shall be paid, provided that operation costs are met, asserted Homer Loring, chairman of the Boston and Maine executive committee, in the course of the hearings.

Describing his plan, Mr. Loring said: "The quantity of service or the schedule of operation, and the fares to be charged are, of course, closely interrelated and it is our desire to balance the two so as to best serve the communities. We are willing to give the views of those served great weight in this adjustment.

"We believe this may best be accomplished by the communities affected appointing a bus service committee. We are willing to leave with this committee the determination of what bus trips will be operated and the fares to be charged on the buses, so long as the service and fares are so adjusted as to have the revenue equal the cost of providing the service. We will cooperate with the committee in every way to see that they are furnished with all available data which will help them in determining what service would be warranted."

Closed Models Forge Ahead in Race for Motor Popularity

APPARENTLY nothing can stop 1925 from registering as a "closed car" year. For the first time in the automotive industry's history the enclosed car output of all the factories will reach, or exceed, 50 per cent of the total. This gives an indication of the strides with which the closed cars have become so popular with the motoring public.

Due to the popularity of the coach, practically all the higher priced cars are being produced on manufacturing schedules which call for as high as 70 to 80 per cent of the closed type. Along automobile row no less than fifteen different models are now being shown in coaches, selling at the same price as the open type.

Join a Motor Caravan De Luxe to California

You Cannot Get Equal Style, Performance and Reliability Within Hundreds of Dollars of Its Price

Essex is a totally different type. Its advantages are exclusive because patented. It gives results never before attained in any car:

Low price, without disappointment in looks or reliability.
Economy without sacrifice of performance.
Stability and highest roadability without unnecessary weight.
The riding ease of large, costly cars. The handling ease of a bicycle. Utter simplicity in design.
The lowest maintenance cost, we believe, of any car in the world.

A Car You Will Be Proud to Own

These qualities make it the most wanted and largest selling car of its class in the world.

It is the finest Essex ever built. It is the smoothest, most reliable Essex ever built. It is the best looking, most comfortably riding Essex ever built. And the price, because of volume, is the lowest at which Essex ever sold.

Surely you cannot be satisfied with less than Essex offers when its cost is but little more than cars of the lowest price.

None Can Copy Its Chief Values

The Chassis Is Patented

Just as the Coach, invented by Hudson-Essex, changed practically all buying to closed cars, so the patented Super-Six principle and other exclusive advantages, forecast the mechanical design which all must seek to rival.

But the extensive copying of the Coach type and the Coach name, even by costliest cars, cannot be carried to the Essex chassis. That is patented and no other maker can use it. It is responsible for the smooth vibrationless performance and long lasting reliability for which Essex is famous everywhere.

Hudson and Essex are of one quality.

$323 For those who desire, special arrangements have been made whereby an Essex Coach may be purchased for a First Payment of $323. The remaining payments conveniently arranged $323

MOTORDOM

Easy Rules Save Careful Motorist Dollars and Woe

Engineer Tells How to Get the Maximum from Car.

BY observing certain rules and precautions it is possible for drivers of cars to save a considerable amount of gasoline, says an interesting paper on modern car operation issued yesterday by E. A. De Waters, chief engineer of the Buick Motor company.

"Great progress has been made in the last few years in carburetion and intake manifold construction, and it is an actual fact that some cars of today get a far better gasoline mileage on low grade gasoline than cars of ten or fifteen years ago achieved on high test gasoline," says the paper in part.

"Probably every driver knows the principle under which the spark is regulated to the speed of the motor, but many of them fail to apply their knowledge in all cases. In some cases the spark is automatically advanced or retarded with the change in speed of the motor, and this is as it should be.

"The spark in the motor should take place at the completion of the compression stroke on the upward travel of the piston, so that the charge may be ignited at the instant the piston is starting on its downward travel.

"When the motor is traveling at a good rate of speed the spark should take place slightly before the piston reaches the top of its stroke, because a certain instant of time is required for the charge to ignite and expand, and the finished driver, who is driving a car in which the spark is not automatically advanced or retarded, will take advantage of this instant by advancing his spark lever to the point where he secures the most power and efficiency from the gasoline. As soon as the motor slows down he will retard the spark sufficiently to take care of the reduced speed.

"The hand throttle on the steering wheel is adjusted when the car leaves the factory, so that the motor turns over quite slowly with the throttle closed. If your motor seems to idle too fast or the motor stalls on a closed throttle, it should be adjusted.

"In starting the motor the driver should naturally be governed by weather conditions and the temperature of the motor itself. In cold weather, with a cold motor, it is of course necessary to use the choker, but not so liberally as to flood the cylinders with raw gasoline. With a warm motor it is not necessary to use the choker at all in starting.

Avoid opening the throttle suddenly while the motor is running. This practice is wasteful, because it introduces a larger charge of mixture than the motor can accommodate at that speed. Gradually opening the throttle permits the motor to accelerate normally and converts all the gasoline into power. This explains why one driver can drive a car up a hill in high gear, while another driver, with the same car, will fail to make the same hill on high. The first driver increases his speed gradually, while the second attempts to rush the hill, chokes his motor with an overrich mixture and must then shift to second to work off the excess fuel.

"The owner who puts these suggestions into practice will get results that will be eminently satisfactory to him."

Saving Children.

As the summer season approaches, city safety authorities are cooperating with playground associations to perfect plans for keeping children off the streets and away from traffic dangers. Baltimore, Cleveland, Springfield, Mass., Los Angeles, Boston, Rochester, N. Y., Buffalo, Louisville, and other cities with community safety councils which have already done excellent work in this direction, are planning to extend the supervised playground system during the present season. Approximately 100,000 school children of Baltimore have joined the Careful Children clubs organized by the police department and the safety council to keep children off the streets and within the wire enclosed playground parks provided by the city.

Engineers Debate Speed Design in Motors of Future

AUTOMOTIVE engineers are never without some unsolved problems. The principal one at present is in regard to speed, and how much more of it is going to be designed into cars. They are also asking themselves if speed will be useful with the ever growing highway congestion, and what effect it will have on future designs of cars.

Safety organizations, after careful analysis and study, have concluded that speed is both taking and saving lives. One expert on traffic matters says that in the near future city traffic will operate nominally at a speed of thirty miles an hour instead of twenty, yet with no sacrifice of safety. He argues that traffic moves as fast as it is obliged to, and when there are more cars to pass a given point each hour they will be obliged to run at a greater speed.

Other engineers are working on the theory that automobiles run as fast as they can stop. Doubling stopping efficiency makes higher speed as safe as ordinary speeds are at present, in their opinion.

TOO HIGH PRICED.

Why Europe is so far behind America in motor car ownership is merely a matter of noting that while a horsepower over there costs $112 in the cheapest cars built, it can be bought here for $25, or less in cars that are neither cheap nor unreliable.

Big Tire Market.

Tire manufacturers see ahead of them a busy season. Listening to the call of the motoring public, they are giving considerable attention to the making of balloon tires, and practically every tire plant is producing them. Of the 50,000,000 tires produced last year, 5,000,000 were balloons. That 10 per cent of the output of tires should be devoted to balloons—the first year of their use to any extent—is a convincing enough evidence of its popularity with the motoring public.

36% more mileage—

IF you, Mr. Motorist, are interested in greater tire mileage, this report is for you. It has to do with one of the most important tire tests ever made.

The tested tires represented at least 75% of all the tires used in the United States. They were mounted on the rear wheels of a number of taxi-cabs—a Michelin on one side and another make on the other side. Half of the Michelins were mounted on the left and half on the right side of the car. They were taken from stock at random, and the other tires were purchased from the regular stock of reputable dealers. Over 410,000 miles were covered.

Here are the results:

The Michelin Tires averaged 36% more mileage
than the other makes

We have often said "The Michelin Cord is SOME Tire." The results of this test bear out that statement. But we do not ask you to accept them as conclusive. We simply ask you to look into the matter further. Mount a Michelin Cord opposite the make you think has been giving you the best service; we are confident the result will check up the accuracy of the larger test and show that you, too, can save money by using Michelins. See your Michelin dealer.

Old Glidden Tour Revived Again in Russian Contest

5,300 Mile Tour Laid Out for Soviet Trials of 1925.

THE Russian information bureau in Washington has received from Moscow the program of an international motor trial for motor cars, trucks, and motorcycles, to be held in Russia in midsummer, under joint auspices of the automobile department of the board of road transport and the automobile club of Moscow. A similar trial, in which about 100 vehicles participated, was held in 1923, and many foreign manufacturers found the tests peculiarly valuable advertising media. The trials are designed to bring home to a large portion of the population the importance and possibilities of motor transport.

For motor cars the trial will start at Leningrad, go south as far as Tiflis and to Kutais on the Black Sea, and then turn north to Moscow. The run will cover 5,300 kilometers (about 3,300 miles), and will pass through twenty cities. About thirty days will be consumed in the run, allowing ample time for demonstrations in the various cities. In 1923 people came from considerable distances to see the cars pass and witness the demonstrations. The itinerary for the trucks and motor vehicles will be somewhat shorter.

Forty per cent of the run will be over level macadam roads, 19 per cent over mountain main roads, 30 per cent over level secondary roads, 11 per cent over mountain secondary roads. A representative of the committee will ride in each car and awards will be made on endurance and durability, capability, economy, and engine performance.

Repair and service shops manned by competent mechanics will be maintained along the route. Interpreters will be provided. The itinerary runs through some of the most beautiful sections of Russia. The temperature should average about 77 degrees F. during August. In regard to the personal expenses of competitors it is estimated that 15 gold rubles (about $8) a day should be ample to cover first class accommodations and food. In the country districts substantial meals can be obtained for the equivalent of 50 cents.

The entrance fee, including gasoline and oil supplies, is 1,600 rubles for cars and trucks, and 650 rubles for motorcycles (a ruble equals 51 cents).

The committee in charge of the trial has suggested that motor cars of the more solid type will be best suited to general Russian conditions, and trucks of from three to four tons capacity with final gear drive rather than chain transmission.

Now that Russian currency is established on a gold basis, the budget is being balanced month by month, and production is approaching pre-war standards, a considerable expansion of motor transport is anticipated, according to the bureau. The world war and the civil struggles left a great scarcity of motor vehicles in Russia, as well as inadequate railway communications. The important natural resources of the country are frequently situated at great distances from both towns and railways. Last year the soviet republic imported motor vehicles, including motorcycles, to the value of about $3,000,000.

STUFF THAT SOFTENS ROADS

Two veterans of the rubber industry in Ceylon posed for this picture. Sir H. A. Wickham was knighted in 1920 in recognition of his tireless development of the industry. He is known as the "father of the rubber industry in Ceylon." This tree, his prize exhibit, yielded 871 pounds of dry rubber between 1909 and 1913, but tapping has since been halted.

GARAGE LAW.

A law in Germany prevents more than three cars being stored in one garage.

Makers Believe Ideal Touring Car Is Closed Model

CALLS for closed cars continue to increase at a remarkable rate. A dropping off in the demand for closed jobs was looked for, but with warmer spring days just ahead no such condition has as yet presented itself. It is probable, say manufacturers, that if composite figures from the various plants were obtainable, they would show that the present demand for new vehicles would be better than 70 per cent closed cars.

Manufacturers and dealers are asking themselves whether the real touring car is the sedan or coach instead of the open model. A very few years ago the sedan, for long distance touring purposes, was not looked upon with favor. It was considered too heavy and incapable of long distance trips. The open car, with its greater range of travel, was the only model that could be used for touring. In the good old days of the once famous Glidden tours any kind of a top was regarded as excess baggage, and in a majority of cases was dispensed with entirely. But that was years ago when the industry was struggling to obtain a foothold. Conditions were then radically different, and the manufacturer whose car covered 200 miles a day without a thorough overhauling considered he had something to talk about.

With the rapid progress in closed bodies the closed car has now developed until it weighs but little more than the open models, and lacks none of the performance ability of the so-called touring cars. Increased popularity, through the operation of the law of supply and demand, brought higher production and lower prices until today the coach type of the closed car is being built and marketed at the same prices as the open car—and in some cases even lower. The result is that the closed vehicle is now the ideal "touring car."

One to a Family.

If the present rate of automobile manufacturing continues, in another ten or twelve years the output will be sufficient to supply every family a new car every year. Roughly speaking, the production has doubled every four years during the last decade.

IN SULTAN'S PALACE.

The palace of the sultan of Selangor, on the Malay peninsula, secures its modern electric illumination through the use of a Delco-Light electric power plant, a General Motors product.

GOSSIP OF THE AUTO TRADE

RUMORS that the new Ajax car, to be built in Racine as a subsidiary of Nash motors, will be produced to enter into competition in the very low priced field, were definitely denied yesterday by C. W. Nash. The new car, he declared, will be produced on a large volume basis and will naturally be lower in price than any of the Nash models, but it will not be a cheap car. The job, he promises, will include quality features in design and construction entirely new in its field.

Local Hupmobile dealers celebrated Hup's big effort to catch up with the unusual spring demand last week by forming a parade of eighteen of the new eight cylinder models and delivering them to Chicago purchasers in state. The procession, in which all Cook county Hup dealers were represented, started from the Gambill Motor company, 2230 Michigan avenue, for its loop parade.

Manufacturers are coming back to the original principle of building "the complete car" in order to meet the modern automobile demand, in the opinion of Edgar Apperson. The pioneer who built one of the first American cars in 1893 predicts a steady improvement in manufacturing and merchandising through the next few years.

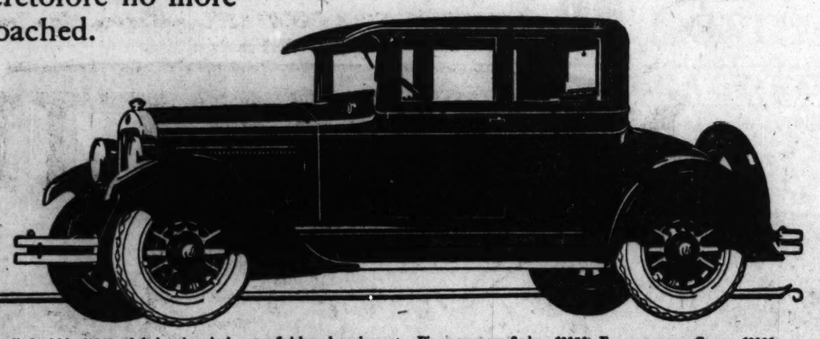
Reward Offered to "Vampire Catchers" in California

LOS ANGELES, Cal.—Automobile drivers who injure or kill persons and do not stop to render aid will not have easy sledding in this section during 1925, following action of the Automobile Club of Southern California. This was the renewal for the year of the rewards offered last year for information leading to the arrest and conviction, under the California vehicle act, of the driver of any motor vehicle which in any of the thirteen southern counties of California strikes and injures any person or collides with any other vehicle in such a manner as to injure the occupants thereof and fails to stop and render to such person all necessary assistance.

The rewards offered by the automobile club are $250 in the case of the driver of any vehicle causing the death of one or more persons and $50 in the case of the driver causing injury to one or more persons in any one accident in which no person is killed.

In renewing this offer it was brought out that during 1924 rewards were paid to seven claimants. These totalled $550 and the prosecutions that followed resulted in three drivers paying heavy fines, one receiving jail sentence, and three being placed on probation.

The new Hupmobile Eight makes a great and valuable contribution to motoring, since it brings a freedom and an ease heretofore no more than approached.



Four body types, not excelled within $1000 of their prices in beauty, finish and equipment. Five-passenger Sedan, $2375; Four-passenger Coupe, $2325; Touring Car and Roadster, $1975. Prices F. O. B. Detroit; tax to be added. Equipment includes balloon tires, bumpers front and rear, winter-front, snubbers, transmission lock, automatic windshield cleaner, rear view mirror. ¶ Hupmobile four-cylinder cars, in a complete line of popular body types, at prices which make them the outstanding value in their field.

Gone are the tenseness and the strain. In their place, a sense of relaxed and restful ease and comfort; a sense of the buoyancy of swift flight.

THE HUPMOBILE EIGHT

There is in some cars a steadiness that comes from sheer weight alone. But here is the steadiness of fluid power—power so free from sound and shock that you are literally unconscious of a moving mechanism. There now is a fresh delight in motoring, but you will not discover it in its finished form until you have spent an hour with the Hupmobile Eight. Why not a demonstration? A phone request will bring a Hupmobile Eight to your door.

Spring Advances Throttle in Big Motor Factories

Makers Speed Industry to Seventy Per Cent Capacity.

BY WHITCOMB WILLIAMS.

DETROIT, Mich., March 21. —[Special.]—Entering the third month of the year, leaders in the automotive industry have every reason to be encouraged over the outlook. Manufacturers are well fortified for any possible condition, from a buyers' strike to an unlooked for demand. They are not anticipating anything resembling a slump, but to the contrary they are satisfied that they are about to enter equally as busy a season as any yet experienced.

Daily and weekly increase of labor in practically every plant is a never failing barometer of existing conditions. Some plants are already on capacity production and others are steadily advancing, the result of incoming orders for both immediate and deferred deliveries.

Production took a decided spurt in February, and figures for that short month both as regards individual producers and the industry as a whole were gratifying. Several of the industry's largest producers set new records, despite the small number of working days.

From John N. Willys, president of the Willys-Overland company, comes a statement that the automobile industry will not be able to supply the demand made upon it during the early weeks of spring. He declares that, despite pessimistic utterances by prominent manufacturers that a saturation point has been reached, present conditions presage a demand that will be in excess of the supply that is now being built.

A review of production attained during January and February and analysis of general business conditions give cause for wonder at the many stories and rumors current during the last few weeks. The impression gained from the many "bear" yarns heard here, there, and everywhere is that the industry as a whole is in a more or less stagnant condition, that there are squeakes in factory wheels, and that the outlook is heavily clouded. Actual and indisputable figures, however, point directly opposite.

Since the first day of January production schedules, as a whole, have been gradually increased, and the approximate number of 277,000 cars and trucks produced in February is an increase of 15 per cent over January, and March will surely see a further gain in output. Truck production is showing a rapid increase, caused to a great extent by the unprecedented demand to busses. Dealers throughout the country are calling for larger shipments than they anticipated would be sufficient to supply the demand in their various districts.

The spring selling season is scheduled to commence before the end of the present month, and there is every reason to believe, after a careful checking up, that the industry will show marked strides during the next few weeks and that the total units produced during the first quarter of 1925 will compare favorably with the aggregate production of the first quarter of 1923—the banner year.

At the present time the industry, as a whole, is operating at about 70 per cent capacity, with an increased ratio probable before the 1st of March. It is a noticeable fact, however, that makers of smaller cars are getting the bulk of the business at present. Among the concerns which have speeded up output are Chevrolet, Ford, Hudson, Dodge, Nash, Maxwell, Packard, Paige, and Willys-Overland.

Motors in Alaska.

Approximately 90 per cent of the traffic on the main wagon roads in Alaska last year was handled by motors, and a large percentage of the travel on the sled roads of the interior by tractor. Alaska has 1,498 miles of wagon road, 1,088 miles of sled road, 6,236 miles of permanent trail, and 712 miles of temporary flagged trail.

SUBSTITUTE FOR GAS.

A Russian reports having perfected a method by which a better and cheaper gasoline substitute may be derived from vegetable oils, crude oil and coal tar. Even the residue of this process, he says, is higher in efficiency than that of the gasoline residue.

Want Better Reports.

That cities are being charged with accidents not occurring within their territories in disclosed in a study of automobile accidents made monthly by the National Safety council. In many instances, persons injured on country roads in accidents from various causes, including improved highways unprotected by proper safeguards, are brought to city hospitals. In case of death, the city is then charged with the accident when as a matter of statistical accuracy the county in which the accident occurred should be charged. To reduce the increasing number of highway accidents, highway commissions in many districts are installing heavy wire link highway guards at curves and embankments, placing warning signs at proper points, removing sight obscuring shrubbery, and in other ways making highways safer for travel.

Odd and Even.

"No parking" is now enforced in Paris. Cars may stop on odd numbered days on the odd numbered side of small streets and on even days on the even numbered side. Modern traffic signals, such as are used in the United States, also have helped to speed traffic on the boulevards.

REMOVE AIR.

If a quill is inserted in a puncture, all the air can be removed more quickly, and the vulcanizing can be speeded up.

MOTORDOM'S LATEST BATH

Chicago's south side has the newest wrinkle in automobile maintenance—a car laundry which completely cleans and polishes the machine in eleven minutes. This shows the 150 foot runway with its ingenious arrangement of shovers.

Millionaire Is First to Sign for Hoosier Race

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind.—Cliff Durant, millionaire racing driver, who sold his $25,000 racing automobile—the most expensive speedster in the world—for a song last June, after an unsuccessful competition in the Indianapolis race, and announced his retirement from the speeding sport, in which he has been a famous patron for many years, is coming back to the track.

After a year in his hibernating spot Durant has poked his speeding ambitions into the competition again and has entered a car in the 500 mile race which will be held at the Indianapolis motor speedway Saturday, May 30. He is the first owner to enter a mount in the thirteenth annual five century tour at the Indianapolis speed course, and his car will be known as No. 1 when it rolls to the tape.

The wealthy speed merchant would give no details of the car which he has entered and which he will drive in the coming race, though reports filtering through from the Pacific coast, where Durant makes his home, are to the effect that a certain little machine shop in a western city has been a busy place for many months, with workmen designing and planning Durant's mount behind more or less closed doors.

Durant always brings a sensation of speed to the Indianapolis track, where he is one of the most diligent drivers in his preparation for the long race. To him automobile racing is a sincere hobby.

During the last year Cliff has been making a minute inspection of the South sea islands in a new yacht which was built especially for the trip.

THE INQUIRING REPORTER

He's Out to Learn the Truth About Motordom.

The Tribune will pay $5 for each question accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send name and address with your question to "The Inquiring Reporter," Chicago Tribune. For today's question $5 is awarded to Mrs. L. De Young, 1830 South Third avenue, Maywood, Ill.

The Question.

What motor trip are you looking forward to when the nice spring weather arrives?

Where Asked.

Adams and Clark streets.

The Answers.

Alfred Andersen, 1157 Belmont avenue—The best trip I can think of for early spring would be straight north over the Wisconsin paved and gravel roads to a little lake I discovered last year in northern Wisconsin. Starting ahead of the usual mob that fills northern roads and resorts in the summer, I could really enjoy the state roads and some private fishing.

Howard J. Leonard, 1421 Olive avenue, salesman — A spring trip over the National highway to Washington, D. C., is the kind of May dish that will go best with me. This route is south from Chicago to Indianapolis and east through Ohio and the mountains. Spring down there is well advanced as compared to the weather here and the trip is ideal.

H. F. Ackley, 3032 Sheffield avenue, salesman—I think the trip down into the Kentucky mountains over the new East Dixie highway is the best bet for spring. This new road is improved nearly all the way now and can be driven without the old time southern road troubles. The country, too, is new to motordistrict.

H. M. Kean, 707 Sherman avenue, Evanston, executive—The best spring trips by car all center in the Cook county forest preserves. This year the county roads leading to the various preserves are paved and motorists can spend weeks in prowling through the thousands of acres of primitive lands in the preserve district.

Joseph Madden, 3833 North Lowell avenue, bank worker—The best spring trip is down through Illinois to the tip of the state at Cairo, where spring always comes first and where paved roads now make the old mud bath a joke. People in Chicago don't know enough about their own state, but the paved road system now makes it possible to reach every nook and corner.

FARM AND GARDEN

Farmers Clash Over Merit of Double Deck Cow

One Commends; Another Calls Her Next to Useless.

Below is printed the fifth of a series of articles dealing with dual purpose cows. Here are quoted letters of leaders in the cattle breeding field. Letters from agricultural leaders and from farmers will be welcome, particularly from those who have a chance to compare revenues from herds producing milk alone, or beef alone, with the income from dual purpose herds that produce both milk and beef.

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.

STOCKMEN are unconciously adopting a single standard of judging cattle in this country.

A cow must make money, regardless of size, color, or breed, or the thinking American farmer has no use for her. Single, double, and triple deckers must measure up to this yardstick.

"Will that cow make money for me?" is what every farmer asks whenever cattle are bought and sold, whether at public auction or private sale between neighbors. But no single breed can answer that question satisfactorily for farmers in the different sections of the country. A breed that makes money in one section may not yield a satisfactory profit for farmers in another section. Money making dairy cattle in northern Illinois, for example, may be the wrong kind for farmers in northern Missouri or western Nebraska.

Country's Face Changes.

Not many generations ago the beef breeds and the dual purpose breeds were popular on farms in sections of Illinois where the dairy breeds dominate today. Conditions changed and the breeds were changed to meet the demand. Conditions are changing in other sections. Along with the changes in economic conditions of the various communities, established breeds will be gradually shifted to new districts and others that meet the new demands will take their places.

The agricultural complexion of the entire country has changed within the last two decades, and this will no doubt have a tendency to popularize some breeds of cattle and push others into the background. Breed sentimentalism must go, along with the scrub cow, as farmers become more familiar with the dollar and cent standard now in common use among farmers who make money producing milk and beef.

One Thinks This.

Letters coming from farmers and students in breeding, following a series of articles on the dual purpose cow printed in this department within the last few weeks, indicate the striking difference of opinions concerning the merits of breeds and the value of double decker breeds.

D. P. McCracken of Paxton, Ill., a Milking Shorthorn enthusiast, writes, "If the big round world were suddenly forced to a choice of a single breed of cattle, the tricolor, triple decker, the triple B breed, the one equally willing to be bottled, buttered, or beefed would win."

Farmers who wrote the two letters below hold opposite views of the dual purpose cow.

J. W. Hyde of Altoona, Kas., writes: "I am not in any sense a union man; especially is this true in my farming operations. When I hire a man to plow I expect him also to build fences when occasion requires. I expect him to work as many hours a day as I do and do as many different kinds of work as the farm requires.

"The same principle applies equally strongly to my farm live stock operations. No cow shall look me in the face and claim that because she raises a good beef calf she shall not also give milk or because she works in my dairy she shall be excused from producing a good calf each year.

"I breed Shorthorn cattle, and choose those families that have good dual ancestry back of them. I test every cow's milk with scales and Babcock tester. I give her a fair trial, and if she fails to give enough milk the first year to put her in the record of merit, or if she fails to produce a good beef calf, away she must go to the block, for every cow on this farm must do both—produce a good calf and give a profitable flow of milk. This has been my rule for the thirty-seven years I have been farming, and by this rule I have been able to stay on the farm and keep my seven children in school, high school, and college.

"Farm cattle to be successful must be well fed, and I believe in keeping the kind that keep me instead of my keeping them."

Another Thinks That.

John F. Cohen, 800 South Kedzie avenue, Chicago, who is hundreds of miles away from the sun scorched prairies of the Sunflower state and under the shadows of the Chicago dairy territory, writes: "I would like to say that the dual purpose cows, when taken in a scientific and practical sense, are next to useless.

"Building the Shorthorn cow—we shall use the Shorthorn for illustration purposes—for milk was a mistake made by some agriculturist. The Shorthorn is naturally beefy, and when built for milk part of her qualities as a beef animal are taken away and her qualities for milking purposes are poor to start with. In order to bring these milking qualities up to a profitable level it has taken a good many years to achieve this end, and the average milking Shorthorn cow produces 8,000 pounds of milk per annum—we are talking about the average cow on the farm."

Mr. Cohen also gives records of cows from the Shorthorn year book of 1923 showing that one individual produced 10,622 pounds of milk and 443 pounds of butterfat. He adds: "A dairy type of cow would produce 20,000 pounds of milk."

Continuing, Mr. Cohen says, "When choosing cattle, whether for beef or milk, it is necessary to take into consideration the location of the farm—distance from big cities and towns. Dairy farms are situated within a radius of 200 miles or less of Chicago. If farther than this, the milk is in danger of being soured before it reaches the consumer. It is claimed that the great in-between spaces are adaptable to dual purpose cows. It would necessarily take a lot of time to bring the consumer the small amount of milk that the cows would produce.

Favors Distinct Types.

"I believe it is practical to put this land into grain and stock farms. Of course, it is possible in some localities, with good express train service, to have cows, but the general land in the United States has not such service.

"Now, we will take into consideration the beef qualities of these cattle. A calf raised for beef whose dam is a Hereford will be much heavier than a calf whose dam is a milking Shorthorn. It is cheaper to fatten the calf than it is the dual purpose calf. Although the calf may look beefy, the milking qualities are there all the same, and it is just as easy for a dual purpose calf to put its feed into hard muscle as it is to put it into soft flesh.

"So upon careful study the farmer will find it more profitable to raise distinct types of cattle than he will if he raises Milking Shorthorns because, don't forget, a cow is like man—it is better for her to do one thing perfectly than two not so well."

NATURAL SILO

GARDEN NOTES

Running a farm garden is no longer a boy's job. It plays such an important part in keeping the cost of living down on the farm that every farmer can afford to take a few days off in the early part of the season to plow and plant the garden. Dean Herbert W. Mumford of the state agricultural college says gardening is a man's job.

Short seasons in this section make it necessary for gardeners to start their lettuce in hotbeds or greenhouses in order to mature big, solid, crispy heads before hot weather. Lettuce is a cool weather crop. Plant the seeds within the next few days so the seedlings will be far enough along for transplanting as soon as the ground is workable.

Roberts of the University of Wisconsin at Madison has recently issued a bulletin, No. 370, which he calls "How to Prune the Young Cherry Tree," that should be of value to every orchardist who is establishing a new cherry orchard. The bulletin is filled with more than a dozen actual photographs of trees, showing the grower just how to trim the branches and shape the trees to avoid trouble later when the orchard gets older.

Illinois Farms Make a Limestone Record

Limestone came flying from every direction on to the farms of Illinois last year. A fourth of all the agricultural limestone used in the United States last year was put on farms in this state.

Farmers in Illinois bought 500,000 tons of limestone to use on the soil, according to figures compiled by J. R. Bent of the Illinois Agricultural association, while farmers throughout the country used only 2,000,000 tons.

Farm advisers over the state were responsible for the enormous amount of limestone used. Nearly half of the 1924 supply was bought through the county farm bureaus.

Dairy Bill Gives Illinois Year to Clean Up Herds

NEWS of the recent action taken by dairy farmers in the Chicago territory, asking health commissioners to issue regulations prohibiting the sale of milk from untested cattle, has spread across the country as the most drastic and the most progressive move ever taken by dairymen supplying products to a large city.

More than 1,500 tested cattle were represented by the group of approximately 100 milk producers, who met with veterinarians, physicians, health authorities, and sanitation experts a few days ago at the City club in Chicago. The herds ranged in size from nine to 200.

Thousands More Needed.

Many of these dairymen said they tested their herds several years ago and had stood a loss with the hope that cleaning up their herds would be the first step in sanitation that would eventually lead to the production of a higher quality of milk, better prices for the producer, more business for distributors, and purer and more wholesome products for city consumers.

In the drafting of their plans for the future the farmers who attended the meeting said they realized that more tested cattle would be needed to supply Chicago with the 1,250,000 quarts that are now being consumed in the city daily, according to figures given by Dr. H. C. Becker of the health department's food inspection division. With 204,000 cattle already tested in the Chicago counties of Wisconsin, Illinois, Indiana, and Michigan, farmers and eradication officials claim they will need from 50,000 to 100,000 more, which could be easily tested by Jan. 1 if the veterinarians are given adequate state funds and supported by the farmers.

Fairness to All.

B. L. Thomas of Ringwood, chairman of the permanent committee representing the dairymen with tested herds, said the farmers at the Chicago meeting wanted to be fair with the men who had not yet tested their herds.

"In our resolution we ask the health commissioners of cities and towns in the Chicago territory to issue their regulations to become effective the first of next year," said Mr. Thomas. "This will give hundreds of farmers time to get their herds under state and federal supervision."

The committee has sent copies of the resolution to health authorities, governors and members of the legislatures in the four states, state agricultural departments, and state and federal veterinarians who are in active charge of the tuberculosis testing work.

Here's the Resolution.

The resolution unanimously adopted by the dairymen at the Chicago meeting is as follows:

"WHEREAS, Representative dairymen from all counties in the four states which supply milk to the City of Chicago, who have placed their herds under state and federal supervision, believe that on and after Jan. 1, 1926, there will be enough tested cattle to supply Chicago and other towns and cities in the Chicago milk territory with clean, wholesome milk from cattle free from tuberculosis. Therefore, be it

"RESOLVED, That Dr. Herman H. Bundesen, health commissioner of Chicago, and the health commissioners of other towns in the Chicago territory be requested and urged to issue regulations allowing only milk, cream, butter, skim milk, buttermilk and ice cream stock from cattle tested for tuberculosis annually under state and federal supervision to be sold to citizens in their respective towns. Be it further

"RESOLVED, That milk distributors and dealers be requested to cooperate with the health departments in enforcing the delivery of milk from cattle tested under state and federal supervision through trade regulations. Be it further

"RESOLVED, That the legislatures of Wisconsin, Illinois, Indiana, and Michigan be requested and encouraged to enact the necessary laws and make sufficient appropriations to enable dairymen to rid their herds of tuberculosis and thus qualify as producers of milk which meets the proposed requirements of Chicago and other towns in the Chicago territory. Be it further

"RESOLVED, That we, as representative dairymen of the Chicago territory, urge the passage of Senate Bill 120 and House Bill 176 now pending in the Illinois legisature and similar legislation in other states. Be it further

"RESOLVED, That copies of this resolution be transmitted to the health commissioners of Chicago and other towns in the Chicago territory, the governors and members of the legislatures of the four states concerned, their department of agriculture and the federal and state veterinarians in charge of tuberculosis eradication in these four states."

What will happen on the home-stretch?

THE history of the race track is a story of victories by fine blooded horses. It is always a thoroughbred that thrills his owner by coming through on the home-stretch to win.

And there is a similar story of success in the garden. It's the purebred seeds which reward the gardener with a full and complete harvest.

For blood will tell in the garden just as it tells on the race track. Purebred stock has the "stuff"—the vitality and quality which makes it start with vigor and finish a winner instead of an also ran.

Plant Ferry's purebred Seeds because they have a purebred ancestry. The sound, flavorful vegetables you gather—the fragrant flowers that cheer you will prove that it pays to put your faith in these seeds.

We know the history of our seeds. For sixty-nine years we have watched the ideal parent plants, roguing out undesirables, selecting the finest for harvest. Then after each harvest we test these seeds in our great proving grounds to observe their trueness to type.

Look to Ferry's purebred Seeds as the means to a paying garden. Buy them now "at the store around the corner" from the familiar Ferry Box. Plant them with the same faith that you have in the sun and rain and soil.

SHORT COVERING CAUSES SLIGHT WHEAT ADVANCE

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

There was heavy short covering in May wheat early. Despite considerable opposition, the price advanced to $1.71¾, or 20½c over the inside figure on Tuesday.

At the exterme top Chicago May was within about 6½c of Liverpool which with the refusal of Winnipeg to follow the upturn led to heavy realizing and a reaction, but the finish was firm at $1.68¼@1.68⅝, a net gain of ½c for the day. New crop futures were ½@½c lower. Corn was heavy and ½@1¼c lower. Oats were ½c lower to ⅝c higher and rye ½@⅞c lower.

Liquidation in the grain markets ran its course during last week, and there was a decided recovery from the inside figures, with wheat in the lead. As compared with the finish of the previous week wheat showed a net loss of 1½@⅞, with September leading. Corn was off 5½@5¾c, oats 1⅜@1⅝c, and rye 7@9c. Lard closed 7½@12½c lower, ribs 10c higher to 5c lower, and bellies 27½@45c higher.

Short Covering in Wheat.

The bulk of the aggressive buying in May wheat was attributed to short covering, as there was nothing in the news to induce traders to operate extensively on the buying side. The narrow spread between Chicago and Liverpool checked export business and very little business was put through. Winnipeg fluctuated rapidly, at one time going to a discount under Chicago, but closed at 1¾c over. Kansas City and St. Louis reported a good milling demand, with sales of 50,000 bu from Kansas City.

Dry weather continues in parts of Texas, Oklahoma, and Kansas and unfavorable crop reports are rapidly increasing, with the forecast for generally fair over the week-end. Buenos Aires closed unchanged to ½c lower, while Liverpool made a poor response to the upturn in America on Friday and closed 3@3¼d higher.

Bulk of the trade in corn was of a professional character, and while there was a moderate advance early with wheat the market flattened out when selling orders appeared and reacted 2¼@2⅝c from the top and finished about the low point. Eastern cash demand was again slow and May is gradually declining as compared with July, finishing 3⅝c under the deferred delivery. Oats showed more strength than corn, due to the relatively low price. Export sales of 70,000 bu were reported at the seaboard.

Rye declined in sympathy with wheat. A cargo of 250,000 bu was reported sold for export, and foreign cables were more favorable to holders but had little effect.

Easier Tone in Lard.

Selling of lard by commission houses on the weakness in corn more than offset buying by shorts and smaller packers and the strength in hogs, and the finish was 2½@10c lower. Ribs were unchanged to 2½c lower and bellies unchanged. Prices follow:

CASH·GRAIN NEWS

A little hard winter wheat and 250,000 bu rye were reported sold at the seaboard, but the foreign demand for wheat on the whole was slow, as Argentine has gone to a liberal discount as compared with American. Winnipeg reported a good demand for Manitobas for shipment at the opening of navigation.

Chicago handlers sold 30,000 bu wheat, 21,000 bu corn, and 22,000 bu oats to the domestic trade with 10,000 bu oats delivered on March contracts.

Milling demand for cash wheat was fair both here and in the southwest. Basis here was unchanged with No 2 red nominally 7@8c over May and No 2 hard May price to 2c over. Kansas City prices were 1@3c higher; St. Louis 1c higher, with limited offerings.

Low grades of cash corn continue to gain on the May. No 3 grades were 1½@4¼c under the future, with No 4 grades 4½@9½c under; No 5 grades, 7½@12c under and No 6 grades 13@14½c under. Very little No 6 and sample grade is coming forward now. Outside markets were unchanged to 3c higher.

Demand for cash oats was fair with No 2 white 3c over and No 3 white ¾@2c over the future.

Official receipts of grain at Chicago Saturday: Wheat, 21 cars; corn, 76 cars; oats, 55 cars; rye, 3 cars; barley, 17 cars.

SILK MARKET.

New York, March 21.—Silk unchanged.

WORLD'S·GRAIN MARKET·NEWS

The largest of the Florida traders who were short was said to have covered his line yesterday through four of the big commission houses, causing the advance in May wheat to $1.71¾. Week end profit taking was responsible for the late break of 2c. Sentiment at the close was mixed with the bull element strongly of the belief that developments in the new week will be in their favor. There were numerous bears, however, who are taking advantage of all bulges to put out fresh lines.

Those who are bearish on wheat believe that the advance has discounted all the bullish news which the trade is expecting on Monday. At the top price yesterday May wheat was 20¼c above the low point on Tuesday. The Grain Futures administration is investigating the decline, and a few traders have sent in complaints asking that Dr. Duvel also investigate the advance.

Dry weather in the southwest is becoming more of a factor in wheat as the crop in some sections of Kansas and western Oklahoma, and particularly in Texas, is in bad shape. It is said that unless rains come very soon the Texas grain crop this year will be extremely light.

"I think the wheat trade is more nearly evened up than at any time on the crop," says J. P. Griffin. "In view of the short crop and lack of reserves in Canada, the relative weakness there on Friday, together with the big discount at Minneapolis, is a fly in the ointment for the bulls. Winnipeg and Minneapolis must advance materially, compared with Chicago, if we are on a real bull foundation."

A decrease of around 4,000,000 bu in the visible supply of wheat, perhaps more, is expected to be shown in Monday's report. Chicago stocks are estimated to have decreased 300,000 bu, Kansas City, 750,000 bu; Buffalo, 1,250,000 to 1,500,000 bu, and Galveston around 1,000,000 bu. World's shipments are estimated at 17,500,000 bu, a small increase over last year. It will be no surprise to see another moderate increase on ocean passage.

Northwestern elevator interests are buying May and selling July oats at 1⅝c difference. Commission houses were buying July oats to a moderate extent.

President F. L. Carey of the Chicago Board of Trade returned from Florida yesterday. He is taking a neutral stand on wheat for the time being. Thomas Howell, who is in Florida, is not expected to return for some time.

Bids on May wheat in Winnipeg sold at $1.55 and $1.62, and closed at the latter figure. Offers were $1.61@1.63, with the close at $1.61.

Reports from Oklahoma to the Grain Dealers association indicate an average abandonment of wheat acreage of 13.7 per cent. Nearly all reports indicate the need of rain.

NATIONAL TEA SALES, PROFITS SET A RECORD

The National Tea company last year had a substantial gain in sales and profits over those of 1923. The company's annual report shows sales of $39,065,829, compared with $31,292,239 in 1923, the best previous year, and $30,632,239 in 1922. Net profits before federal taxes were $1,686,207, compared with $1,244,367 in 1923. After federal taxes the year's income amounted to $1,472,992, as against $1,093,352 in the preceding twelve months.

The balance for common dividends was $1,382,984, or $37.65 a share on the 50,000 common shares outstanding, compared with a balance of $963,726, or $48.18 a share, on 20,000 shares in 1923. During 1924 30,000 additional shares of common stock were distributed as a 50 per cent stock dividend, in addition to cash dividend payments of $376,060. Only $150,000 was charged against surplus for the stock dividend, and after sinking fund adjustments and the total surplus on Dec. 31, including appropriations for redemption of preferred stock, was $5,767,656, compared with $4,910,782 at the close of 1923. Of this, $2,000,000 is described as capital surplus.

The company's balance sheet as of Dec. 31 last shows total assets and liabilities of $12,074,862, compared with $9,850,216 a year previous. Total current assets are $5,527,467 and current liabilities $3,357,751. The net worth shown for the 50,000 shares of common stock is $6,804,795, or $176 a share. This includes $2,079,022 for good will, and with this deducted the tangible book value is $94 a share.

DRY GOODS AND GARMENT NEWS

[Copyright: 1925: Fairchild News Service.]

BOSTON.—In an effort to obtain first hand information of foreign markets, so American trade can be expanded, a series of conferences will be held at Washington between American manufacturers and trade and commercial representatives of all foreign governments maintaining diplomatic relations with the United States. The conference will take place April 6, 7, and 8.

NEW YORK.—The Appellate division of the Supreme court today handed down an opinion which held that the long recognized "common law" trade mark was invalid where the identifying name was that of a geographical, political, or other widely used term. The case at issue was an injunction restraining a department store from selling "Normandy voil dresses," the plaintiff in the proceedings claiming it was recognized in the trade as manufacturing "Normandy voil," and that the dresses were not made from its fabrics.

DRY GOODS MARKET.

NEW YORK, March 21.—Cotton goods were quiet today, with prices on sheetings and print cloths fairly steady. Activity in novelty wash goods featured the market. Yarns were quiet and easier. Raw silk was unchanged for the day, a holiday at Yokohama leading to few cables. Burlaps were quiet. Woolen and worsted mills were less active, owing to slow development of fall business. Silk printed fabrics were active.

SUGAR MARKETS.

NEW YORK, March 21.—SUGAR—Raw, unchanged; spots, 4.74c, duty paid. Futures unchanged to 2 points net higher; March closed, 3.00c; May, 3.04c; July, 3.12c; September, 3.34c. Refined unchanged at 6.00@6.20c for fine granulated, but most refiners took orders below list levels. Refined futures, nominal.

Pere Marquette Lease to Nickel Plate Approved

Detroit, March 21.—Stockholders of the Pere Marquette railway today ratified leasing of the road to the Nickel Plate system.

This is the final step necessary, aside from permission of the interstate commerce commission to place the Pere Marquette in the merger being undertaken by the Van Sweringens of Cleveland. The proposed lease is for 999 years, similar to that presented to the New York, Chicago and St. Louis, the Chesapeake and Ohio, the Hocking Valley railway and the Erie railroads. Seventy two per cent of the stock of the Pere Marquette was represented at today's meeting and no dissenting vote was cast.

RUBBER MARKET.

New York, March 21.—Rubber, smoked ribbed sheets, spot, 12¼c.

RAILROAD NOTES

The February report of the Nickel Plate shows a net railway operating income of $630,945, a decrease of $140,490 from the corresponding month of 1924. Net income after all charges was $602,561, a decrease of $170,004.

The February report of the St. Louis-San Francisco shows an increase of $127,000 in net operating income to $1,501,000 compared with the same month last year. Surplus after charges was $328,000, an increase of $125,000.

Railroad rates on petroleum products moving from Oklahoma, producing territory to Indiana points were held to be unjustified by the interstate commerce commission and reductions were ordered on or before May 25.

Traffic conditions continue favorable on railroads operating east from Chicago and St. Louis, and the total compares well with the big figure of a year ago, the tonnage of most commodities exceeding that of the previous corresponding season.

Equipment orders last week had an estimated value exceeding $4,000,000, according to the Railway Age. Orders included 6 locomotives, 1,145 freight cars, and 24 passenger cars.

Build Your Fortune From these Tested Plans!

I Learned from Big Investors How to Become Independent in Only a Few Years on a Small Salary.

"I went to an old banker for financial advice," a successful investor wrote recently. "He frankly told me exactly how he was investing his money, exactly how he had built up his fortune. His secret was a revelation to me! He showed me how to double my money in a little over ten years, and how to build a comfortable fortune by following his tested plans. That talk took place five years ago. Every year I have invested $1,000 according to his plan in the safest securities I could buy—First Mortgage Real Estate Bonds. By laying aside $1,000 each year for the next twenty-five I expect to have at the age of 57 the splendid fortune of $83,801.70! Of this amount only $30,000 will be money which I have saved and invested, the remainder being the interest earned and reinvested (at 6%)."

Any man or woman can accumulate a fortune in exactly the same way. It is a significant fact that many of the larger investors who formerly bought tax exempt securities are concentrating their funds in First Mortgage Real Estate Bonds. Through following tested plans it is possible for you to attain wealth without risk. These unusual plans are fully described in a book which has started thousands on the road to substantial wealth. This book will be sent you absolutely without charge or obligation of any kind. Merely fill out the request blank below.

HOOVER REPORTS ON CITIES, SHOW MODERN TRENDS

BY SCRUTATOR.

The daily bulletins from Mr. Hoover's census of the finances of states and cities for 1923 indicate that the survey nearly is complete. The totals for the manufacturing census for that year are in, and the detailed tables probably will be hopping along soon.

Over in the treasury department there has been an improvement in the time of publication of income tax results since Secretary Mellon got on the job. If the American people got nothing else out of the political revolution of 1920 they obtained a better statistical service.

But there is yet room for improvement. To specify all that might be done would require a book, but in the matter of time alone it is regrettable that income tax returns cannot be announced earlier.

The report on the 1922 collection is much more comprehensive than former printed reports, but if we had the 1923 figures at hand to check against the manufacturing census of that year we would be able to get a much better line on things as they are. The great gains for labor and for the consumer scored in the period of recovery from the last depression are evident in the census figures. How capital fared would be better known if we had the 1923 corporation tax results at hand. Even the 1922 figures indicate that profits were picking up at a rate doubling that of 1921. There was much complaint in 1923 that despite the huge volume of production in that year profits were not great. Subsequent dividend announcements hardly confirmed this view, however. The writer's guess is that the net corporate income which will be reported when the 1923 figures are made public will compare favorably with that of 1919 or 1920 in most lines.

Buried in the census and income reports as well as in the figures of the departments of agriculture and the interior are facts which refute most of the fallacies which have plagued our politics for decades. With all its resources of publication it is a pity that the government has not yet undertaken to prepare expositions of this matter in a form which would be readable and interesting to the man of average curiosity and public spirit.

The census bureau has made a beginning in that direction. Three popular monographs dealing respectively with the racial composition of our population, the integration of industrial control, and the mortgage burden upon American homes have appeared. The monograph on population is of special interest, as it, like the recent immigration law, breaks an ancient one sided taboo on the subject of race, that long dominated our conventional culture and dress parade statesmanship, as distinguished from our every day life and conversation and our practical politics. Strange is it not that the breaking down of this silly taboo in recent years meets with the alarm and condemnation of our professional liberals, who hail with such joy the disappearance of the kindred Victorian taboo on sex?

Popular interpretation of the statistics which have cost the people millions to collect cannot be objected to as conservative propaganda in view of the constant stream of socialistic suggestion emanating from those government bureaus concerned with paternalistic objectives.

CORPORATION EARNINGS

EMPIRE BRITISH STEEL.

Total net earnings for the year ended Dec. 31, 1924, after deduction of manufacturing, selling, and administrative expenses, were $925,774, as compared with $4,444,344 in the previous year, and charges for depreciation, sinking fund, bond discount and preferred dividends created a deficit of $2,357,620, completely wiping out the accumulated surplus. By the liquidation of $3,600,000 of its inventories the corporation's working capital was reduced $11,421,377.

A. G. SPAULDING & BROTHERS.

Net profits declined in 1924 to $1,081,682 after depreciation, interest, and federal taxes, compared with $1,411,658 in 1923. This is equal to $13.03 a share on the common stock after preferred dividends, against $19.35 a share the year before.

ALASKA JUNEAU GOLD MINING.

For the year ended Dec. 31, 1924, gross receipts were $2,055,781, against $1,518,033 in 1923. Net income after charges and depreciation, but before depletion, was $90,280, against a net loss of $197,908 in 1923. The profit and loss deficit at the end of the year was $684,522, against $1,074,803 at the close of 1923.

New York, March 21.—A secondary reaction swept over today's stock market in the final hour, halting a rally which had carried over from the previous day, and bringing about net losses of one to five points in final quotations. The suddenness of the decline led to a belief that it originated with professional traders, who apparently took advantage of the impaired technical position resulting from the recent sharp rebound.

The Pan-American petroleum issues bore the brunt of the selling pressure. The A and B stocks had touched new high levels on the movement at 81¼ and 82, respectively, but they broke later to 77 and 77¾, closing at the bottom prices for net losses of 3 and 3¾ points respectively. Traders who had bought these stocks around their low levels last week were quick to take profits when the first signs of weakness appeared.

New York Tractions Drop.

A sudden break in the Interborough Rapid Transit issues was somewhat of a mystery. The common stock fell 8 points to a new low at 16¼, and then rallied to 18, while Manhattan Company Guaranteed and the modified guaranteed dropped 14 and 4¾ points respectively. The selling was believed to reflect the company's urgent need of new capital in order to purchase new equipment and pay for the cost of lengthening its subway platforms.

All the so-called pivotal industrials lost ground. U. S. Steel common showed a net loss of 1¼ at 120¾, Baldwin fell back 3¾ to 123½, American Can yielded 2½ to 174, and Studebaker closed nearly a point lower at 42¾. United States Cast Iron Pipe, which touched 199 in the early trading, later fell back to 190¼ for a net loss of 4¾.

Industrial Shares Are Weak.

Some of the other outstanding weak spots in the industrial list included American Locomotive, General Electric, Commercial Solvents A, Nash Motors, and Savage Arms, all off 3 to 5 points. Independent strength was shown, however, by American Water Works, which touched a new record top at 48¾, and by American Beet Sugar, American Express, Federal Light and Traction, Loose-Wiles Biscuit, Union Tank Car, and United States Smelting, all of which closed 2@4 points higher.

Rails were mixed. Pere Marquette preferred advanced nearly 2 points and Frisco preferred 1, while Rock Island, Lackawanna, Norfolk and Western, Western Pacific, and a few others fell back a point or two. Jersey Central broke 4 points on a few sales.

Bond Prices Fairly Steady.

Bond prices held fairly steady, despite severe reactions which developed in local traction and several oil company issues. Interborough Rapid Transit bonds dropped 1 to 3 points to new low levels. Pan-American Petroleum 6 per cent convertible bonds yielded 2 points. Sinclair and other oil company liens maintained their gains fairly well.

Trading in the railroad section was marked by the further recovery of St. Paul obligations. Other changes were narrow and insignificant. Conversion of New York Central 6 per cent debentures into common stock, it was announced, had been proceeding at a rapid pace, with only $58,000,000 of the bonds now outstanding of the original issue of about $180,000,000.

New York Bank Loans Drop.

Big changes in the chief items of the weekly statement of the New York clearing house banks today can be ascribed to the transactions centering around the federal tax settlement period and to the liquidation on the stock exchange. Loans, discounts, and investments decreased $76,691,000, to a total of $5,246,000,000. Net demand deposits shrank $121,958,000, while time deposits increased $33,150,000. The surplus reserve of $15,431,000 reported a week ago was wiped out, and in its place a deficit of $21,819,470 was reported.

Net demand deposits were $4,373,904,000; time deposits, $598,207,000; circulation, $21,455,000; aggregate reserve, $944,661,000.

The Man who had Brains and Everything

Here is a man.

He has brains and everything.

He is about to purchase an automobile.

If he can sell his old one.

Once upon a time he owned a high priced single cylinder car.

It went chug-chug—

But the world was rosy.

He might get a nickel for it today if he had kept it.

Then he bought a high priced two cylinder automobile.

It went chug-chug—chug-chug—and made the neighbors stare, before it gave him peritonitis.

Isn't that what it does to you?

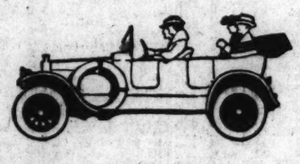
He couldn't get more than a few dollars in exchange for that car today.

Then he bought a four cylinder high priced automobile.

That seemed to him to be the top of the world.

If he had that car today he would have to find a stupid junk dealer to liquidate that inventory.

Then he bought a high priced six cylinder automobile.



"Well," said he to his wife, "I guess this is the peak of everything."

He got somewhere socially.

You can't blame him—don't speak harshly of him—he is a red blooded American.

Then one day the line eights and the straight eights appeared.

Smoother—quieter—speedier—snappier—peppier—more powerful—a joy—a treat—a thrill to drive.

So that started the downward course of the high priced sixes.

Here is a man who has brains and everything.

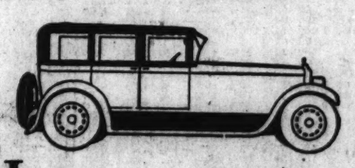
He is about to buy an automobile.

If he can sell his old one.

What do you think he is going to buy?

He is probably going to function mentally.

He will buy a Line Eight—if only for one reason.



He knows how much more it will be worth than a high priced six one year from today.

[The Great Jordan Line Eight sells for $1000 to $2000 below any car in its class. Remember it's an Eight. Of course, it costs more than most sixes. It's an Eight.]

FOR CHILDREN THIS SPRING TUB SILKS ARE EMPLOYED

by Corinne Lowe

NEW YORK.—(Special Correspondence.)—Speaking of the children's hour glass of fashion, its "sands" are still running. Particularly is this true of coats for the girl of from 6 to 14. Really surprising how often you find the spring coat carried out in kasha, camel's hair twill, plain camel's hair, and similar materials—all in the same hue of sand or beige!

A good example of such preference is found in the right hand figure of the panel at the left. Here is a charming model for the girl of from 6 to 10 which is developed in beige kasha piped with French blue taffeta and trimmed with matching bone buttons. It is the familiar cape coat worn season in and season out by well dressed children, but do not overlook the fact that this model identifies itself with the most recent modes by several new touches.

One of these is the scarf collar of blue taffeta. No, I haven't the temerity to advance the scarf collar as a new idea. Nevertheless I do claim that the adaptation of this mode manages to achieve an air of novelty. It does so because in the first place it is of taffeta, a material emphasized in spring fashions for young and old, and because in the second place it forms a choker collar with a dashing loop at the side.

The use of buttons! No, one can't claim for that, either, the value of an electrifying discovery. However, one can't pass over these buttons lightly, because they do represent such a powerful current in the mode. I remember hearing somebody say this winter that the French designers would probably administer an anesthetic to this trimming detail by the time that spring arrived, but spring is now here and there is no sign of the lethal chamber having got in its deadly work on buttons. They are employed more lavishly than ever, and on children's clothes they seem to be as active as on more mature modes.

This same little coat is by no means doomed to either kasha or sand color. It would look equally well in navy serge, for example, and in that case one would combine it with red taffeta or satin. This brings us to an important phase of the mode. For a long time, you know, we suffered a kind of naval disarmament. This spring, however, the navy is again raised to its full strength. Our dear, old fashioned, serviceable dark blue is back stronger than ever, and in junior fashions its revival is especially noteworthy. Navy coats trimmed with red are found in all the smartest resorts of children's styles.

You find this combination stressed in the Prince of Wales coats copied in miniature for the youthful belle. A word about these mannish garments which have for so many months been featured in adult modes. It is hard to know when one is really too young to "look very like a Wale." It seems to me that they begin to wear the famous ulster models almost from the moment that they crawl out of their perambulators and bassinets. But let us be more austere in our statements. Let us say that 8 or 9 is the proper age at which to don the toga principis. Assuredly from that age on you can go it. And this famous model in navy, in beige, and in the celebrated English materials is worn assiduously throughout the teens.

I like coats with capes. I think the cape is as becoming to the girl of from 4 to 12 as a curtsey. Fortunately, these designers humor my personal preference quite a bit. Among the many cape coats offered are quite a few with little shoulder capes arranged in triple tiers a la Directoire. The Directoire details are held over from winter in mature fashions, and they always make a valuable contribution to children's clothes. As a dress coat for the girl of from 4 to 10 or 12 what, for instance, could be more beguiling than one of these slim Directoire coats with the triple shoulder capes carried out in one of the ribbed silks in some of the colors now so fashionable—the various blues, including madonna, hydrangea, and periwinkle, green, maize, or some shade of red?

Often in watching the children of New York's millionaires as they play in Central park under the direction of governess or English nurse I have been impressed by the number who wore clothes of undeviating plainness. Everlasting little wash frocks—O, yes, hand made, to be sure, and of the finest materials—but nevertheless so terribly bromidic! And I have also been impressed by the fact that so many of these poor little victims of wealth were condemned to the simplest capes of navy serge.

It fills one with a deep gratitude to consider that we of straitened circumstances can afford to take a certain chance on individuality denied to these poor little rich girls. While we all know that simplicity is the keynote of perfection, we really don't have to be so boring about our simplicity. Thus concerning this question of the separate cape, there are so many distinctive ways of going about it. You can make this wrap for small girls as individual as can be, and that without any great expense. A testimony to the possibilities of the separate cape was afforded by a French model seen recently. It was a miniature duplicate of the circular and hooded type brought out this spring for the older folks and known as the Bedouin. Made of a beige colored cloth, it was trimmed about all the edges with lozenge shaped pieces of red leather. The inside of the hood had the same appliques in smaller proportions and the cape tied with red ribbon streamers. Simple, but, as the French would say, tout a fait different.

There is little change in the juvenile silhouette this spring. The only transformation is imposed by new and revived materials. Among these may be mentioned tub silks, in the most delightful of colorings and in a wide range of novel effects centering upon our old friends, the stripe and the plaid. Some of them are decidedly cubist in their achievement of color contrast and geometric design, a result to be expected in this season, when one hears so much of cubist patterns for the grownup. These silks are not styled "tub" just through politeness. They really stand the strain of suds and water, and for this reason they come recommended by the joint claims of smartness and practicability.

The various ways they make up such silks is quite bewildering. The tot of 3 may sport her little beltless slip-on in a striped or checked design developed in exquisite pastel tints, and her older sister of 16 may go to either party or tennis court clad in some other version of the same fabric.

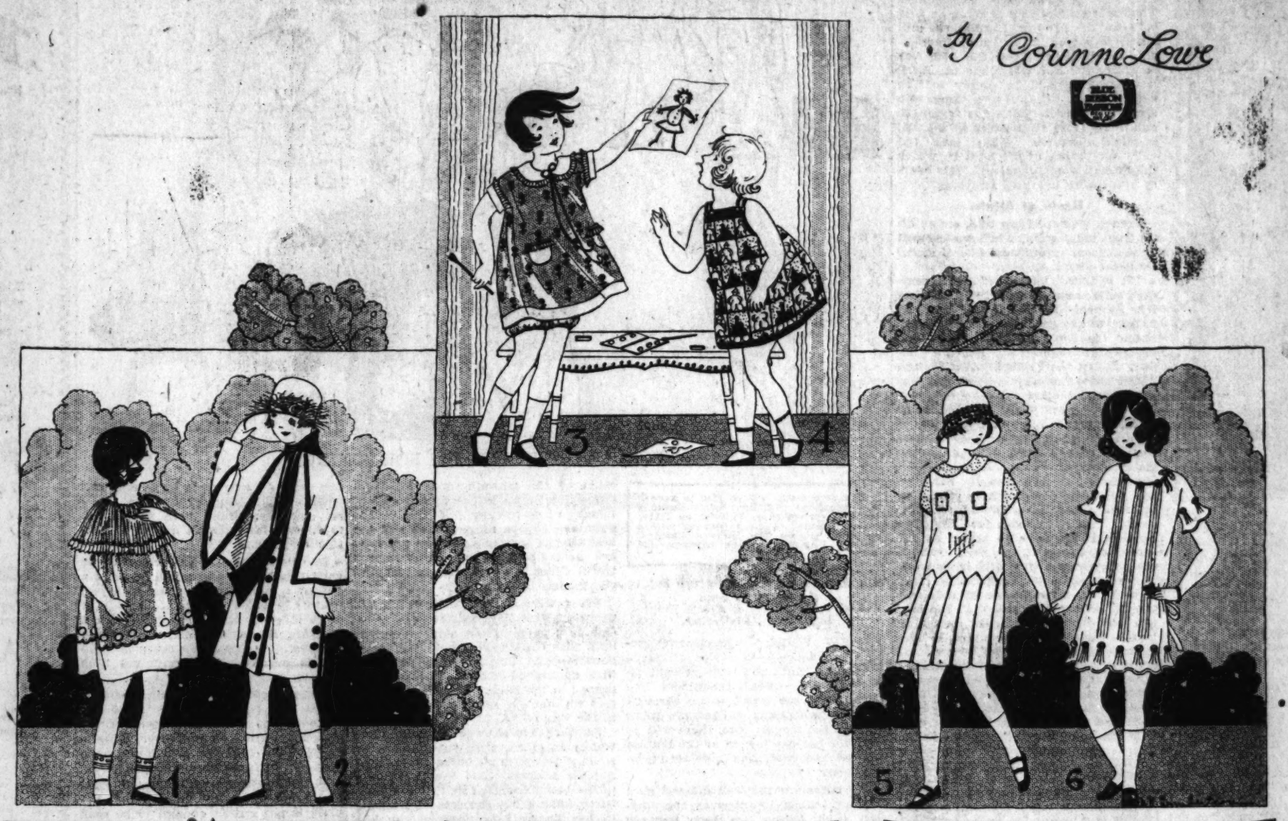
At the extreme left of our page we show for the wee bairn of from 2 to 6 the familiar unbelted mode in any fabric of which you think well. This might easily be carried out in one of those striped silks, in which case one would omit both the contrasting border and appliques of the skirt, and one would make the plaited bertha of organdy or batiste. Here it occurs in a lemon colored cotton fabric—make it anything you like—and its border of white appliqued in scallops gives the clew to appliqued white discs.

Skirts for the small miss are up to the same tricks as are those of more sophisticated modes. A good example of skirt behavior is furnished by the first of the two figures in our right hand panel. Here is an imported frock for the girl of from 6 to 10, made of cherry colored crepe de chine and setting on each of its box plaits in a pronounced point. The bodice is given character by sleeves and collar of cream colored net and by the openwork design appearing on the front. The material chosen brings this model definitely into the dress-up group, but there is no reason why the same line should not be followed in achieving a school frock. Omit the openwork on the front and preserve the box plaits. Make it in English broadcloth, alpaca, or silk serge and you have a practical little school dress.

I feel urged to make a special plea for the alpaca school frock for the girl of from 6 to 14. There is no more nonsense about alpaca than there is about a raincoat. It is always durable, and this year it has been jazzed up so much that it achieves the gayest of effects. Plaids and stripes are often employed in the alpaca school frock, and sometimes the figured skirt is topped by a bodice of plain alpaca. Thus one good model combines a skirt of striped red and blue with a bodice of plain blue, the skirt attached by bretelles and both the peasant sleeves and the panel front having a touch of red.

English broadcloth, both plain and figured; silk serge; surah; flannel—with this list of the fabrics most emphasized by spring modes for juveniles we complete our week's text.

[Copyright: 1925: By The Chicago Tribune.]



Though her silhouette be changeless, she from 2 to 6 may be comforted by many variations afforded her beltless slip-on. At the left we find it in a finely plaited bertha of white batiste on a lemon batiste bordered and appliqued in white. Next, for the girl of from 6 to 10, a beige kasha coat trimmed and scarfed in blue taffeta.

More comfort for 2 to 6 is located first in a play frock with accompanying bloomers, both fashioned of an English print that sprinkles blue flowers on a pink ground. White organdy bands, pockets, and collar! Second, an apron of checked, printed gingham in red and white with tiny straps over the shoulders.

For 6 to 10 or 11 is the first model, of cherry colored crepe touched with cream colored net. For the same age comes the party frock of pale georgette with tiny tucks and hand made flowers of self material.

WHY AMERICAN WOMEN HAVE NERVES

Prominent Physician Thinks It's Chiefly Because They Lack a Calm Acceptance of the Facts of Life

by Antoinette Donnelly

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—Is the American woman more of an idealist than her French sister? Is she more cowardly about facing the facts of life? Are her broken illusions about love, men, life in general, responsible for her tendency to nervous ailments?

Dr. Edmund Gros head of the American hospital in Paris, and consequently the best known American doctor in France, charges the American woman's inability to recognize that there is no such thing as perfection in life with much of the responsibility for her unstable nerves. He believes, as a result, she lacks balance and that this lack of balance is one big reason why so many become nervous wrecks and ugly old women before their time.

"French women," he says, "are more philosophic about life and, therefore, do not suffer as American women do from beauty destroying nervous diseases."

In a Position to Know.

Dr. Gros has spent years in America. In addition, his years in France give him an opportunity to speak comparatively of the French and American woman. His advice to the latter is: "Face the facts of life. Don't live in the clouds. Try to preserve your equilibrium, and you will have a better chance at preserving health and beauty to a ripe old age."

"We all know," says Dr. Gros "there is no such thing as perfection. Or we know it, if we will but stop to think of it. But American women do not stop to consider or resign themselves to this fact. They live in the clouds. This is particularly true when they are in love. The French woman in love is able to observe the situation. She may be able even to extract some humor from it, without sacrificing any of the beautiful quality of genuine affection. She knows life. If something occurs to disappoint her—does she make a big tragedy of it, allow it to ruin her health and good looks? She does not. She is hurt, of course, as any woman would be, but she can philosophize herself out of it. She knows real life. She knows there is good and bad, but she does not identify herself too much with one or the other. She can take a detached attitude and maintain her equilibrium.

They're Too Inflexible.

"I am sorry to say that in my experience, American women have, for the most part, no such ability. They set up an ideal before them of quite impossible proportions, and when this ideal conflicts with the facts of life, they suffer horribly. They do not know how to avoid emotional pitfalls because their heads are in the clouds and they do not, or will not, see what is before them. We certainly do not wish to destroy their idealism altogether but they must learn to base it on something more sound and more humanly possible.

"At present the situation is bad. There is nothing so wrecking to beauty as diseases of the nervous system. They torture the faces into all sorts of odd and inharmonious expressions. The inner conflict that is going on now between the pre-war Puritanism, still deeply imbedded in the American woman's consciousness, and the post war emancipation into which she has intellectualized herself, is simply tearing her to pieces. That is why those who are not in sanitariums are trying to run away from themselves in seeking so-called pleasures. They lack the calm acceptance of life as it is, which the French woman has, and their beauty and health are both suffering."

Haste at Meals.

French women, I am told, suffer little from indigestion, while we know it is one of our commonest ills. I asked Dr. Gros about it.

"It is true," he said, "that Americans suffer more from indigestion than the French. It is an odd thing in France to see the way the Americans haunt the pastry shops. These rich pastries and sauces are not the ordinary diet of the French. At a French dinner table the meal is good, but simple. It may start with an egg, followed by a good soup, a little fish or meat, a green vegetable, a salad of lettuce or endive, and a dessert of fresh or stewed fruit, with perhaps a bit of cheese. This is a classical French dinner and a well balanced one. More important, it is served in courses. There is plenty of time between the courses for digestive processes. There is no hurry, as the American knows it, at table. Luncheons are eaten slowly and in courses. The majority of business houses close from 12 to 2 to permit of sufficient time to consume a meal with the leisure that should be allotted an eating hour. Cheerful conversation is recognized here as productive of a mental attitude necessary to good digestion.

"Contrast this with the average dinner or luncheon of an American family. The luncheon is abominably hurried; the mind of the business man still tense on the theme of business. There is no relaxation.

"See the large dinner plates piled with everything in the world, or with vegetables and salad piled around its place. Its immediate presence imposes that it is a job to be done, and done with dispatch. See the average American gobbling it. He eats silently—and hurriedly. And all too often there is no exercise afterward. He takes bicarbonate of soda instead. That has become the national habit—the soda habit. American women, numbers of them, carry little soda mints about with them and you see them in restaurants with this now indispensable aid.

"Of course, indigestion makes sallow faces and bad nerves, too, both of which are enemies to beauty."

Excess of Alcohol.

Alcoholic excess, which Dr. Gros pronounces the worst foe of all to the charms for which women strive, was touched upon by him.

"Alcoholic excess is a terrible thing," he said. "And I am afraid American women have suffered a great deal from prohibition. Many of them who never drank before are drinking now, and drinking the bad mixtures offered illegally. I spend two or three months every year in America, and have been shocked at the way American women are drinking. This is extremely bad for their nerves. The false excitement produced in this way leads to much unnecessary suffering and destruction of looks. In France, if women drink, they can at least get good liquor, and immoderate consumption is rare.

"Perhaps, though, this craze for drinking among American women is only another futile attempt to run away from themselves, another refusal to face the facts of life, another denial of reality. I believe when they learn the secret of accepting life as it is they will have more stable nervous systems and be more calmly beautiful than ever before.

"The French woman is emotional; more so, perhaps, than the American. But she can control her emotions; she can detach herself from her sufferings. American women will sacrifice everything but suffering. And they will not keep their good looks if they go on in this way."

BEAUTY ANSWERS by Antoinette Donnelly

What's your beauty ill? Too fat? Too thin? Shy on hair? Oily hair, oily skin, freckles, pimples, or blackheads? Flat chested or flat footed? Write to me. I have a tonic, a diet or a set of exercises for what ails you. And you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Antoinette Donnelly, The Tribune, Chicago.

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

T. E. M.: YOU CANNOT REDUCE the size of the cheek bones, but you may disguise them by building up the face around them, unless the hollows in the cheeks are due to loss of teeth which have never been replaced by artificial ones. Filling them out may be accomplished by building up your entire body, the face taking on its share in the general process. If you wish to increase your weight, I will send you a booklet, giving instructions in detail, for a stamped, addressed envelope.

MISS K.: SKIN WHICH PEELS and chaps constantly is in need of oiling. It is of an excessively dry texture. Try cleansing the face with cream rather than with water, or if you use water, let it be at night, and after the cold water rinse, massage with cream. You may leave some of the cream on overnight. Before going outdoors, massage a bit of cream into the skin and then powder. Use just enough cream to protect the skin from the wind and cold.

TERESA J.: EXCESSIVE PERSPIRation may be due to mental causes, as shown by the influence of nervous shock. Poisonous substances in the blood excite the production of sweat. An excellent remedy is a 25 per cent solution of aluminum chloride in distilled water. Apply three times the first week, being careful to let it dry in before the clothing is allowed to touch the skin, to avoid irritation. One application a week will ward off a recurrence. For further instructions on its use, send stamped, addressed envelope.

WORRIED: YOU MUST NOT EXpect the condition of your hair to improve while the dandruff remains. Brush your hair every morning and night for five minutes. Wash it frequently while the dandruff is present—at least once a week. In your case I would do so twice a week for a while. If you brush it regularly you will not have an accumulation of dandruff.

MARIE D.: YOU SHOULD GET more sleep, Marie. Six hours is not enough. You should have eight hours' sleep every night and get plenty of exercise and fresh air in addition. I am afraid you are working too hard for a young girl, and it would be better were you to give up the evening work, or you will soon find yourself forced to do so through ill health, and your extra money will go to pay doctors' bills. It is more important to look to your health.

Nose Shine

My experts lately sent me a remarkable discovery. It is a dainty, fragrant, greaseless cream which prevents shiny noses and foreheads.

It does this in two ways. First, it absorbs the excess oil, then it reduces the enlarged pores.

It is a perfect delight. I apply it once or twice a day. Then I never powder nose or forehead, and I never worry about shine.

Every dainty woman will want it, so I have had it prepared for you under the name Edna Wallace Hopper's No-Shine. Druggists and toilet counters now supply it at 60c per tube. You will find it one of the greatest helps that experts have created.

MEN'S FASHIONS

POPULAR SUIT MODELS FOR SPRING.

This department will be glad to answer any questions regarding men's fashions and the correct thing to wear on different occasions. Address communications to A. T. Gallico, The Tribune, Chicago. Inclose stamped, address envelope for personal reply.

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

By A. T. Gallico.

NEW YORK. — [Special Correspondence.]—If styles of men's suits continue in the present direction, men's shoulders are going to be too broad to go through the average doorway, pockets are going to be in the trouser legs, there will be room for but one button at the bottom edge of the coat, and hips won't be at all.

For, although the well dressed man does not indulge in extremes, the tendency each season has been towards lower placed buttons and pockets, longer lapels, broader shoulders and narrower hips. However, the differences are slight enough not to make the change in style so drastic that any one in last year's suit is going to feel embarrassed.

Yet, spring is the time of year when man thinks most seriously and interestedly about the purchasing of a new suit or so. Everything is new in the spring, and man does not like to be outdone by the sartorial refreshment indulged in by nature. Therefore, if you are out for new clothes, you might as well get the fashions that have been approved by the style setters.

Which means you will broaden your shoulders, and reach farther down for your pockets. The coats themselves are a little shorter, with the backs a trifle draped.

I was looking at suits in the show room of the manufacturer who produces much that is fine in the way of men's ready-to-wear clothing. His suits are always representative of the best that is in men's clothes, yet they are accessible to the ready-to-wear trade. That is why I take as examples the models he shows.

There were three models which will probably have the greatest popularity. One is a three-button single breasted suit, with the broader shoulders, lower pockets, and buttons, and narrower hips mentioned above. It is a trifle draped in the back. The effect is comfort without the sacrifice of too much in the way of fit.

Another model was slightly more waisty in effect, with two buttons instead of three; single breasted and with flapless pockets. The double breasted model being featured by this manufacturer follows out the same tendencies in low lines. Low pockets, low buttons, a low waisted effect, with the slight drape to the back, characterize it. It is distinctly a smart suit, and will doubtless have followers a-plenty.

The vests are all being made with medium points—no straight across effects from this manufacturer this spring, and no double breasted vests. However, the double breasted vest is still considered a possibility for those who wish to wear it.

There are cuffs pretty generally on the trousers, of about an inch and one-half, an inch and three-quarters, and sometimes even two inches wide.

The trousers are rather conservative in width, the average being about nineteen and one-quarter at the knee, and sixteen at the bottom, while the widest that look well are twenty at the knee and seventeen at the bottom. Of course, these measurements are for the average figure, for a man about five feet ten. An extremely large man can wear a slightly wider trouser, while an extremely small man should see to it that his trousers are in proportion to his size.

In colors, the lavender tint will be good this spring and summer. Not a violent lavender, but a gray with just enough lavender cast to it to make it more lavender than gray. Sometimes of plain fabric, and often striped in contrasting colors, this lavender suiting is successfully harmonized with various colors in accessories.

Plain medium grays and striped grays will be exceedingly good for spring suits, as will soft blues and the lighter browns. In fact, everything is pretty light in color, which means a good season for the dry cleaners.

Faint overplaids will take the place of striped in many cases. But the plaid is not strong enough to be seen a half a block away. It merely gives a touch of color to the suiting without making a loud effect. Much of this overplaiding comes in a sort of pastel green, thus giving a green tone to the suit. Many gray suits have this green overplaid, or else a green stripe, which makes the suit almost green.

Flannel will be the material for many of the spring and summer suits. I saw one flannel in the lavender tint, and another of light tan with a subdued blue overplaid, that made a good looking suit.

Varied Activities of Women

Mrs. Alice Stees, California's first woman sheriff, wears trousers and rides astride her saddle horse.

A newspaper for women and by women, the first of its kind in China, has been started in Tientsin.

Girls do all the handling of baggage in the Union station, Ogden, Utah, of the Southern Pacific lines.

Mrs. Julius Kahn, elected to succeed her husband as a member of congress, is California's second congresswoman.

Mrs. Sadie Salisbury of Canton, O., operates a bus line between that city and Alliance. She operates four busses.

Ocean City, a south Jersey coast resort city, is wrestling with a problem of too many girls, the women outnumbering the men by 146.

The first bill vetoed by Gov. Miriam Ferguson of Texas was one which permitted legislators and their families to accept free passes from Texas railroads.

About 95 per cent of the women garment workers in New York recently went on strike for a 20 per cent increase in wages and a forty-hour work week.

If Sir Henry Curtis-Bennett is elected to the British parliament and fulfills his election pledge he will have to kiss 16,269 women electors in the constituency.

Magnesia Best for Your Indigestion

Warns Against Doping Stomach With Artificial Digestants

Most people who suffer, either occasionally or chronically, from sourness and indigestion, have now discontinued disagreeable diets, patent foods and the use of harmful drugs, stomach tonics, medicines and artificial digestants, and instead, following the advice so often given in these columns, take a teaspoonful or two tablets of Bisurated Magnesia in a little water after meals, with the result that their stomach no longer troubles them, they are able to eat as they please and they enjoy much better health. Those who use Bisurated Magnesia never dread the approach of meal time because they know this wonderful anti-acid and food corrective, which can be obtained from any good drug store, will instantly neutralize the stomach acidity, sweeten the stomach, prevent food fermentation, and without the slightest pain or discomfort. Try this plan yourself, but be certain to get pure Bisurated Magnesia especially prepared for stomach use.

RICHEST KNOWN FOOD IN VITAMIN B

Indispensable to Normal Nutrition at all Ages

"The Story of Vitamins"

what they are and the important part they play in human nutrition, has been printed in a book called "Vitamins in Diet and Health." A copy free on request to everyone interested. Mothers and those in charge of children are especially urged to send for this valuable book.

Learn What High Vitamin Feeding Means to You and Yours

Science proves that a vitamin-poor diet and normal growth and health are inconsistent. Too many modern foods are refined or processed to the point where their more valuable elements are lost. Restoring those elements means promoting growth and health, and high vitamin feeding brings results in proportion.

VEGEX offers the ideal means of adding the valuable Vitamin B to the diet. Medical institutions and foundations both here and abroad use and recommend it. Many schools serve it daily to the children. In addition to its exceedingly rich B Vitamin content, VEGEX contains iron, iodine and other food salts. Served in many different ways—every one deliciously palatable. Especially appreciated as a meat substitute during Lent as it satisfies meat craving though purely vegetable.

Sold in most high class stores. Write for the free book—"Vitamins in Diet and Health."

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—Overe here we hear a great amount of idle and serious comparison of French and American women, by our own countrymen, who seem to be convinced the French woman is more feminine and particularly so in her dress. They always come forward about two minutes after the beginning of such a conversation with the statement that only the American girl could wear those stiff, boxed-in, boyish clothes of the last two seasons in all their severity; that the French girl invariably did something to them to make them delicate and feminine.

Paris couturiers, who clothe our women, however, take an opposing view. Jean Patou says most of the floating daintiness of his spring fashions was inspired by a study of the women of American cities—Chicago, New York, and other towns—that the long slender legs, the soft blonde hair, and the feminine gracefulness of our girls made him enthusiastic in the promotion of the subtle nuances of color that rule Paris spring styles and in the fitting and flaring of the line he so admirably advocates. Paul Poiret defines our girls as Greek, and delights to enhance their noble contours with the supple, exquisite folds of the Greek costume—and so on.

All this talk about the sexlessness of modern clothes, according to the Paris creators, is just idle vaporousness, and they are a unit in the spring collections on starring all that is dainty and feminine in color, fabric, and line.

Double front coat dresses are smart spring innovations.

Evening gown shaded from marron to flesh color, embroidered with gold circles.

They take a primal green, for instance, and multiply it into many shades, combining two or more in one costume, of some soft spring fabric, so that the result is pure springtime in effect. They do the same thing with most of the other colors of the rainbow, which leaves out black pretty generally, and minimizes the other somber colors that make up the bulk of masculine apparel.

They are going to let us be feminine with a vengeance. And when they do use such shades as have formerly been the bulwark of the wardrobe they touch them up with light shades, lace, chiffon, linen, organdy, or other device to take off the curse. I cannot go into the infinite details of this alchemy of the commonplace, so I refer you to our first offering, from which example you can work out the idea for yourselves.

In this coat dress Lucille has used dark blue silk serge, or surah as the French call it, and has combined it with bands of banana yellow, which are set on with a dazzling pattern of zig-zag braid; and then has added a lot of delicate ecru lace for good measure in getting a womanly result. This is one of these new double front coat dresses that all of the great French houses are featuring. Looks like an ensemhble, doesn't it?

You can open up that diagonal closing of yellow and zig-zag braid, and reveal the front of a lace dress, which has no back, because it is stitched fast to the blue silk serge at the under arm seams. The lace sleeves also are countergette and, beginning at the hem line, has shaded it from marron brown through all the tints of lighter browns, rose, pink, and flesh to the palest shade of sand at the top. The line, everything, of this evening frock gives place to this exquisite shading, which looks all the finer because it is done on filmy material.

Then, to give a final superlative touch to these nuances of tone, Lucile has embroidered the entire bodice, and patterned the skirt with rings of gold thread embroidery. They are just round, golden shadows, but they are a fine addition. The side panels have no embroidery, but are full gathered chiffon shaded from deep to pale tints. Every Paris collection has several of these shaded models, both for afternoon and evening, and where the dress is part of an ensemble they shade the coat lining to match.

Where they don't shade a gown, they usually combine different colors, as is done in our third offering, a dinner dress from Nicole Groult. Madam Groult has made a little poem of greens in this dress, which is of pale green crepe romain, with a series of circular godets of dull darker green to widen and flare the skirt. She has embroidered the left shoulder and the right hip of the dress with many shades of green, taking the artistic license with the rose and making it the color of grass, with emerald borders and leaves au naturel.

The embroidery is done with a culinary standby—rice. Many grains of rice are dyed and sewed into this pattern. All of the couturiers are using rice in this way for embroidery and fringe. One wonders what might happen in case of a rainstorm, but it is new, and attractive.

Our fourth model is also from Nicole Groult, and is for the jeune fille. The dress, which is a simple chemise with shirtwaist sleeves, is made of pale bois du rose crêpe de Chine, and over it is slipped the sleeveless middy jaquette you see. The jacket is of the same shade of kasha, and its collar supports a band of amaranthe crêpe de Chine which passes through slits around the neck and becomes long ties. Uniting this new shade of bois du rose, which is much like what we used to call peach pink back home, with amaranthe is smart; the best of them are doing it.

Pastel greens in several tones make a melody of a dinner dress.

Middy jaquette of bois du robe kasha over crêpe de Chine.

terfelt. They are only puffs and bands that are set into the real sleeve of dark blue, which flares into a modified "angel" from the elbows. This sleeve has a lot of character, and so have many others in spring collections. I have seen whole collections amongst the greatest of the Paris houses which used the sleeve to give variety and to change the line of most models.

Look well to your sleeves this coming season. Big sleeves and odd sleeves are being paged by fashion. They are offered to us insistently as part of the feminizing of the mode, a sort of side show to the big novelties of color and line; not essential, perhaps, but attractive.

Color is really the most important of all the fashion changes. Beige per se has given place to sand, to the pink and brown of the mushroom, to putty, to fawn, to ecru, and a lot of rosy tints of tan and champagne. Sometimes all of these shades are run into one costume of the shaded type. Violet, mauve, and orchid are dulled, thinned, or thickened to make a great range of shades that will certainly be much worn in the springtime. The most authoritative of these is amaranthe, which is like the lees of wine, and just as practical as dark blue or black. It is much more beautiful and, combined with mauve or violet, is simply ravishing.

Our second offering is a study in shading. Lucile has taken crepe geor

A FRIEND IN NEED

by Sally Joy Brown

I want to be the medium through which the friend in deed and the friend in need may be brought together. It may be you have some discarded article which has not outgrown its usefulness that will make some less fortunate one happy and you would gladly give if it you knew how to go about it. Write to me and I shall happy to be of service to you. Please write on one side of the paper.

When information is wanted by mail, a stamped, addressed envelop should accompany the request. Please do not send article to The Tribune but write for the address of the applicant and send direct.

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

DO IT NOW.

WE all like to know that our efforts count, don't we? And they do—as this little story of Lillian will show.

Some weeks ago we heard from Lillian's mother, saying that Lillian would be coming home soon from the hospital, where she had undergone a major operation. Her mother was heartbroken over the kind of homecoming it would be. She had a small room with a bed, and that was all—no other furniture, nothing to make the room bright and cheerful, as it should be, and no prospects of having money for buying anything for months, until the expenses of the illness had been paid. So she wrote, asking if some one wouldn't give her a fern or potted plant to brighten the bare little place for Lillian.

The following letter tells what happened:

"Dear Miss Brown: Some way it is hard to write. I just can't stop watching Lillian and being thankful to see her picking up so fast, and so happy. And I know that all the wonderful things we got are what did it. Lillian just looks from one to the other, and I can see her get better right then and there. It seems like a dream to us yet. Just think—we got a plant and fernery, a rocking chair, and two others. And somebody gave us a beautiful canary bird—pretty and a wonderful singer—and pictures and curtains for the windows. Why, it seems like a palace to us when we thought it was going to be so bare. And none of us, you may be sure, will ever complain or feel discouraged again, when we think of how many wonderful people there are in the world, and what they did for Lillian. Please thank everybody, and Lillian wants to write, too, as soon as she sits up. M. T."

Easily done, wasn't it? And what a wonderful result! Many of the articles came from persons who hesitated to offer them, because they seemed so little compared to the need—but when everything was put together, they transformed life for the entire family.

And what we did for this family we can do just as easily for others. We have hundreds of requests on file and there are many chances to help—and by everybody's giving a little we can make life brighter for others. Let's do it, right away?

Must Part with Dog.

"I have a fine little shepherd pup which I must part with. Can you help me to find a good home for it? It is a cunning little thing, full of good spirits, and a playful companion. "C. J. W."

Write in to us at once, if you are interested in giving a good home to this pup.

Invalid Needs Chair.

"I am sorely in need of a wheel chair, being a paralytic and not able to stand. I am at present in a sanitarium and compelled to stay in bed for lack of a chair. Financially unable to pay for the chair, I shall be able to pay the expense of shipment if some one who has an invalid chair no longer in use should be so good as to pass it on to me. W. S."

A wheel chair would mean more to this man than we who are able bodied and filled with unconscious health can ever know. Will some one who has no longer a use for his wheel chair pass it on?

For Boy Scout.

"I have a Boy Scout uniform I have outgrown, but which is still in good condition. Perhaps some scout who has not the means to buy one would appreciate it. It is quite a large size for a boy 16. E. K. B."

It is thoughtful of this Boy Scout to think of his fellow members, and we are sure one of them will be more than glad to avail himself of the offer.

Furniture to Give.

"I wish to give a round dining room table and chairs to some family in need of dining room furniture. I also have several chests of drawers to give to some one in need of such articles. "A. V. H."

Some family on the north side of Chicago will surely benefit by this unusual offer. The furniture must be called for.

Mattress to Give.

"I have moved to a smaller apartment and have an extra mattress, practically new and of a high grade. I shall be glad to give it to any one who may need it. M. A. B."

This mattress will have to be called for, but it is well worth the effort, if it will fill one of the needs of your household.

Phones for a Fan.

"Have you some one on your lists who might like to have a pair of ear phones for a radio? I have a pair I no longer need and shall be glad to pass on. G. C."

Are you engaged in that fascinating task of making a radio set? If you are, this gift of ear phones will come in handy.

Children in Need.

"I am appealing for help for a family whose case has been brought to my attention. The mother and father are ill with pneumonia, and are being sent to the hospital. The father, if everything goes well, will be out again in the course of a few weeks, but the mother has ailments that will keep her there for some time. The appeal I wish to make is for clothing for the children, a girl of 10 and boys 8, 6, and 4. All are greatly in need of wearing apparel, and any gift will be welcomed. W."

These children, soon to be thrown upon the generosity of society for a time, are so in need of clothing that your gift, no matter how small, will be happily accepted.

Hard Times for Her.

"I wonder if some of your readers can help me by giving me some clothing for my 11 month old baby or for myself, size 38? I am just 18 and unable to work, because I must take care of the baby, and my husband's salary has not been enough to keep us going this winter. We were turned out on the street last week, and have the unpaid rent to make up, so it seems impossible for us to get ahead enough to buy any clothing. E. J. B."

You will find this youthful mother an appreciative soul, and some one you are glad to help through her present time of need.

ISN'T IT ODD?

By William Atherton Du Puy

ISN'T it odd that the establishment of the fig industry in the United States should have been dependent on a tiny insect?

It is the Smyrna fig of the Mediterranean that is the incomparable specimen of its kind for purposes of drying and packing. When it was first introduced into California, the trees grew luxuriantly, but the young figs would develop to the size of your finger tip, dry up, and drop off. On thousands of acres that had been planted not one fig ripened.

The government set its experts to find out why. They even journeyed to Turkey in their quest. There they found a strange ceremony taking place in the orchards. At the season when the young figs were putting forth, the natives went into the orchards and strung garlands among the trees. These garlands were loops of fiber run through wild figs from the hillsides near by.

Examining these wild figs, as is the way of scientists, it was found they were full of tiny wasps. Hung there in the Smyrna fig trees, they soon came out and immediately began hunting places for nesting. What they wanted was the eye of another wild fig into which they might crawl. Instead, they found the eyes of these domestic figs all about. They crawled into them, but so narrow were the doorways that in doing so they broke their wings, disabling themselves.

When in de they found that the place would not serve their purpose as a hatchery. They crawled out again, and being crippled, died.

But while these tiny wasps were inside the Smyrna figs, they performed a mission. They shook off some of the pollen from the wild fig from which they had come. This pollen is the vital thing that is necessary to fertilize the Smyrna fig. If it gets it, it will go on to fruitage. If it does not, it will wither and die.

There was none of these fig insects in California, and that was the reason no fruit was maturing. Obviously, the thing to do was to establish them. This was not easy to do, for they did not live long enough to make the trip. It took four years to accomplish it. Then the Smyrna figs on California trees stuck on, and as a result a great industry has developed.

BRIGHT SAYINGS OF CHILDREN

The Tribune will pay $1 for each childish saying printed. The story told must never have been printed in any magazine or paper. It is not possible to acknowledge or return unavailable contributions. Write on one side of the paper. Address bright sayings to Aunty Dee, The Tribune, Chicago.

"Why do you laugh so when the young chicks fight?" I asked my son. "You know mother has told you fighting is wrong."

"But they have to fight, muvver," he patiently explained. "They just got to find out which one has to run." A. K.

John had gone to a rural community with his mother and he had been taken from house to house on the adjoining farms of his relatives. At every home he had been well fed both at meal time and in between times.

The last place they called was at his grandmother's and he had no sooner arrived than his grandmother started for her cupboard.

"Keep your seat, grandma," said John sorrowfully, "I has been eated everywhere and even a little boy has got to quit sometime." J. R.

HOW TO USE THE PATTERNS

KASHA, in any preferred color, would make up well by pattern No. 2275. It is a one piece dress, with the back cut in one piece, two fronts, plaited side sections, and long or short sleeves, as one prefers. In cutting the fronts care must be taken to see that the left and right pieces are laid on right. As can be seen from the picture, the right front laps over and closes on the left side. It will be easy to lay the plaits if a basting thread is put in, marking each fold, and the directions given with the pattern show clearly how each part is put together.

The vest, cuffs, and collar could be effectively trimmed with cross stitch or laid embroidery, which won't take much time. Satin is a favored material this spring, and so is satin crêpe, and the crêpe would be pretty for this design—using the reverse side for trimming.

Stout women require a close fitting corset cover to hold the figure well in place, and pattern No. 1758 will be found right for the purpose. A reasonably heavy muslin will be best, and if you wish to take real comfort in it be sure to shrink the material thoroughly before cutting.

It buttons down the front, and there are no underarm seams, but a seam each side of the front and back; and its fits smoothly under the arms. The best seam for lingerie is the felled one. Baste and stitch the seams, then trim off one edge on each, being sure to leave a safe margin; then hem the other edge down over the trimmed one. Have the seams an even width when finishd—say, one-eighth of an inch—and do the hemming by hand.

The neck and armholes may be finished with narrow bias strips, stitching in a narrow seam on the wrong side; then clip the edge at intervals, so it will be possible to turn the facing down smoothly on the wrong side. Baste and stitch close to the edge. The front hems should be finished before doing anything with the neck facing. Sew the peplum to the bottom of the waist, having the seam come to the right side, and be sure the peplum is set on a little fuller than the bottom of the waist. If both edges measure just the same, the peplum will not set well. It has a more or less circular edge, and is set on to a reasonably straight one, and this makes it necessary to allow a little ease. Turn the seam up toward the waist and cover it with a narrow band. Stitch it over the seam to the corset cover on the upper edge.

Before sewing on the band, turn it in neatly at each end and overhand to the corset cover. It makes a much better finish to do this before stitching.

Pattern No. 2315 is for one of those popular slips that form part of every woman's wardrobe. It may be made of wash satin, crêpe de chine, or cambric, in white or any desired color. One often sees these slips made of crêpe de chine and elaborately trimmed with lace. The bottom of the skirt, instead of having a straight, hemmed edge, may be cut in points or round or oval-shaped scallops. This sort of edge should be finished with a rolled hem, and the lace insertion and edging gathered to it. The lace should not be set on full—just full enough so it will lie flat around the curves or points.

Lace medallions or rows of insertion set in horizontally will make the top of the camisole pretty. The shoulder straps may be made of the material, with hemstitched edges; or ribbon an inch and one-half wide or lace insertion may be used.

If the slip is cut to go over the shoulders, and the neck cut round across the back and rather a deep V in front, it will be necessary to work eyelets at regular intervals around the neck through which to run ribbon. Or the neck may be finished with lace beading and edging. One rarely sees these slips with anything but shoulder straps, but the other way will allow the garment to hold in place over the shoulders, and not slip and show as straps often do.

Where the fullness comes over the sides the edge to be gathered should be started at the end nearest the middle, with as narrow a margin as possible, only growing to one quarter of an inch wide at the outer edge. The next step is to cut a strip long enough to extend beyond each edge after the turning in has been done, and wide enough to cover the seam well. This is basted in position on the wrong side of the slip and stitched. Then a similar piece is set on the right side. Machine hemstitching is the most satisfactory finish, having the hemstitching go around the four edges. The top of the camisole may be finished with a hemstitched hem or casing, through which a ribbon is run.

Light weight sateen will make a good slip for ordinary, every day wear, and if it is nicely made will not need any trimming, other than the hemstitching

AKIN TO PAIN.

ANNA, My Dear: I saw you again today, beauteous one. I passed near you, so near that your arm touched mine and the thrill of it! Like magic, my blood changed to molten fire, surging through my veins with a riot of joy that words cannot describe. Your nearness filled me with an ecstasy akin to pain.

How shall I try to tell you how much I love you? I love you with all my heart and soul and life. You are more to me than all the riches, favor, and all the good that the world can bestow.

You are my ravishing queen and I, tethered in the bonds of my love for you, am willing to do your slightest bidding; willing if necessary, to die for you.

How I hunger for you, darling. How I long and yearn to hold you tightly in my arms; to feel your soft cheek against mine and to crush those warm lips in one kiss.

Forgive me, dear, for writing thus, but I am consumed with a love for you so great and beautiful, so noble, as to defy description.

Tomorrow, dearest one, I shall speak to you. Till then, sweet adieu and may Heaven bless and protect you.

CHARLES.

Embarrassing Moments

The Tribune will pay $1 for every letter published on "The Most Embarrassing Moment of My Life." Address Embarrassing Moments, The Tribune, Chicago. Write on one side of the paper. No manuscripts returned.

All Alone.

My most embarrassing moment took place in church. I was heartily engaged in singing a hymn, and all went well until the organist decided to play an interlude between the second and third verses. It was my idea he was finishing the hymn and striking the amen chord, so I burst out singing "A-men!" but discovered I was rendering a solo.

O, if I could only have made for the exit, but I was handicapped, as I was seated in the center of the pew. A. H.

Wild Goose Chase.

I received a telegram from my boss to arrange to sail from New York for Panama. Arriving at the offices in the big city; I was equipped with transportation and given directions to the pier from which I was to sail.

I had often heard about the city slickers, and on leaving the building I noticed a fellow following me. Becoming suspicious, I started out on a brisk walk. He did likewise. I then broke into a dog trot. So did he. This was too much, so I made a dash for a passing street car which I caught at the next corner and breathed a sigh of relief as I watched him still trailing us on high.

He gained, however, and just as we pulled out again he got one hand on the grab iron of the car and swung himself, grip and all on to the rear platform. I braced myself, prepared to slough him if he separated me from my suitcase.

Amid gasps he said, "Are you going to Panama?" I answered, "Yes." He said, "So am I," and pantingly continued, "I—I—saw you—at the office and I—wanted—to—go—with some one who was going that way as I have never been in a city before." J. L.

SEWING A LOST ART — by Doris Blake

Regarding the Needle In Its Relation To the Home Life of Nations

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—"The Decline and Fall of the Needle" may be the title of a big seller some day. The Mr. Gibbon who writes it is going to trace the downfall of the home from the day woman abandoned this small feminine weapon for the ready-made dress, underwear, and household linen.

"Sewing encourages the love of home, because it makes home a necessity," says one who views with dismay the passing of the old order of fine needleworkers.

In France, as in other quarters of the globe, you hear the complaint that the modern girl is losing her taste for sewing; that instead of tending her embroidery frame, her linens, and her lingerie, the leisure woman is taking to sport; the domestic servant is going into a shop or a factory, the dressmaker into an office. In short, that they are developing a taste for quickly and easily acquired possessions.

"The old fashioned order worked hard for its pleasures and possessions," says Mona Clarke, author of several books on studies of French life. "Thrift was accomplished by skilled work, patiently executed. It knew there was no short cut to perfection.

"The fairy fingers of the old fashioned Frenchwoman are responsible for some of the most exquisite needlework ever seen. In convent school and in provincial home she learned to sew, and whether she was called upon to rule a household or to serve in one, to sit at the cash desk in her husband's shop, or to work in the Rue de la Paix, she was deft with her needle and quick to make economies with it."

Second Nature in France.

However, the more optimistic are inclined to favor the belief that machinery may destroy the fine domestic art of the needle in some countries, yet the Frenchwoman's taste in feminine attire, by which she has achieved a reputation for herself and for her country, is too deeply involved with her own individual needle, even in the present march of events, to be forsaken by the majority.

Anyway, the small feminine tool is viewed in France with sufficient gravity to be considered the enemy of the woman politician, the masculine woman, the independent wage earner, the sportswoman and the incurable novel reader.

Why the latter? If the French girl is given to spending time making pretty things to wear her imagination is curbed, and her dreams are reduced to reality.

"In France," continues Miss Clarke, "the needle is a feminine weapon more useful than the fan and less dangerous than the tongue. All three are well exercised, but none more diligently than the needle. From her childhood a Frenchwoman learns how to make, mend, and embroider. To sew well comes to her as second nature. Even the girl of the leisure class is clever with the needle, and takes delight in what used to be called 'fancy work.' She embroiders her own lingerie, works tapestry seats for her own salon, marks the house linen, and cuts out her own blouses and house frocks. All she does is well, even finely, done. She chooses her materials and designs with taste, and sets aside common things as undesirable and unpractical. No detail in her wardrobe or linen cupboard is too small for her attention. Her methods are unhurried; she gives thought and time to all she does, and finishes everything to perfection.

"No Frenchwoman 'runs up' a dress for an occasion, or puts on a garment from the laundry which is torn or wanting a button. Neatness in such matters is a part of her coquetry. Her education, which has its roots in the classics, teaches her to love form and have a clear vision of what she is doing. The pride which sets self-appreciation high must also be taken into account. In her philosophy it is the duty of every woman to give time and care to her appearance."

It Develops the Artist.

This amiable weakness is one of the great domestic strongholds of the nation, because it encourages the love of home, and it animates the practice of such domestic virtues as sewing, and promotes in all women that love of pretty feminine things which, in the eyes of Frenchmen, give them charm.

The love of the needle is a check on the purchase of shoddy things. Sewing cultivates a taste and understanding of the fine arts, it is also claimed. By learning how to make lace, to embroider, to cut out, to mend and darn neatly, the French girl acquires a fine eye for design and composition. She develops the artist in her by using the needle easily and well.

"She may be called on to patch her husband's working trousers," comments Miss Clarke, "her own blue cooking aprons or her baby's frock. She may only have leisure to do lace work as she travels to and from her office or her shop, or she may be able to sit at home in her salon with her embroidery frame. In all and each of these circumstances it is the skill with which she works that counts. To love perfection for perfection's sake is a precious quality."

Joy of a Linen Cupboard.

An American friend was telling me the other day with the greatest enthusiasm of her experience after renting an apartment owned by a Frenchwoman. The linen cupboard gave her the thrill of a lifetime. "It was a rarer treat than a visit to the salon," she said, "to open that linen cupboard, see the piles of snowy sheets embroidered with the most beautiful initials; napkins, towels, every household necessity in linen, arranged with the nicest order and taste. Not a hole or a frayed edge. Everything so perfectly mended, the patches were almost as nice to look at as the embroideries. Where do they find the time to keep that up?"

The old fashioned type of servant had the utmost contempt for a mistress with a rundown linen cupboard. The modern servant attaches more importance to receiving big wages and spending them in an attempt to look as fashionable as she can in ready-to-wear which, in the judgment of an impartial observer, may set the needle in its relation to the home life of the nation to wabbling again.

How Many Women Keep Young Looking

"A woman may be old at 18 and young at 80," says a prominent clubwoman. "Years don't matter. Didn't Ninon de L'Enclos have a proposal at 90?"

The youth of our women is more lasting than it was a generation ago because we are better acquainted with simple physiological laws. When the first spring marks appear — wrinkles, haziness of cheeks, neck and chin—we realize that the cause is a loosening of the skin and softening of the tissue underneath. We know the cause must be removed. Instead of laying on pastes we send to the drug store for an ounce of powdered Saxolite and a half-pint of witch hazel, mix them and bathe face, neck and hands in the solution. We know this lightens the skin, solidifies the tissue, induces a healthy circulation. We treat causes rather than effects. We use reason—and stay young.

We use reason—and stay young.

Never before has there been a kitchen cabinet so beautiful—with so many conveniences and energy-saving devices. These are its six new features:

1. New combination glass and wood panel doors. An entirely new decorative touch is produced by combining glass and wood panels in the upper double doors. These doors are fitted with handy metal and wood racks. On one, a single rack for extract bottles—on the other a triple tray for change, milk checks, etc.

2. A new-type flour bin. A new flour bin with shaker sifter attached, providing ample capacity for all ordinary needs, is suspended from the lower shelf. It is accessible, removable, and easily filled. A porceliron storage bin conveniently located provides an additional 50-lb. capacity if needed.

3. Enlarged shelf storage space. This arrangement offers unequalled storage capacity above—uncluttered roomy shelves, full 12 inches deep, give a total storage space never before possible.

4. Genuine porceliron storage drawer. The big lower drawer of porceliron is now converted into a wonderful storage bin. It is entirely enclosed, making an absolutely tight, moist-proof, dust-proof storage receptacle for flour, potatoes, all winter vegetables or for staple fruits such as apples, oranges, etc.

5. Genuine porceliron bread and cake box. Just above the storage drawer is another porceliron drawer for bread and cake—the finest and most convenient bread box ever designed.

6. Sliding cutting board. Over the bread and cake box is a new sliding cutting board of rock maple—placed just where you would logically use it.

These, remember, are new features. The Highboy also has the porceliron work table, velvet-lined silverware drawer and dozens of other conveniences and devices that have for years made Hoosier Kitchen Cabinets famous.

Mandel Brothers - Spring Opening 1925

The Mode and the Modern Festival of Spring

OUR modern festival of Spring, even a cosmopolitan Spring, has much of gaiety, of color, of brilliance and of bright unfolding. And, indeed Fashion has so very subtly allied herself with all these outward and visible signs—that the first crocus spells the color of your gown—and the first robin whistles "new chapeau, new chapeaux, spring chapeaux."

Each Day a Different Phase of the Mode

Our advertising schedule during this opening week will be rich in interest. Each day will be marked by a different, concentrated appeal — directed toward Chicago women in all their varying modes of life.

In next Tuesday's Tribune see "Fashions for the Smart American Woman."

Mannequins will display our choicest costumes this week on the Fourth Floor (under-apparel the Third Floor). Our Spring Opening of 1925 has been organized and planned with these four ideas uppermost:

—Complete readiness, even to the least accessory.

—The desire to give every type of woman in Chicago exactly the sort of apparel she wants for spring.

—To have this Apparel the ultimate in Fashion and the last word in smartness.

—And at the same time to convince you, beyond a doubt, that, plus fabric, plus fashion, plus spring enthusiasm, you are buying values at a season of the year when values have been wont to be neglected in favor of newness only.

Every Apparel and Fashion Accessory Section Throughout the Store is in Spring Readiness

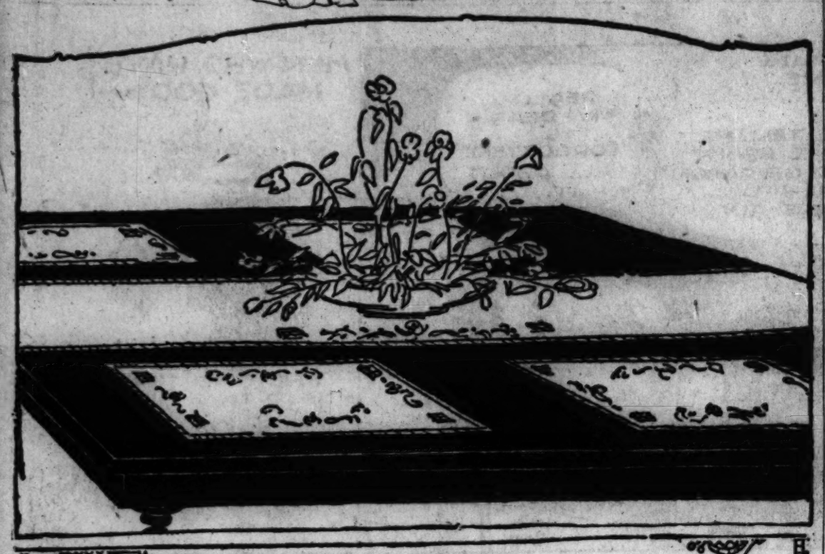
Practical and Fancy Needle Work

By Clotilde



Designed by Mrs. Will T. Perry of Nashville, Tenn.

What is your sewing problem? Do you have trouble in following a pattern? Do you find difficulty in making a skirt hang evenly or making a sleeve that doesn't twist? If there is anything you would like to know about these or other problems of needlework write to Clotilde, The Tribune, Chicago, inclosing a stamped, addressed envelope if a personal reply is desired.

FILET LUNCHEON SET.

NICE luncheon sets are most expensive to buy ready made, and it is hoped the suggestions given today for one will be what many of the readers of this department will like.

The plate doilies should be cut to measure 10 by 15 inches, and the runner 15 inches wide and as long as desired; or a 15 inch square may be used for the centerpiece.

A fine quality of linen should be chosen, and the cutting done by a pulled thread. In making a runner, place the design at each end and center of each side. For the square centerpiece the design should be placed on each side.

Cut the linen by a thread, and pull the thread five threads back from the edge. Put in one row of single crochet, using No. 100 crochet thread. For the second row, make a row of treble crochet all around the edge, with two stitches between each of the trebles, fastening in every third stitch. The third row has a double crochet twice over each chain, making a picot of four chain on each fourth treble.

To make the medallion: Follow the chart drawing, and to insert into the linen, cut a square from the linen the size of the medallion. Pull the thread as for all edges, and crochet around. Whip in the medallion. If preferred, real filet lace and a medallion may be used, the edge to be narrow, and the medallion one and three quarter inches square.

Cut work: Make a running stitch around the edge of all parts of the design to be done in cut work, as shown in the drawing.

To make bars: While making running stitches cross to the opposite side of the design, catch at least two threads, cross back and catch two threads, back to opposite side, catch up same two threads and wrap closely by passing the needle under and over the bar. It is necessary to cross several times to give strength to cut work. After this is done, make a row of short, close buttonhole stitches over the running stitches, and when done cut away the cloth from underneath with sharp pointed scissors. Cut work can also be done as an eyelet stitch, making the bars in same manner as described.

The leaves are done in solid stitch, the stems in outline, and the center of the conventional thistle in outline. All dots are worked in eyelet stitch.

ANSWERS TO LOVE PROBLEMS

Have you a perplexing love affair on which you need the counsel of a friend? Write to Dorie Blake, care The Tribune, Chicago. If you wish a personal reply please send a stamped, addressed envelope.

Might Be Embarrassing.

"Dear Miss Blake: I have been going out with a fellow for four months and I have just found out that he is one year and three months my junior. I would greatly appreciate it if you would tell me whether I should continue going out with him, as I love him and he loves me.

"BROWN EYES."

I think it would be silly to give up a friendship which means so much to you merely because of this slight difference in your ages. It is not sufficient to be of any consequence, dear, and if you have the same interests and are congenial, do not let it interfere in any way. Act toward him the same as you did before you found out you were older than he is.

Beware of Jealousy.

"Dear Miss Blake: I have been going with a fellow for some time, but recently I went out with another fellow. He heard about it and became angry. We had an argument and we parted. I love this fellow and I know he loves me. Please tell me how I can win his love back. BLONDIE."

I shouldn't try to win him back, Blondie. You are fortunate to have found out what a jealous person he is before your affair took on a serious aspect. He is too narrow and suspicious to make you happy, dear. Were you to marry him you would have a miserable existence, I'm afraid, for he would be suspicious of every move you would make, which would soon kill all love and affection in you.

Pay No Attention.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a young girl and am in love with a fellow two years my senior. I think he loves me, but one day he saw me riding with another fellow and since that he refused to notice me. Do you think it is my place to make amends?

"BILLIE."

You did nothing for which you should make amends. It isn't a crime to go riding with another fellow, and he has shown a selfish and narrow streak in acting the way he did, don't you think? Why shouldn't you accept all the good times which come your way, Billie? It is the most natural thing for any young girl to do.

Jealousy Cropping Out.

"Dear Miss Blake: About two months ago I met a young man four years my senior. He is kind and attentive to both my girl friend and me. We both care for him. In some way he has told me he cares for me. Recently at a party he paid more attention to my girl friend. Please tell me if I am jealous, or is this imagination?

"BROWN EYES."

Undoubtedly it is imagination, with a little spark of jealousy back of it, dear. He is a friend to both of you, and if at some time he pays more attention to you, you would not wish her to resent it, would you? Make an effort to overcome this, Brown Eyes, or it would cause you many unhappy moments, all unnecessarily, and for which you will have no one to blame but yourself.

This powder, long the favorite of the socially elect—is now available to more women of distinguished taste

For many years, over a century in fact, the inimitable toilet requisites of Maison Veolay (Violet) of Paris have been favored in the boudoirs of society. And none has enjoyed a more distinguished patronage than that most exquisite powder, Ambre Royal.

Subtle as a clever woman, fragrant as a breath of spring, dainty as a rose-petal, it makes an instant appeal to the woman who knows. Packaged in France it has an air of gaiety and charm that only the French can impart.

Fortunate arrangements now make it possible to offer this so much to be desired powder to a slightly wider circle of women of faultless taste.

"Write for brochure "In the Boudoirs of Society"

This fascinating booklet gives intimate glimpses of the dressing tables of notable women who honor Veolay with their patronage and describes the requisites perfumed with Ambre Royal, Niobe, and other Veolay odeurs. Address Frank M. Prindle & Co., 267 Fifth Avenue, New York.

Whisper this—

Ambre Royal Powder is now no higher in price than other fine French powders which have not, perhaps, Ambre Royal's so exclusive patronage.

ANSWERS BELOW.

THE TRIBUNE COOK BOOK

All recipes here have been scientifically tested by Miss Eddington, with current market materials, and are indorsed by her.

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

By Jane Eddington

SPRING TEAS.

MAN is a great deal more of a walking watermelon than he realizes, and it is a great deal more to his advantage to keep himself evenly wet or keep his liquid equilibrium than all but a few realize. His liquid content wastes or escapes with every breath. Every pore of his skin gives away, constantly, some of his water supply. His elimination in other ways, in order to be anywhere nearly perfect or even safe, requires the using up of his liquid supplies. His glands cannot do their work easily unless they have what is the essence of their contribution to the work of the body—a liquid. Human beings owe half or three-quarters of their digestive and kidney troubles to the fact that they do not religiously and systematically keep their liquid balance.

A considerable fraction of the effort of getting a family nourished ought to be given to the business of seeing that each member gets sufficient palatable water, plain or flavored, and eats it regularly and systematically. Under the conditions prevailing in general in cities, this is a much bigger task than many realize, while manufacturers of less wholesome drinks than the cook might easily supply realize it all too well and trade on their knowledge.

It has been mathematically ascertained just how much water the body gives off in a day through lungs, skin, and kidneys, and on these premises it has been determined how much it must have every day in order that the glands may do their important work and that the wastes of the body may be safely diluted.

Instinct Demands It.

A child begins early to ask for water, and some mothers are criminally unintelligent in refusing to give the child what his instinct demands. A human being can actually wilt because of lack of water, and older persons sometimes show how much they have wilted by the number of wrinkles in their faces.

Water is essential in every nutritional process: digestion, assimilation, secretion, and excretion. Indigestion is caused by lack of water balance. Malnourishment is not caused by lack of food but lack of sufficient water to supply the agents which do the work of assimilation with what they must have to do their work. The whole process of digestion is the turning of solids into liquids, and it has to be done in a liquid medium of various constituents which depend upon liquid nourishment. The gastric juice is 97½ per cent plain water, and the intestinal fluids must have that amount of water.

It is hard to stop telling what water does and why it is needed to prevent some of the commonest of ills. It washes, purges, sweeps, bathes—rids the body of waste which it constantly has. When this waste is not removed, you are nervous and irritable and in peril. Do not let yourself dry up and you will not have the colds nor any of the self-poisoning diseases.

Prevention Rather than Cure.

Because of that strange lack of reasoning which prevents seeing that the things that will make the sick well ought also to keep them from being sick, there have been monstrous discrepancies between invalid and ordinary diets. Three-quarters of the items prepared for the invalid are liquid or that is what the books on invalid cookery would lead one to conclude. More cooked liquids could advantageously be added to ordinary diets.

There is some reason for believing that fifty and a hundred years ago there were many women who were far better cooks for the sick than for the well. Such women even got into the fiction of the day with their possets, jellylike, as are the cold cornmeal and oatmeal gruels made from a little meal and much water thoroughly cooked. These were made the mediums for the taking of medicines, and were nutritive besides. Plain sugar and lemon with which they posseted the ill, who more than likely owed their illness to wretched foods. Beef teas, broths, caudles, drinks in endless variety, gruels, paps, lemonades, soups, and wheys were so numerous as when recorded in recipes to make sizable books. There were also herb teas and cordials and jalaps. Invalids were given cups of camomile tea for "liver complaints," and "composing draughts" effective enough in some cases to have composed them forever.

In one of the novels of the early nineteenth century the cook gives her final notice because she has had to make up "slops, and broths, and gruels, and sagoes, and arrow roots, and panadas," but worse than that she had to live on them, because her mistress would not have anything wasted. Finally after having her courage reinforced by something "more potent than barley water and apple-tea," she gave her ultimatum.

Comfort of Hot Liquids.

We have gone to the other extreme today, yet there are those even now who know the comfort of the hot lemonade and other such beverages. Not long ago a letter was received from a man who wanted to know how some woman had made for him an "emulsified and hot lemonade." It was probably one of flax seed, but barley water can be almost as smooth and even stringy and as like an emulsion as flax seed.

Irish moss also gave those smooth and jellylike effects that come with the use of barley, flax seed, slippery elm, etc. For that matter, any of the meals from grains may be so cooked as to be juice and water may actually irritate a sensitive throat and leave an uncomfortable feeling, but a flax seed lemonade, smooth and jellylike, leaves no such feeling.

Flax Seed Lemonade (Old Recipe).

Three tablespoons of flax seed, two tablespoons sugar, one pint of boiling water, three tablespoons lemon juice. Pour boiling water over flax seed and sugar, and steep on back part of stove one hour. The simmering burner at lowest point may be used.

Strain and add lemon juice. This may be taken hot or cold. In the section on invalid cookery in one of the latest cook books out, there is a recipe much like this with a little less flax seed, which is reasonable, but sugar is added to taste. It is also reasonable to add lemon juice to taste. These drinks used to be varied in a number of ways.

Apple Tea.

There are many recipes for apple teas and apple water, but the one that aroused most enthusiasm hereabout, when a number were tried out, was the following: Wash and cut one good sized apple into quarters without paring it, and then slice each quarter into four pieces. Pour one cup of boiling water on the apple, and set for two hours in a place corresponding to the old side of the stove, a place where it keeps hot but does not cook. A hot radiator will do, and a way to get such an effect is to set a brick partly over a gas burner and set the tea on the other end of the brick. Add a tablespoon of orange juice to the strained off water and a little sugar to get a truly delicious drink, and one just as cheering and graceful to the well as the sick—and "different!"

Spiced Apple Tea.

This is to take the place of mulled drinks. Add to the plain apple and water, for the plain apple tea, six cloves and some sliced candied ginger and let steep with the apple for the two hours. This is good hot or cold, and may be varied with lemon juice, etc.

Pineapple Tea.

Cut a large slice of pineapple in bits, pour over it a cup or a cup and a half of boiling water, cover closely, and keep hot for two hours. Strain and drink without any addition or sweeten to taste. It makes an excellent fruit tea. Pineapple peelings are sometimes used for a simila liquid good to use in ices, etc.

THE TRIBUNE will pay $1 for What's Wrong Here suggestions. Is your pet etiquette irritation seeing mother eat parsley that belongs to the management, hearing father say "Buddy, meet-t-wife!" or watching sister's Wednesday-and-Sunday smooth down the patent leather hair with the palm of his hand? Whatever it is, send it in and THE TRIBUNE will pay $1 for every one it uses. Address What's Wrong Here, Tribune, Chicago, Illinois.

ANSWER TO WHAT'S WRONG HERE

1. Do not put pens and pencils in your mouth. Infections are spread in this way, and if you do not fear for yourself, think of others.
2. Nothing. It is perfectly proper to eat the lettuce served under a salad.
3. When pouring a drink of water or other drink and handing it to any one be sure to take hold of the glass near the bottom so that your fingers will not touch where he must drink.
4. Never eat from the platter or dish on which food is served. Always take a portion on your plate.
5. Nothing. Bouillon may be either eaten with a spoon or one may drink it from the cup.
6. Do not cross the knees in a degree that interferes with the progress of others about a room.
7. Do not eat the parsley that garnishes a dish. To do so looks greedy, and besides it is taking a chance on sanitation.
8. If any one enters your pew in church, move over graciously. There should be no reserved seat in the house of universal welcome.

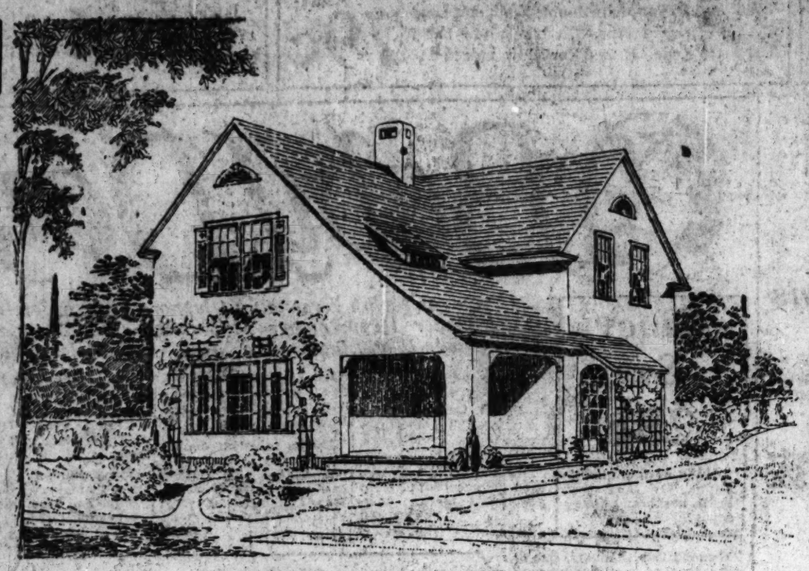
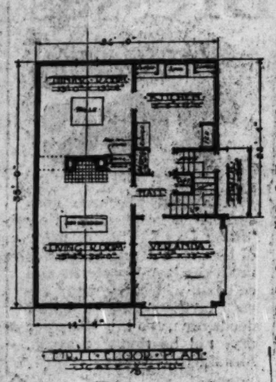
L-SHAPE CONSERVES SPACE.

FOR many years the L shaped house has been popular in this country. One reason for this is that it permits of excellent room arrangement without loss of space; another, with slight variations of treatment and exterior design, such a style looks well in any community, so that it may be built with equally satisfactory results in city, suburb, or country.

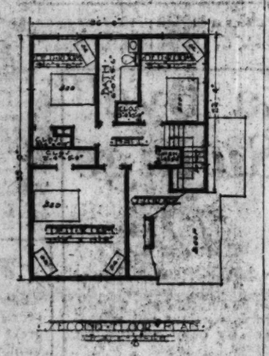
Many of these houses, built years ago, are still in a fine state of preservation. Often they are converted into well built, up to date homes by the application of an overcoat of stucco to the exterior and a rearrangement of the interiors to suit more modern tastes. Of course, such treatment is not restricted to any particular style of house, but has been given here as a hint to the person who desires a home of his own, or is contemplating the remodeling of a house already built.



Designed by Architect J. W. Stickle of Erie, Pa.



FIRST FLOOR PLAN.



SECOND FLOOR PLAN.

Architect J. W. Stickle of Erie, Pa., has taken one of these popular old styles, modernized it with a few deft touches, and produced a noteworthy example of a well planned, six room house.

Exterior walls are of back plastered stucco on metal lath. It is suggested that a light cream colored stucco be used, with exterior wood trim all pure white, except for the blinds, which would be dark green. In keeping with this color scheme the roof would be of sea green slate, with the chimney and foundation above ground of red bricks. The cement sidewalk leading to the house may also be given a touch of variety by having a border of red bricks along both edges.

The doorway off the front porch opens into a small hall, and from this the stairs lead to the second floor. As a means of space conservation, this stairway is built around a coat closet, while on the second floor the same space is utilized as a linen closet.

The reception hall opens directly into the living room, which is of good size and well proportioned, the width being about two-thirds of the length. An old fashioned fireplace, dominating the room, bids welcome to incoming guests. To the right of the fireplace are built-left an open doorway leads to the dining room.

Practical housekeepers have found in shelves for books, while to the that a square dining room, or one almost so, lends itself most readily to modern furniture. The architect has laid out this one accordingly. He has specified a china closet to be built in, in the space back of the book shelves. Ample space will be found here for the disposal of china, silverware, and linens.

Considerable thought has been given to the planning of the kitchen. Every possible means of saving steps has been incorporated. The entire rear wall is given over to a built-in cabinet and sink. This forms a complete unit of work table, pantry, storage bins, linen drawers, and sink. Washing, drying and putting away all of the dishes, silverware, pots and pans, may be accomplished without moving more than a step or two in either direction. This is one example of how minutely every detail for comfort and convenience has been worked out in this charming little home.

Just outside the kitchen is the stairway to the side porch and basement. At the head of these stairs, a handy closet for brooms, pails, etc., has been placed.

It has been planned to have clinging vines covering the side porch, thus insuring absolute privacy to this cool and delightful little spot.

On the second floor will be found three bedrooms, each with a large clothes closet. In addition are the linen closet already mentioned, and the bathroom. The chamber over the living room is the largest of the three. To get an idea of the size of this room a glance at the floor plan will show how much space still remains after a bed, dresser, and chiffonette have been drawn to scale. This also shows the generous size of the other two bedrooms.

The bathroom is conveniently located, with its entrance off the hall, and is specified to have modern plumbing and fixtures throughout.

Since storage space for trunks, extra furniture, etc., is always desirable, the space over the front porch is floored, and is lighted by a group of short dormer windows.

It is advised that the basement be excavated under the entire house, as this insures warm, dry, floors at all times, and gives ample space for the heating plant, laundry and vegetable room.

A house of this size may be heated satisfactorily with a warm air furnace, although steam or hot water heat may be installed if desired.

This house has been designed for a lot 40 feet wide. When placed back about 30 feet, on the average lot, it gives ample room for a garage and garden in the rear.

The TRIBUNE COOK BOOK
EDITED BY JANE EDDINGTON

Sassafras Tea.

There is always a call at this season for a recipe for sassafras tea. The recipe I have thought all right may not be a good one, for I remember that last year I was taken to task by some one who raises sassafras. Unfortunately the letter did not get filed, but as I remember he thought this recipe made much too strong a tea, or he thought the sassafras ordinarily in the market poor stuff. At any rate, here is my recipe: Wash and chip half a cup of sassafras bark, pour over it three cups of boiling water and let it "draw" for ten or fifteen minutes. Strain and serve hot or cold, plain or sweetened. If this was allowed to stand half an hour, less bark could be used. As to the material to use one authority says "bark or roots, but real dyed in the wool sassafras drinkers, born and brought up on this beverage, undoubtedly have most positive notions as to what is right and what is wrong in the making of it. I only found what seemed to my taste untrained in sassafras experience, agreeable. Chill it and try with vanilla ice cream.

A Diet Drink or Tisane.

The word ptisan, which you will find defined in the dictionary goes back to the Greek and is but slightly changed as it came into the Latin, but when it gets to the French the P is dropped and we get "tisane." We can also get from French cooking literature no end of recipes for tisanes not all of them food or diet drinks. The first dictionary definition for "Ptisan" is "A decoction of barley and other ingredients; a farinaceous drink." The second definition is: "Med. An aqueous medicine, containing little if any medicinal agents; a tea or tisane."

Barley Water.

The thinnest of the barley waters contains but two tablespoons of pearl barley, to eight cups of water, cooked gently for three hours or more. Barley has a great deal of jellying power. The solid part may then be used as a cereal, and the liquid part, slightly seasoned to taste, may be used as a drink to soothe the digestive organs—that is be emollient. Barley water is also used socially—good after tennis playing or any active sport or much better than some liquids taken at some times, when the tired body needs a little soothing and nourishment.

Dried Fruit Juices.

Well washed dried fruits, soaked in once and a half their weight of water over night yield in many cases a palatable drink which requires no sweetening or addition, although fresh orange or lemon juice may be added. In the Scandinavian countries they cook these soaked and dried fruits, several sorts together often, and call them spring soups, eating them as soups, but considering them medicinal. A little fresh fruit juice may be added to them.

Nearly all the household remedy lore advises fruits and fruit juices as laxatives, but quantities of liquid so taken produce that effect, and would if the liquid was plain water, which is not so easy to take in quantity as when flavored.

Ruddy Cheeks—Sparkling Eyes—Most Women Can Have

Says Dr. Edwards, a Well-Known Ohio Physician

Dr. F. M. Edwards for 17 years treated scores of women for liver and bowel ailments. During these years he gave his patients a prescription made of a few well-known vegetable ingredients mixed with olive oil, naming them Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. You will know them by their olive color.

These tablets are wonder workers on the liver and bowels which cause a normal action, carrying off the waste and poisonous matter in one's system.

If you have a pale face, sallow look, dull eyes, pimples, coated tongue, headaches; a listless, no good feeling; all out of sorts, inactive bowels, you take one of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets nightly for a time and note the pleasing results.

Thousands of women and men take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—the successful substitute for calomel—now and then just to keep them fit. 15c and 30c.

CONSTIPATION means WEAKNESS

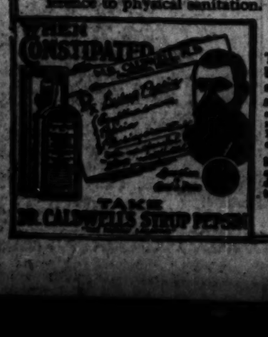
Constipation is practically universal among civilized human beings. It is a national curse causing inefficiency and physical unpreparedness. It causes disease, premature old age, lessens endurance and resistance, and many times fatal illness is directly traceable to its obnoxious results. The clear eye, healthy look, vim, vigor and vitality can be had only when the bowels are free and are moving regularly.

Dr. Caldwell's

SYRUP PEPSIN

The Family Laxative

—promptly relieves constipation. It is not a bitter medicine nor a griping, nauseating, uncomfortable physic. It is a pleasing liquid combination of Egyptian senna, pepsin and aromatics that Dr. Caldwell, with his long and extensive practice, found effective and an aid to Nature in performing her proper functions when the bowels were mistreated through improper food, lack of exercise, and indifference to physical sanitation.



Gently Restores The Bowels To Health

The first dose will gently start the bowels to action and as Nature resumes her proper functions, the dose may be gradually decreased. Your bowels should act at least once daily. If they do not, you need Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. 30,000,000 bottles sold annually prove its effectiveness. Use as instructed over 50 years.

It is sold everywhere in the United States and Canada. Try it at once. If your druggist will refuse you money if it fails to do as promised.

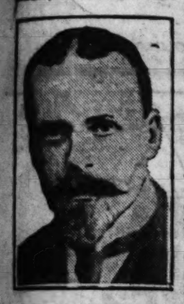
MARCH 22, 1925.

The Last New Englander

By H. L. Mencken.

THE late Prof. Barrett Wendell of Harvard, whose letters, done into a stately volume by M. A. De Wolfe Howe, now entertain the orthodox intellectuals of the republic, will probably go down into history as the last flower of the Puritan Kultur. Himself by no means a pure New Englander, for his surname was obviously Dutch, he yet had enough New England blood in him to feel himself wholly of that forlorn region, and he was accepted as a fit representative of it by all its tribal headmen. He was steeped in its tradition, and venerated its heroes. What came out of New England seemed to him to be virtuous and lovely, or, as he might have said, "gentlemanly"; what came out of the rest of the country was simply barbarous. Once he even wrote a book praising Cotton Mather!



PROF. BARRETT WENDELL, who clung valiantly to the Puritan tradition.

Nevertheless, Wendell was himself a walking proof that all he admired was passing; for, strain as he would, he could not squeeze himself into the old Puritan mold. Over and over again he would try to do so, but always, as he struggled with the lid, a diabolical, iconoclastic mood would overcome him, and he would leap up and emit a ribald yell. Harvard, startled and uneasy, never knew what to make of him. His principles were apparently impeccable; he was, in the current phrase, a consistent booster for the lost Golden Age, its glories and high deeds. And yet, whenever the answering cheer came back, he would make a mocking face and say something awful. The Cambridge campus is still warmed by his mockings. In his old age, beyond reach of reprisal, he even went to the shocking length of denying education itself!

Old Dr. Freud, the Vienna necromancer, has furnished a clew, I think, to this mystery. In one of his books he discusses the curious fact that jokes at the expense of the Jews are chiefly circulated by Jews themselves, and especially by the younger ones. Two Jewish drummers in a Pullman smoking room fall into an exchange of such jocosities almost automatically. Why? Because, says Freud, they attain thereby to an escape from their Jewishness, which often irks them. It is not that they are ashamed of being Jews; it is that the Jewish practices of their elders are burdensome. They dare not revolt openly, for their sense of filial piety is strong, so they take it out by making jokes.

Whence All But Him Had Fled.

By much the same psychological process, I believe, Wendell arrived at his curious mixture of orthodoxy and iconoclasm. Sentimentally and emotionally, he was moved powerfully by the New England tradition, and felt a strong impulse to defend it against the world. Intellectually, he saw clearly that it was in collapse around him—worse, that it had been full of defects and weaknesses even when it seemed to be strong. The result was his endless shuttling between worship and scorn. The last of the New Englanders, he clung pathetically to a faith which gradually succumbed to doubts. In his

GOOD morning!

"Nor snow, nor rain, nor wind, nor night
Shall stay the pilot in his flight."

Feel like seeing a clean, exciting melodrama with a pull at your patriotism and your heartstrings? Try "The Air Mail."

BILLIE DOVE. In a leading rôle of "The Air Mail."

Most of us still get pretty much of a thrill (poetry) from that steady chtt-chtt-chtt away up in the air which means that one of Uncle Sam's mail airplanes is pursuing its determined and romantic way through the ether. After dark that sound has a quality that appeals stirringly to the imagination. Away up there in the clouds—what is that lonely pilot thinking? Pray the wind holds true, that he may safely reach his journey's end!

"The Air Mail" has a hero who is anything but that thing when the story opens. He joins the United States corps of flying carriers with every intention in the world of using his job as a means of obtaining wealth through looting the registered mail. He is one of a gang, and he is to work on tips furnished him by a certain "Speck." On one tip, rather, for he knows that only once can such a deal be put through.

Friendship Brings the Change

He applies to the chief of the flyers, producing as recommendation a medal won during the war—by somebody—for distinguished bravery in aerial combat. The chief believes it belongs to the applicant, of course, and tells Russ Kane that if he passes his tests he will be engaged. He does—and is.

A warm friendship springs up between himself and another flyer—"Scotty." Scotty is an "honor" man. Scotty's ideals, Scotty's bravery, Scotty's confidence in and liking for himself, Russ Kane, slowly and surely work a change in the latter. And deep into his mind and soul eats the slogan that hangs on the wall of every station:

Nor snow, nor rain, nor wind, nor night
Shall stay the pilot in his flight.

When the long expected message comes from "Speck" regarding a rich haul in mail that he, Russ Kane, will be called upon to deliver, Kane experiences hideous moral nausea. He takes the mail up into the skies, and in the skies fights his battle and wins. The mail is delivered intact.

Now an honest-to-goodness citizen—a trustworthy servant of the government—Kane runs into heartache, adventure, and

Perusing the Mail of a Music Critic

By Edward Moore.

IF ever a music critic becomes obsessed with the idea that his curious method of making a living is worth writing memoirs about, he ought by all means to preserve a file of the correspondence that comes to his desk; at least such a part of it as does not deal with routine matters. It will be worth doing.

JASCHA HEIFETZ will play his only recital of the season at the Auditorium today.

He need not, unless he wishes, keep the letters of reproof, express or indirect, for they classify pretty well as routine. Curiously, however, such letters almost never touch on the subject of music itself, but almost always because this department has failed to rate a particular musician as highly in voltage, linear measure, and steam pressure as the writer thinks proper. Evidently the art of music means little and the attainments of the musician a great deal. Wherefore the barbed epithet and the heated adjective occasionally hiss through the postoffice department, headed this way.

There is enough else. Of requests for advice on selecting a music teacher there is no end, in spite of this department's protestations that its contact is with professional musicians and not with teachers. Of requests to give private hearings and advice to young and promising artists there are almost as many, as though the public were not a better final judge than any critic. Manuscript and newly printed music come next.

Once, a few seasons ago, this department hazarded the opinion that the popular music of that year was at an uncommonly low ebb. It was an unwise month. For months afterwards this desk was deluged with new songs, new fox trots, and requests to hear the same.

Petitioners and Poets

Occasional but always interesting is the letter from out of town which, when boiled down and read between the lines, indicates that the writer is due to prepare a paper for a club meeting and is particularly desirous to have some one else write it for her. It is usually on some topic that would need many thousands of words to treat, something like "The Tendencies of Modern Music."

Once in a while, though R. H. L. gets the most of these, a writer shows all of Mr. Silas Wegg's friendliness by dropping into poetry. Under the caption, "Maier and Pattison," Mildred H. Mesirow contributes this:

Strange black lilies
Swaying together
In shared rhythms;
Dripping sound saturated petals
From off slender fingertips.
In some far off, exotic land
Of tone and sense,
Must the roots of your two beings
Be closely intertwined.
A single soul, alas!
In separate bodies.

"THE FALL GUY" IS GOOD COMEDY

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—A young man named Gleason—James Gleason—is the hero of this year's story of the play that was kicked around Broadway, finally produced under protest, and scored an overnight hit.

But the Gleason story takes on added color because in his case the Broadway lightning has struck twice, and in practically the same place.

Gleason is a Milwaukeean in the sense that he spends his summers out there running a stock company. In Milwaukee, though, they think he is a good actor, which does their selective sense credit. He is.

ERNEST TRUEX in the title role of "The Fall Guy."

Last fall when he came back to New York from the La Follette neighborhood he had two plays: one, a farce called "Is Zat So?" which he had written with Richard Taber; the other, a light character comedy entitled "The Fall Guy," which he wrote alone and then turned over to another actor, George Abbott, for correction.

Both these plays had been tried on the Milwaukeeans and reported good entertainment. Your Broadway manager, however, is not inclined to place much credence in the reported enthusiasm of stock company audiences. Because of which both Gleason's plays were offered the length and breadth of theatrical Broadway without finding a buyer.

Duplicates Success of Predecessor

"Is Zat So?" finally was produced with what is known as actor money—Fanny Brice supplying 48 per cent of it—and has been playing to more laughs and bigger receipts than any other light play in town ever since.

And last week "The Fall Guy," achieving production largely on the strength of the other Gleason hit, practically duplicated its success.

"The Fall Guy" is amusing entertainment of a typical American brand. The hero, as Ernest Truex plays him, is an earnest little grade A moron doing his best to support his wife and a couple of her relatives on what he earns as a clerk in a drug store. Then he loses his job.

While he is trying to find another job a slick friend suggests there is money to be made by any discreet little fellow willing to pick up an innocent looking suitcase in a corner store and deliver it to a certain address later to be provided, storing it temporarily in his own flat.

The suitcase may contain liquor. Johnny suspects it does. But a lot of better people than he is are breaking the law to the extent of delivering liquor and getting rich at it. Why shouldn't he?

He gets the suitcase, tries to hide it, is pursued by federal agents connected with the narcotic squad, and finally threatened with arrest as a peddler of dope. There is a false bottom in the suitcase, and he has been used as the fall guy by his sharper acquaintances.

It happens, however, as it so often does in this type of American character comedy, that the chief of the federal

This Thing and That Thing of the Theater

By Frederick Donaghey.

PLAYS and shows are or soon will be needed for the Chicago theaters; and the gentlemen whose business it is to supply them do not seem to know just what to do about it. Report is that nobody much is going to the theater anywhere in the United States, including New-York, where there are more than sixty theaters and not more than twelve successes, although the hits are in excess of that number. The current issue of Variety says that business in the New-York theaters was so bad last Monday night that Leblang, the cut-rate merchant of tickets, listed thirty-two attractions as eager to sell seats for any price he might be able to obtain. . . .

RALPH MORGAN. He's back again: this time in the play named "Cobra."

The interest of this for Chicago lies in the plain indication that there isn't much in New-York to be sent hither with reasonable hope of success. Five current New-York entertainments are current in Chicago, also—"The Show-Off," "White Cargo," "Is Zat So?" "The Student-Prince," and "Rose-Marie." It is thought likely that "The Fall-Guy," a new success, will soon be put on here with a second cast; and that is regarded as one of the few plays on view there that could be paralleled here at this time with a reasonable expectation of success. The producer of "What Price Glory!" refused months ago to consider "duplicating" for this city; and now it is too late, so far as that especial piece is concerned. . . .

Besides, producing-managers are baffled by certain manifestations in the Chicago season, although the season has been generally better here than in New-York or any other city. Thus, they are puzzled as to why "Seventh Heaven" was not successful here; as to the comparatively-brief run of "The Show-Off"; as to Cyril Maude's failure to draw in "Aren't We All?"; and as to the slim returns and the hostile press on "Minick." All save "Minick" were notable successes in New-York; and the newspapers there were warm in praise of the quality of "Minick" and the manner in which it was staged and acted.

There's No Explaining Drama as a Business.

Seeking to explain such things in the lucid terms of ordinary business is always a chore without rewards: drama, in the matter of income and outgo, belongs under the heading of Bagehot's "commerce of the imponderable." . . .

I can glibly and with perfect sincerity say that "Seventh Heaven" was not managed with due regard for Chicago conditions by its producer, Mr. John Golden. That "Aren't We All?" was a thin, shiny little piece needing a high grade of what are called "drawing-room actors" to make it seem substantial and shining, and that Mr. Maude brought hither a company of hams, whereas in New-York the piece was wellnigh perfectly played. That the favorable chances for a good month of business for "Minick" were destroyed by the defeatist device of the local management in flooding the town with half-rate tickets even before the first Chicago performance, and of distributing these bargain-

Odds-and-Ends of Stage-News

Irvin Cobb has written a comic sketch named "Happy New-Year!"; and Edmund Breese is to use it in the two-a-day. . . . What a fellow Breese was, if you would believe the critics, when he acted the wicked old millionaire in the first cast of "The Lion and the Mouse"! That was way back in 1905; and in the two decades since then he hasn't done a thing to make the critics appear to know what they were writing about. The truth is, of course, that the rôle was well-nigh actor-proof: nobody who played it (and it was played by a number of hams in the course of the play's long and high prosperity) failed in the part. Oliver Doud Byron, then an old man, and his son, Arthur, then a young man, acted the rôle in respective companies for a season or two; and it was a toss-up as to which was the better. (The younger Byron had the part in the first Chicago performances.) The best actor I saw in it was one not popularly associated with it—George Fawcett, who has been so well liked for ten years or longer in the movies.

Michael Strange [Mrs. John Barrymore], returning from London, says audiences there have given to her husband "ovations of affection" for his Hamlet. . . . Also that she knows nothing of his "professional affairs," and that he knows nothing of hers.

Billy Reeves, an English knockabout whose impersonation of a drunk was popular for a long time in this country, is returning to do it again. . . . Lou Tellegen is again in the varieties, acting a cut-down of "Blind Youth." . . . James Barton, reported not long since as driven into permanent retirement by illness, is active again, and is making a tour of the first-class two-a-day theaters. . . . And the Misses Nellie and Sara Kouns, who started in Chicago as recitalists in 1916, are said to be getting $1,500 weekly in the varieties, and to have refused $2,000 to appear in picture-theaters.

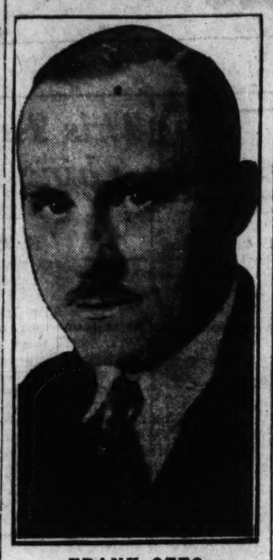
Among the new plays expected soon to be shown in New-York are "Backslappers," by Paul Dickey and Mann Page; "Wild Birds," little-theater stuff by Dan Totheroh; "The Toss of a Coin," by Arthur Previn and Edwin Maxwell; "Ostriches," by Edward Willbraham; "The Dunce-Boy," by Miss Lula Vollmer; and "Re: Ward," by William Collier. . . . . "Ostriches" has been acted in England.

Also among the expected things there are "The Four-Flusher," which is the thin little comedy by Cæsar Dunn in which Gregory Kelly acted in the Cort last season, when it was called "King for a Day"; "The Servant in the House," the piece by Charles Rann Kennedy, which was such a wow in 1908, and is now to be revived by the actors' union; and Shaw's "Cæsar and Cleopatra," to be staged by the Theater Guild in its new theater, with the date confidently set as April 6. . . . As has been stated in THE TRIBUNE, Lionel Atwill is the Guild's idea of an actor for Cæsar, and Miss Helen Hayes for Cleopatra; and Miss Hayes may be good in the part.

Then, although it doesn't matter much, one of the hole-in-the-wall houses is to try Congreve's "Love for Love," and one of the reg'lar theaters, in Forty-second Street right off Broadway, is to have a go at "Bringing Up Father," a tin-can attraction in the bad-lands these many years. . . . Which reminds me that somebody recently wrote in from an Iowa or Idaho town to explain that "The Goose Hangs High" was really a steal from "Bringing Up Father."

F. D.

COMES THROUGH



FRANK OTTO

He was regarded as a so-and-so sort of an actor with a George M. Cohan complex when he performed here in 1922 in "The O'Brien Girl" and in 1923 in "Little Nellie Kelly"; but he is what is known in the Loop as there in his acting as the pugilist's manager in "Is Zat So?" . . . Those who have seen both say that Mr. Otto is quite as good as James Gleason, who has the rôle in New-York; and The Tribune thinks Mr. Gleason a good comedian.

This Thing and That Thing of the Theater

ships among those naïve theater-goers who thought "Sakura" a wonder-play and "Up the Ladder" just grand drama. ("Mnick" was something for those who cared for "The Swan," for "Beggar on Horseback," for the drama rather than for the tank-town acting in "White Cargo," for the fine "veracity" and the perfect workmanship of "The Show-Off.") . . . Yes, indeed: the words of explanation just pour themselves into order on the sheet; but, what explanation have I in the case of "The Show-Off"? There isn't any that I may make; and there is none to be made by others that I should accept.

The dearth of attractions for the Chicago theaters traces to the unholy proportion of casualties among the new plays given in New-York from August to January. New-York at the end of last season had little left for this city; and we've used up as much of it as survived long enough to get a showing here. (I seem to think of nothing save "Rain" as worth bringing on from among the plays on view in New-York twelve months ago.) . . . And it is interesting to remember that three of Chicago's theaters held at the beginning of this season attractions carried over from last season through the Summer—"No! No, Nanette!" "Topsy and Eva," and "Abie's Irish Rose"—and that this circumstance greatly simplified the booking of Chicago in the Autumn.

And there's nothing I may do about it save to write about it; and there's nothing you may do about it save to read about it,—although I think you are depriving yourself of something good in not going to see "The Show-Off."

Two Novelties for Manhattan.

The new plays for the week in New-York are:

"The Blue Peter," by E. Temple Thurston, with Miss Margaret Wycherly. . . . The play is to be put on by a new concern, calling itself The Stagers.

"Eve's Leaves," by Harry Chapman Ford, with a cast of unknowns.

More interesting in its advance-aspect than either of the two new plays is the revival in New-York of "The Little Minister," with Miss Ruth Chatterton as Lady Babbie and her husband, Ralph Forbes, in the title-rôle. Miss Marjorie Wood, J. M. Kerrigan, Hubert Druce, and Thomas Findlay are others in it. . . . The New-York papers say that Miss Maude Adams "has been solely identified with the play in this country"; and that is not quite so. Barrie's novel of "The Little Minister" was not properly copyrighted in the United States; and, when Barrie's dramatization turned out to be a success with Miss Adams in it, other versions were quickly prepared and staged. Moreover, I am of the belief that the late Charles Frohman sent out another actress in Barrie's version to the cities not in Miss Adams' itinerary.

In an effort to make use of theaters lacking new plays, both "Beggar on Horseback" and "Sally, Irene, and Mary" are to be restored tomorrow night to New-York performance. . . . The former was brought to Chicago at the end of its New-York run, which was for about six months. As to "Sally, Irene, and Mary," it was among the inexplicable successes of New-York three seasons ago, and an explicable flivver in Chicago when performed in the beginning of last season in the Great Northern. One of the authors, Eddie Dowling, is at the head of the cast: he was not in the Chicago performances.

Miss Peggy Wood tomorrow night goes into the title-rôle of "Candida," as revived in New-York by the actors' union, leaving Miss Katherine Cornell free for her preparations to perform in "The Green Hat."

G.-and-S.

Tom Burke, who did some good singing in the Chicago engagement of Hassard Short's stupid revue, is to be the Nanki-Poo of the Messrs. Shubert's revival of "The Mikado"; and this seems like good casting, if there be somebody at-hand to tell the tenor how to read Gilbert's good lines. . . . William Danforth, who has been in "Blossom-Time" ever since that operetta was staged in this country, is to be put into "The Mikado"—in the title-rôle, maybe; and, as announced the other day in THE TRIBUNE, Miss Marguerite Namara, once of the Chicago Opera, is to be the Yum-Yum.

And there will be but one revival of Gilbert and Sullivan's "Princess Ida" in New-York, although two were listed until a few days ago: one by a band of up-an-alley players in a side street. . . . The piece is to be "professionally" put on in the Casino; and I have a notion that it will not be a go, although on the whole better Gilbert and better Sullivan than their last joint-work, "The Grand Duke; or, The Statutory Duel," which has never been staged in this country, and as good, I think, as its predecessor, "Utopia Limited," which failed when given in New-York about the time of the London première. I don't think "Utopia" has been given in this country outside of New-York.

The critics in New-York have made another discovery—that Ibsen's "The Wild Duck" is first-class drama. . . . It was just that when Ibsen wrote it; and it has been that ever since, so far as I know.

Ane one of them, Alexander Woollcott, is insisting that Miss Laurette Taylor is a good actress. . . . She is, and her being such is a fact first brought to public attention by James O'Donnell Bennett back in 1909, when she acted in the Garrick in the play made from the novel named "The Great John Ganton." She was, in all likelihood, a good actress even before Mr. Bennett said so; and I am certain that she has been a good one in the sixteen years since he first said it. But it is a pity that she doesn't keep right on working at it!

Raleber Hughes, whose "Hell-Bent for Heaven" is on view in the Playwrights, has written another, named "Elmer." As George S. Kaufman says in today's New-York Times, "From the sound of the title, it looks very much as though one more unfortunate girl is to bear the brunt of a mountain-moving in the theater."

EACH IN HER WAY IS CONTRIBUTING

MISS PRIMROSE CARYLL MISS MINNA GOMBELL

MISS CARYLL is the daughter of the late Ivan Caryll, the Anglo-Belge whose music was heard in Chicago in "The Pink Lady," "Chin-Chin," "The Shop-Girl," and other light pieces. She was here in 1921 as Cerise in the revival of "Erminie" wherein Francis Wilson and De Wolf Hopper were co-stars. . . . She is here again in "Stepping Stones," wherein her workaday task is to appear as Radiola, and her special chore is keeping an eye on Miss Dorothy Stone, in whose place Miss Caryll would go on in case Miss Stone didn't.

Miss Gombell is not an unknown, although a stranger hereabout in what are called "big" parts. She first took New-York's attention back in 1918 when she unexpectedly appeared in the principal part of Frederic and Fanny Hatton's comedy named "The Indestructible Wife" after Miss Grace George had been announced as the star thereof. . . . Miss Gombell comes tonight as the actress of the part in "Cobra" played last season in New-York by Miss Judith Anderson.

"The Fall Guy" Is Good Comedy

agents is suitor for the hand of Johnny's sister-in-law and, therefore, knows his prospective prisoner well enough to believe him. So Johnny helps the agents round up the head of the dope gang, and wins himself a job on the force.

Truex is immensely amusing as the defiant, wistful, hunted, and unhappy bantam, and gives, in the play's more important scenes, one of the best of his recent characterizations. Beatrice Nichols is his loyal but exacting wife, and Ralph Sipperly extracts many laughs from a saxophone he is determined to conquer so that he can give up truck driving and go in for cabaret art.

Renovating the Follies.

Whatever "The Comic Supplement" may have been before Florenz Ziegfeld determined to abandon it, the scenes and the stars salvaged and brought over from it to the spring edition of "The Follies" have improved that entertainment amazingly.

The stars are W. C. Fields and Ray Dooley and the McEvoy skits are as genuinely reflective of American family life as any the revue managers have so far uncovered—funnier than any I recall in the last ten Follies, and I can't remember the other nine.

Will Rogers, refusing to permit the influx of new talent to take his own show away from him, is working a little bit harder than usual and going in seriously for comic characterization. In a skit he wrote for his own use called "A Friend of Calvin's" he appears at a country store down Vermont way wearing chin whiskers, boots, and a dialect.

The new bill has so thoroughly stirred up the Follies addicts that they are starting all over again, as though it were a new revue which, in effect it is. Some of the bigger song numbers have been retained, but the chorus has been newly costumed, running mostly to knee length stockings and old fashioned garters.

Ministers Enjoy It.

"The Handy Man" is a play of sweetness and lightning, a bolt from the gray frightening the heroine away from a life of crime. In it Tim Murphy is playing a sort of Hiram Pollyana, a village carpenter bubbling with platitudes and homely advice. Fred Wall and Ralph Murphy wrote it and ministers of the gospel, they tell me, like it a lot.

It struck me as being one of those highly implausible tales of the theater that you have to forgive a lot to like a little. The heroine is a crook lady down from New York to pick the pockets of the yokelry. She falls in love with one and is about to lead astray another who is a good boy, but weak. It is the night they are ready to start for the train with the loot that the lightning blast frightens the girl. It is God's warning, the carpenter informs her, and she determines to play safe and reform. Margaret Cusack is the girl, and Grace Reals is in the cast.

Calm of Lent.

A Lenten calm has settled upon the theaters. There are no new plays and few of the old ones are just now living up to the expectations of their anxious producers.

It is not an unusual condition at this time of year; though to hear it discussed with dismal prophecy on the street corners you might think so. The first touch of spring and the burdens of the income tax always combine to turn the thought of even the Broadway crowd away from indoor entertainment and unnecessary expenditures.

Then a section of Broadway has been depressed by the final withdrawal of Al Jolson and his "Big Boy" entertainment from the Winter Garden, in the face of the tremendous money business they were doing. The loss of money is always saddening to Broadway.

Another Cock Robin.

There was one new play this week. "The Devil Within" it is called, and belongs to the mystery series in which the most generously hated member of a large company is sent to meet his Maker at the end of the first act and the rest of the evening is spent fastening the crime upon the gentlest and least suspected of his associates.

It is an average sort of play of its type, a little more primitive than the recent output. The comedy, for example, goes back to those good old days when every melodrama had a large Irish servant girl to bejabber and defy a red-faced Irish policeman, and also to confound the crime investigators by breaking in upon the proceedings to relate her theories of the murder. In the early nineties that was popular stuff.

In "The Devil Within," John Blackwood, a hard man and cruel, is murdered the night he quarrels with his Kaffir servant, cuts his niece out of his will, refuses to see the woman he has deserted, or have anything to do with the son she has borne him, and has high words with his attorney.

They all have cause to sigh with relief when John passes out.

There is the usual turning on and off of lights, slinking figures back of portieres and off-stage shots. And at 11 o'clock the guilty man is apprehended. William Ingersoll, Mary Hall, Helen Holmes and Elwood Bostwick are prominently cast.

The play was written by Charles Horan who, they tell me, is a picture actor when he is not writing plays, and produced by his father-in-law, a prosperous silk merchant.

JUST A MINUTE

MISS DEVAH MOREL

She is in "Ma Pettengill," and has a minute for herself in the course of the comedy—just a minute. 'Tis when, as Mrs. Lon Price, she is apprised by a jerk of his thumb that Lon desires her to drop the hobo poet and go home.

OPENING APRIL 6:

"The Green Hat" in the Selwyn.—Michael Arlen's play based on his like-named novel: the piece is to have its première next week in Detroit. . . . Miss Katherine Cornell, Miss Ann Harding (who was so good in "The Horse-Thief"), and Leslie Howard will be in the cast.

OPENING APRIL 13:

"Be Yourself!" in the Harris.—A comic play by George S. Kaufman and Marc Conelly with music by Lewis Gensler and Milton Schwarzwald: the piece was shown in New-York in the recent Autumn. . . . Miss Queenie Smith, Jack Donahue, and Miss Georgie Caine are in the company. . . .

STAGE-NEWS

"Mercenary Mary" and "Gardenia's Garden" are pieces with music said to be ready for big-town showing. . . . The latter has its basis in the comedy known as "The Charm-School."

Moran and Mack, who are said to have given to the new Greenwich Village Follies whatever fun was in it, are going to England for a tour of the music-halls. . . . Miss Clara Kimball Young, who has been trying hard for a long time to break into the articulate drama, is to go into the varieties with a sketch by Tom Barry, "From Over the Sea."

"Kelly's Vacation" was tried again recently out in Los Angeles, where it was at least as much of a flivver as when given last year in Chicago. . . . Robert Ames, who was in it here, was in it there, too. He's remaining there to go into "The Dark Angel" with Miss Marion Oakley and Cyril Keightley. The latter play is running in New-York, with Miss Patricia Collinge nd Reginald Mason at the head of the cast.

The Last New Englander

By H. L. Mencken.

later years he thus stood upon a burning deck whence all but him had fled.

Two things he could never bring himself to admit, both obvious first, that the so-called culture of Puritan New England was largely imaginary, that civilization was actually introduced into the region by anti-Puritans, and, second, that when transcendentalism came in the leadership of puritanism passed from New England and went to the south and middle west. To admit the truth of either proposition was psychically impossible to a man of Wendell's romantic feelings. Each, baldly stated, seemed to flout the local Holy Ghost. And yet both were true, and their proofs were visible at a glance.

The first, I daresay, will never be granted formally, or even heard patiently, by any genuine New Englander. Only a few months ago Walter Prichard Eaton, a very able Puritan, was arguing eloquently that his blue-nosed ancestors were really lovers of beauty—nay, downright artists—and offering the charming old houses on Nantucket island as exhibits. Unfortunate examples, alas, alas! The houses on Nantucket were not built until the Puritan theocracy was completely demoralized and impotent—until Boston had a theater and was already two-thirds of the way to hell. And if they were actually built by Puritans at all, it was by Puritans who had gone out into the wide, wide world and savored its dreadful marvels—Puritans who came back from the eastern seas with gaudy silks in their sea chests and a new glitter in their eyes.

Error Is Historians'.

Orthodox history, at least as it appears in school books, assumes that the witch burners and infant damners had it all their own way in New England, even down to Revolutionary times. They actually met with sturdy opposition from the start. All of their seaports gradually filled up with sailors who were anything but pious, and even the back country had its heretics, as the incessant wars upon them demonstrate. The fact that only Puritans could vote has deceived the historians; they mistake what was the law for what was really said and done. We have had proofs in our own time that that error is easy. Made by students of early New England, it leads to multiple absurdities.

The fact is that the civilization that grew up in New England, such as it was, owed little to the actual Puritans; it was mainly the product of anti-Puritans, either home bred or imported. Even the school system, so celebrated in legend, owed whatever value was in it to heretics. The Puritans did not found their schools for the purpose of propagating what is now known as learning; they founded them simply as nurseries of orthodoxy. Beyond the barest rudiments, nothing of any worldly value was taught in them. The principal subject of study, first and last, was theology, and it was theology of the most grotesque and insane sort ever cherished by man.

Genuine education began in New England when the rising minority of heretics, eventually to become a majority, rose against this theology, and tried to put it down. The revolt was first felt at Harvard; it gradually converted a seminary for the training of Puritan pastors into a genuine educational institution. Harvard delivered New England and made civilization possible there. All the men who adorned that civilization in the days of its glory—Emerson, Hawthorne, and all the rest of them—were essentially anti-Puritans.

Tolerance Now Rules.

Today, save in its remoter villages, New England is no more Puritan than, say, Maryland or Pennsylvania. There is scarcely a clergyman in the entire region who, if the Mathers could come back to life, would not be condemned by them instantly as a heretic, and even an atheist. The dominant theology is mild, skeptical, and wholly lacking in passion. The evangelical spirit has completely disappeared. There is a tolerance that is almost indistinguishable from indifference. Roman Catholicism and Christian Science are alike viewed amiably. The old heat is gone.

Where it lingers in America is in far places—on the prairies of the middle west, in the backwaters of the south. There, I believe, Puritanism still retains not a little of its old vitality. There it survives, not merely as a system of theology, but also as a way of life. It colors every human activity. Kiwanis mouths it; it is powerful in politics; learning wears its tinge. To charge a Harvard professor of today with agnosticism would sound as banal and absurd as to charge him with playing the violoncello.

But his colleague of Kansas, facing the same accusation, would go damp upon the forehead, and his colleague of Texas would leave town between days.

Wendell, a sentimentalist, tried to put these facts behind him, though he must have been well aware of them. There got into his work, in consequence, a great futility. His criticism dealt, only too often, with shadows. And as he passed into a shadow himself there emerged from the middle west a whole swarm of neo-Puritan critics, led by their pastors, the hayseed still in their hair—a regiment of evangelists sworn to put down sin, to make the national letters pure, to save the Puritan ascetic from the antinomians of New York. They are still hard at it, sometimes making fair weather and sometimes foul. They are far less urbane than Wendell—far less learned, dignified, and charming. But they are a great deal more real.

KICK KORNER

All So Different.

Dear Miss Tinée: I, too, was much disappointed and even irritated with "Tess of the D'Urbervilles." I expected to be disappointed, knowing Blanche Sweet is so different from my idea of Tess, but I could not imagine that they would change the whole story as they did.

I used to stand for things like that much better before I saw "If Winter Comes" and "The Clean Heart," as those are examples of what a picture can be when it follows the book accurately as to story and characters, and I am sure people who hadn't read the books enjoyed the pictures as much as I did. "So Big" was another disappointment to me on account of the changes, and I was more than irritated with that. BERTHA.

romance. Heartache when his beloved Scotty dies—from pneumonia, caught while doggedly flying his course through "snow and rain and wind and night," that mail expected at a certain time shall be delivered at a certain time. Romance when an uncharted landing brings into his life the girl who is to be the One Woman in it. Adventure when "Speck" and the gang, learning of his desertion to their nefarious causes, get busy.

Guess I won't tell you any more of the plot.

"The Air Mail" is sincerely acted. It has action, buoyancy, suspense, surprise, interest of various kinds, and good photography, direction, sets, and scenery. Some comedy is provided by a boy airship fan with a new kind of parachute he hopes to patent and the gangling prairie flapper who adores him and is afraid he's going to hurt himself.

See you tomorrow!

A REFRESHING BREEZE.

Dear Miss Tinée: I was anxious to see your criticism of "The Great Divide," and after reading it quite agree with you.

After witnessing these human clothes racks of men and women that we are fed up on "The Great Divide" was like a refreshing breeze, with its wonderful scenery, its he-man, and its lovely feminine heroine, and its fine cast all through, including the villain, Wallace Beery. KAY KAY.

Fashion Advice for Home Dressmakers

—Second Floor—State Street—

The McCall Pattern Company has sent one of its cleverest fashion advisers, MRS. LYDDA SHEKELL, to our Yard Goods Floor to advise you about your spring and Easter clothes. Thousands of Women have found that after a talk with the Fashion Adviser and after watching how really simple it is to cut your coat or dress, using a McCall Printed Pattern, they, too, could make their own clothes.

At 11:00 A. M. and 2:30 P. M. daily a demonstration of how to cut a garment.

Ask all the questions you want to, see the garment cut, and then draped on a live model—ask about the colors, the patterns, and the combinations of the season's new weaves and what colors will be best for you—in fact, bring the Fashion Adviser any of your dressmaking problems—at any time of the day.

Perusing the Mail of a Music Critic

By Edward Moore.

Incidentally, the music department is told that the reason the strange black lilies did not sway together in the shared rhythms of Leo Sowerby's "King Estmere" with the Chicago Symphony orchestra is that they are planning to drip its sound saturated petals next season.

Out of Chicago university's department of zoology comes this from Miss L. Hyman, with a postscript to the effect that if I am not able to send it about it in THE TRIBUNE:

"My Dear Mr. Moore: I don't know how to communicate with Mr. Pablo Casals personally; therefore, I appeal to you for help. I want to tell him—I must tell him—that there never has been any playing by anybody on any instruments since music began to equal his rendition of Beethoven's Variations on a theme by Mozart. It was divine perfection. When Mr. Casals sets his bow to the strings, he makes every other performer of music—and I have heard all of the great ones—sound like a struggling amateur.

"For Casals has reached the goal towards which others strive but never attain—he is able to make the instrument speak exactly the music that is in his soul. He seems to play not upon the strings of his instrument but on his own heart strings. Every lover of music should kneel in reverence and gratitude that to him is granted the privilege of listening in the flesh to music perfect and divine, music pure and flawless, music in which all thought of the performer and his technique is lost in an emotion that is half ecstasy and half pain. When he finished the Beethoven piece I was weeping, weeping that to me—insignificant me—should be granted this privilege.

"'Such acrobatics on the strings!' exclaimed an enthusiastic young man near me at the close of the concert.

"'Young fool,' thought I, 'the high gods should strike you deaf for such stupidity.'

"O, yes, and please tell Mr. Casals he played everything else on his program infinitely better than anybody else in the world could. And beg him to repeat the Beethoven piece the next time he comes."

These are only specimens. There are also the products of the press agents, professional and amateur, the press agent for hire and the press agent for friendship. Some of them reach high points of fanciful invention. But they need a separate chapter by themselves.

Two New Artists.

Mr. Stock will introduce two soloists with the Chicago Symphony orchestra this week, one at the popular concert Thursday night, the other at the subscription pair Friday afternoon and Saturday night. Both are Chicagoans.

Kathryn Witwer, soprano, will sing for the Thursday audience. This is the winner in the women's voice section of the contest conducted by the Society of American Musicians and will appear in the aria, "Pace, Pace," from Verdi's "Forza del Destino."

Edward Collins, pianist and composer, has written a concerto which he will play at the subscription programs. His name as composer has appeared on these programs before, but it will be the first time he has been soloist in his own composition. The work will be preceded by Bach's Second Suite and followed by Brahms' Fourth Symphony.

Mostly About Music.

Several high points are promised for the week's concert attendents. In this afternoon's list Jascha Heifetz will make his only recital appearance of the season at the Auditorium; Julia Claussen, Swedish mezzo-soprano, will return to the Studebaker after an absence of several seasons; E. Robert Schmitz, pianist, who makes a specialty of modern music, will be at the Playhouse; and the New York String quartet, with Ethel Leginska as assisting artist, will appear at the Blackstone. The quartet will play four of her "Poems," and she will play the piano part of the Franck Quintet.

Renée Thornton, a soprano of uncommon merit, will sing at the Blackstone tomorrow afternoon under the auspices of the Musicians Club of Women, presenting what looks to be the most interesting as it is the most original song program of the season. It includes a group of Pietro Floridia's modern transcriptions of the old Italian songs, another group by Schubert, a third by the Spanish Joaquin Nin and the French Ernest Moret, and a final set of American works, which includes a new song by Richard Hageman, her husband and accompanist.

The Chicago Madrigal club sends word that its Thursday night program will consist of its own prize madrigals and other compositions written for it. This year's prize madrigal is "May Comes Laughing," and its music is by Max A. Strong. D. A. Clippinger is the conductor and Rollin Pease the soloist.

One Composer to Another.

"Igor Stravinsky has not written music to this ballet—not even good horseshoe circle music," writes Theodore Stearns in the New York Morning Telegraph about the Metropolitan's recent performance of "Petroushka." "It was merely a mass of inconsequential ultra-modern orchestration that barked but did not bite.

"Upon his orchestral palette Stravinsky pours a hundred helpless instrumentalists and then, apparently, he sounds in an airplane and doses them with a few kegs of tar, ditto alaxlime; with sacks of seidlitz powders with undrinkable water to ignite their latent powers; plenty of oil—pick out any kind you choose; it's all the same to us—and the result is the score to 'Petroushka.' It's not so bad after it's all over. Like a tooth that was and isn't not."

Lawrence Gilman says, "The score contains a masterpiece, a thing of fascinating gayety and wit and charm." "It is fine in the strict sense of that abused word," declares W. J. Henderson.

"Few dramatic composers have so beautifully suggested the tingle of the open air and the riotous spirit of the crowd," says Olin Downes, who also says that Mr. Bolm's Petroushka had personality and was highly expressive. Paul Sanborn announces, "Petroushka' is incontestably one of the finest of modern ballets."

In view of these comments and in memory of the glories of the earlier performances, "Petroushka" respectfully if not hopefully called to the attention of the Chicago Civic opera company.

VOICE AND BEAUTY

RENEE THORNTON
[Kessler Photo.]

A greatly successful recital artist here on several occasions, Miss Thornton will sing again tomorrow afternoon at the Blackstone theater under the auspices of the Musicians' Club of Women. A feature of her program will be a new song by her husband, Richard Hageman, a well known composer, who will be her accompanist.

How Blanche Lost Her Sweet Temper

LOS ANGELES, Cal.—[Special Correspondence.]—Sunday night is usually a quiet family night at a certain Hollywood café, but not so last week. The classic strains of "Souvenir" were floating across the supper room when one well known director known to fame as Marshall Nellan solemnly and with exaggerated caution, entered the room. He passed the first few tables with notable success, but as he neared the neighborhood of the French room his troubles overcame him—or perhaps it was the music—and he sank into a chair and frankly began to sob. On and on wailed the violin—and on and on wailed Mickey.

Finally, mastering his feelings, he waved an imperial command to the violinist to approach. The violinist was not quick about it—whereat Mickey rose, and taking him from the orchestra platform, conducted him to his table. The modern King Cole then ordeped his pipe and his dinner and so the evening passed; perspiration breaking out on the head of the embarrassed and overworked fiddler—but any cessation of his dulcet harmony brought restraining rebuke from Mr. Nellan.

Along about Tuesday saw Marshall and Blanche Sweet, his wife, having dinner with a party of friends at the Plantation. The jolly modern King Cole was rambling around from table to table, probably looking for another fiddler and his flowing bowl, when Blanche lost her sweet temper and knocked him for a row of clothes pins. Mickey, overwhelmed at what seemed to him like treachery, promptly pasted the missus a hearty love tap right on beezer. Referees interfered at this point, so it was called a draw when Hollywood read the headlines in the local papers next morning over the grapefruit.

Alice Lake and Syd Chaplin were dancing together on Wednesday at the Montmartre—Alice in a blue and silver brocaded dress with a broad band of kolinsky at the hem. Film folk are glad to see Alice back from New York, where she has been until recently with her husband of not quite a year, Robert Williams.

A while back an affair that thrilled every one with its intensity was that between Franklyn Farnum and Alice. Three years Alice waited faithfully, the gossips say, while Franklyn secured his divorce—and the morning after it was secured woke to read in the morning paper that he had married Alma Rubens. Then a later affair of a year and a half flivvered with Bert Lytell. Last year Alice thought at last Cupid was using the feather end of his arrow on her—and married Robert Williams.

But this, too, seems to have ended in disaster—for rumors are that she intends to divorce Robbie. There seems to be some doubt in Alice's mind as to what became of her money, her wardrobe, and her car; these questions will no doubt be refereed by the judge. Miss Lake is living with Mae Busch, who has the reputation of being first aid to drowning sailors.

Claire de Lorez, in a henna silk ensemble trimmed with timber wolf and close fitting small hat made of pastel silk flowers, was dancing with Edna Purviance's oil millionaire. Charles Chaplin and his wife, Lita Grey, in one of her favorite black effects, sat at a side table out of the way of the dancers.

Saturday saw the usual noon lunching and dancing crowd—Robert Fraser, Syd Chaplin, and John Patrick staging it; Noah Beery with wife and a party of friends, Bobby Agnew, Alice Lake, Hugo Ballin, Pauline Starke, Hazel Dean, and Trilby Clarke; Gertrude Olmsted at lunch with Mr. and Mrs. Albert Shelby Levino, and wearing a broad henna straw hat with henna feather fancy. Lois Wilson in a gray felt cloche and black satin coat trimmed with blue fox, looked a trifle red around the eyes, and was not dancing. Lois was up for night after night at the bedside of poor little Lucille Ricksen, who passed away in Lois' arms. Many of the younger set were not present, due, no doubt, to the shock of the Ricksen tragedy, which has profoundly moved the movie colony.

Du Pont Chemical Engineers fulfill the promise of extra value to you!

AT each of the great plants which make du Pont Paints and Varnishes there are quiet rooms; filled, not with ponderous machinery but with delicate apparatus; manned, not by mechanics but by scientists—du Pont Chemical Engineers.

These men have tested every du Pont Paint and Varnish Product in actual service; they know the quality of those products and concentrate their energies toward absolute uniformity of that quality. Such is du Pont Chemical Control.

Still another group of du Pont Chemical Engineers is engaged in research—a never-ending quest for new materials, new processes which will still further improve the quality of du Pont Paints and Varnishes. Their findings are checked by laboratory and service tests; then made a part of manufacturing practice, in order that every can of du Pont Paint or Varnish will give you that extra value which it is du Pont's purpose to give.

The du Pont Oval is more than a guarantee of highest quality in paints, varnishes, enamels, stains; it is a pledge of service, fulfilled by the entire du Pont organization. Ask the nearest du Pont Service Agent to select the right du Pont Product for your use.

AMATEURS PLAN FORMATION OF WORLD LEAGUE

Will Hold Congress in Paris in April.

Hartford, Conn., March 21.—[Special.]—Amateur radio telegraph operators of the world having achieved and perfected a system of international radio communication on short waves, are arranging for appointment of delegates to the first international congress of amateurs, which is to convene in Paris from April 16 to 20, according to the American Radio Relay league, the amateur association of North America. Representatives of American and Canadian amateurs are expecting to leave New York on the S. S. Mauretania on April 1st, returning to this country on the S. S. Berengaria the first of the following month, providing thirteen days in Paris and three in London.

Long Under Discussion.

Plans for this congress have been under way since last year, when Hiram Percy Maxim, president of the A. R. R. L., on a visit to Europe, was elected president of the temporary committee of organization. At this initial meeting representatives from eight different countries were present, and it was the unanimous desire that a permanent international association of amateurs be formed. The three leading radio societies of France have banded together to arrange for the coming congress and announcements have been mailed to all of the representative amateur societies of the world.

America to Participate.

Because amateurs of this country have taken the initiative in the development of two-way private international radio communication through the arrangement of short wave tests with amateurs in Europe, South America, and Australasia, they are expected to participate actively in the affairs of the congress. At their annual meeting recently directors of the A. R. R. L. voted to send as their delegates President Maxim and Secretary Kenneth B. Warner. Although only one vote from each country is to be recognized as having official voice in the affairs of the congress a general invitation has been extended to all amateurs who may desire to attend as private individuals, or in an advisory capacity.

Result Sought.

The I. A. R. U., as a result of this congress, is expected to become virtually a federation of national amateur associations the objects of which will be the promotion of amateur interests in their respective countries and the suggestion of methods and regulations for bettering international private communication. Among the various matters scheduled for consideration at the congress are the following: the organization of an I. A. R. U.; methodical organization of technical tests by amateurs, and the selection of an international auxiliary language. A secretariat has been established at 2 Rue de l'Eschaude-Saint-Germaine, Paris, at which place advance arrangements are being made.

MEXICAN BAND TO BE REGULAR AIR FEATURE

It will be a joy to any one who has traveled in old Mexico to learn that CZE, the new station there, is to broadcast programs regularly by the full police band of Mexico City, one of the best military bands in the world.

It is a 500 watt station on a 450 meter wave length and the schedule begin at 6 p. m., mountain time, except Sundays. During the early days of operation CZE in Mexico City was heard with distinctness as far away as London, Montreal, and Toronto.

Of vast importance in Mexico is the fact that this station, which is operated by the Mexican government, will play an essential part in the effort to educate peons.

STATIONS HOLD CONVERSATION BY NOVEL METHODS

Davenport and Cincinnati Arrange Tests.

An impromptu radio test conducted between stations WOC, Davenport, and WSAI, Cincinnati, using their respective experimental call letters, 9XG and 8XAA, excited unusual interest and comment among radio fans fortunate enough to tune in during the early morning hours of Sunday, March 8.

The program started shortly after midnight with a half hour musical program from 8XAA, which was picked up and rebroadcast from the Davenport station, and this was followed by a similar program produced in the WOC studios, picked up and rebroadcast from Cincinnati.

Two Way Conversation.

Following this preliminary test the two stations carried on a two way conversation and listeners in were able to hear both side of the conversation from either point by tuning either to Davenport or Cincinnati. This was accomplished by clever switching of the radio transmitter at both ends from the microphone to the output of a receiving set tuned to the wave length of the opposite station.

The tests were primarily made to determine the degree of success that might be expected in rebroadcasting signals received on a regularly assigned broadcasting wave length. Usually programs for rebroadcasting at a distant station are transmitted on comparatively short wave lengths.

In the recent test no telephone lines were used and in both cases the receiving outfits were located in the same room where the high power transmitter was in operation. These two considerations, along with the fact that the tests had not been pre-arraged, combined to make the success of the experiment all the more remarkable.

Will Test Further.

So great was the interest manifest by broadcast listeners all over the continent that the two stations are now arranging for a series of more elaborate tests of the same order, and are installing remotely situated receiving stations and special mixing devices which will provide for more flexible handling of future experiments, and the engineers in charge of both stations intimate that they have a few more cards up their sleeves which promise to be aces.

WOC, at Davenport, and WSAI, Cincinnati, both have the new Western Electric 5,000 watt type equipment and operate on 484 and 326 meters, respectively.

Navy's 71 Meter Station Heard Daily by World

There is class to Uncle Sam in radio as well as everything else. This is brought home by the fact of a world-wide reception of signals on 71 meters from the high frequency set at the naval research laboratory, Washington, D. C. It is heard in France, Germany, Holland, the British isles, China, India, Hawaii, and Samoa. This serves as a daily reminder to these far away countries that Uncle Sam is still doing business at the old stand.

"Home," Subject of "Al" Stearns at the Sunday Evening Club

"Al" Stearns, principal of the Phillips Academy, Andover, Mass., one of the oldest "prep" schools in the United States, will speak at the Sunday Evening club tonight. His subject, "What About the American Home?" indicates that he is to speak on a theme near to his heart, the welfare of the youth of today.

In two previous addresses before the club Dr. Stearns appealed to parents to recognize their responsibilities to the younger generation, and his twenty years' experience as head of the Massachusetts preparatory school has given him a keen insight into the needs of young people. The address will be broadcast over KYW.

Harry A. Wheeler, vice president of the club, will preside, and the informal talk at the 7 o'clock meeting will be given by Prof. Gerald B. Smith of the University of Chicago, who will continue the series, "The Men About Jesus," started by Dean Mathews. Mark Love and Rose Lutiger Gannon will be soloists.

ENTIRE WORLD CAN EAVESDROP ON THIS BANQUET

Oakland, Cal., March 21.—[Special.]—Millions of radio listeners will be invited to eavesdrop through KGO on speeches and music at the banquet of the fifty-seventh birthday ceremonies of the University of California, Monday. Promptly at 8:45 p. m. [Pacific time] a remote control line into the Hotel Oakland, connected with KGO, will be switched into use.

The program will include addresses from five presidents, past and present, of the Universities of California and Leland Stanford, David Starr Jordan, Benjamin Ide Wheeler, Ray Lyman Wilbur, David P. Barrows, and W. W. Campbell.

Reports received today indicate, according to Robert Sibley, executive manager of the California Alumni association, that New York City, Washington, D. C., and Chicago bodies will be listening in. Seventy-five groups assembled in the cities and towns of the Pacific coast have also reported that they are prepared to listen in.

Henry M. Robinson, former member of the Dawes commission, will speak. Stanford and California Glee clubs will vie with each other. Harry J. Ryan, president last year of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers, will address the banqueters. And color will be lent to the radio scene by a debate between Charles K. Field, author and publisher, representing Stanford, and someone, whose name has not yet been announced, taking the part of California.

B. L. A. PROPOSES LOW WIRE TOLL FOR LISTENERS

Suggests It to Telegraph People.

Frank H. McDonald, president of the Broadcast Listeners' association, has addressed officials of the telegraph companies on the proposition for a special rate evenings for the benefit of listeners who wish to communicate with broadcasting stations.

"There are sent nightly," said Mr. McDonald yesterday, "thousands upon thousands of telegrams applauding the programs or requesting special numbers. There are some who can afford the cost of the telegrams often; some who can afford them occasionally, and some who cannot afford them at all, although they would like to express their appreciation of the entertainment they receive.

Vast Volume of Business.

"Of course, we have not the figures showing how great this volume of telegrams is, but we will take a low, safe estimate of 100,000 sent nightly at regular rates. We believe that with a low, uniform special rate this volume would be increased five or ten times, or even more, from this one class of listeners, whom we will call the "regulars." Under a low rate the "occasionals" would increase as great as the "regulars," if not greater. Then we come to those who would like to send telegrams but feel they cannot afford it. How great the volume from this class would be no one can estimate. But it is safe to say it would be stupendous.

Sees Further Increase.

"With a plan covering a low, uniform rate put into operation the vast increase in business would show a greatly increased net profit, even at low, special cut rate.

"To keep down the cost of operating expenses in the greatly increased volume of business, a code could be easily compiled which would allow the average listener to say all that he desired in about four words for the body of the message."

Prices in England Far Ahead of Those Here

Radio apparatus is very cheap in the United States as compared to prices in Europe. Papers received in Lansing, Mich., from England show that the prices on sets in that country are two or three times as great as those here. In one instance a crystal set was advertised with a range of fifteen to twenty miles for 3 pounds and 8 shillings or an approximate sum of $15.49 which is several times the price of those in this country.

U. S. SEEKS DATA ON PERFORMANCE OF RECTIFIERS

Washington, D. C., March 21.—[Special.]—The demand for rectifiers of the type used for charging storage batteries has increased greatly during the recent years, owing to the large number of small storage batteries employed in connection with radio sets, and because of the growing practice of charging larger batteries at low rates, this practice being known as "trickle charging."

Seek Data on Types.

The purpose of an investigation just made of this subject by the United States bureau of standards was to obtain data on the performance of the most common types of rectifiers on the market, and to explain the principles underlying their operation.

Because of the adaptability of the electrolytic rectifier to the study of the underlying principles of rectification and also because this type possesses many possibilities for usefulness, a considerable portion of the work was carried out on this type, but magnetic and ionized-gas-bulb rectifiers were also studied.

Results Are Available.

The effects of various factors upon the wave form and degree of rectification were investigated by means of the oscillograph.

The results of these studies are now available in technological paper No. 265, copies of which may be obtained from the superintendent of documents at Washington, D. C., for 20 cents each.

GARY ENROLLS FOR W-G-N RADIO EDUCATION PLAN

School Officials Generally Indorse Proposal.

BY FRANK HINMAN.

Gary, Ind., with twelve school centers and approximately 12,000 students, was the first school system to enroll in the "radio educational course" which W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel, proposes to inaugurate if the school executives and teachers of the middle west want it. In a letter to the Radio Editor William Wirt, superintendent of the Gary public schools, praised the proposed plan, stating that when the broadcasting is undertaken the "radio class" will become a regular feature of the school work in his district.

The plan is also meeting with the approval of school officials in Chicago, and Assistant Superintendent of Schools William J. Bogan has called upon the principals of the public high schools to advise him as to how they can use the radio service.

Inauguration Was Beneficial.

"There is not a doubt in the world that instruction by radio will be of inestimable value to school children," Mr. Bogan said, "and we are now contemplating the installation of amplifiers in the auditoriums of new high schools to facilitate the hearing of radio programs. Just now, of course, the thing which will require some thought is the working out of a program of radio instruction which will be beneficial to all.

"No one can doubt that the broadcasting of President Coolidge's inaugural exercises were beneficial to the school children, and I am sure that if the pupils of the public schools had been able to listen in on the United States senate's deliberations on the confirmation of Charles B. Warren as attorney general of the United States, it would have been helpful."

Instruction, not Entertainment.

At this point it might not be amiss to clear up a point which apparently has caused a slight misunderstanding on the part of teachers and principals. It is not the idea of THE TRIBUNE to entertain school children with radio programs. We want teachers and principals to feel that if they sacrifice a class period so that the pupils can listen in to radio instruction, they will receive something at least as helpful as their regular class work.

To this end officials of W-G-N are still seeking suggestions as to how they can best conduct the proposed "radio school." Last week a large number of letters were received on the subject from educators in the middle west, and the replies were nearly as varied as they were numerous. W-G-N wants to help the children within a radius of 200 miles of Chicago through the broadcasting of daylight radio instruction direct to the schools. It is up to the principals and teachers to decide what is wanted, however. Please address all letters to the Radio Editor, Chicago Tribune, Chicago.

RADIO SECTION OF ELECTRICAL CLUB TO MEET

The next regular meeting of the radio section of the Electric club of Chicago will be held in the club rooms, 30 North Dearborn street, Tuesday evening at 7 o'clock.

John H. Miller will continue his talks on the fundamentals of radio, his subject being "Resonance," while A. H. Koppraisch will exhibit, describe and demonstrate a new superheterodyne set, using quarts insulation throughout.

Prof. E. B. Payne, head of the department of electrical engineering of the University of Illinois, will give an illustrated lecture on the history and development of the art of communication. He goes back into the dark ages and traces the development of the methods used in communication up to the radio age.

PADEREWSKI IN RADIO CONCERT THRILLS LONDON

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

LONDON, March 21.—The Paderewski radio concert this week was regarded as the greatest event in the wireless world. He played a generous program last Sunday night, including selections from Beethoven, Schubert, Chopin, and Liszt. The climax came with the first playing of a nocturne composed by himself. It is estimated that nearly 15,000,000 in the British Isles listened in. The radio appearances of Paderewski and Tetrazzini are expected to open a new era of British broadcasting, improving the standards of the programs. The British Broadcasting company is severely criticized by certain radio circles for the poor quality of its programs. The two great artists were secured by private enterprise.

Mme. Paderewski heard the concert in her sick bed at the Claridge hotel. She said she was "tremendously thrilled."

Roxy's Hello Everybody by SAMUEL L. ROTHAFEL

HERE I am. This is my first appearance in Chicago as a regular columnist. Many of you asked me to talk to you on the air more than once a week. Because I cannot do this, I am going to talk to you in this column of THE TRIBUNE each week and I will be with you on the radio Sunday nights as usual.

The other day I met Helen Varick Boswell, president of the Women's Forum. Miss Boswell, who is one of the pioneers in women's work, said: "It used to be when the governor of North Carolina met the governor of South Carolina he said, 'It's been a long time between drinks.' Now the governor of Texas says to the governor of Wyoming when they meet, 'What did you wear at your inauguration?'"

Betsy Ayres, the Texas nightingale, claims to have the first radio proposal. A he-man from Texas, where men are men, and women are governors, has sent her a proposal by mail. If Betsy promises to be his, he says he will come east for her in his flivver and drive her back. Coming from Texas, Betsy does not think this is such a good steer.

My gifts and offerings from radio fans have been long and varied. But the most original up to date is the offer from a doctor in Elizabeth, N. J., to remove my appendix. He assures me it is still being done in the best of families.

A visitor has just asked me to have Betsy or one of the other members of the gang sing "Dear Old Pal." I have promised it shall be done some Sunday soon. Everybody who comes in here seems to have a request for a favorite song. What is your favorite? Write and let me know.

All the visitors to the studio seem to think it so strange to listen to fine concert numbers without hearing applause. Sometimes a visitor forgets "mike" and starts clapping.

In honor of President Coolidge, who attended our college at Washington recently the gang sang the college song of his alma mater, Amherst. The next morning at the White House the President told me he thought this was the greatest college song in the world. He said that "Lord Jeffrey Amherst" had a swing to it that no other college song had.

The marriage rate must surely be going up. Every Sunday evening we receive a telephone call requesting us to have the orchestra play Mendelssohn's "Wedding March." The persons calling are either getting married or having a wooden or a silver or a golden wedding anniversary.

Betsy Ayres boasts a radio proposal, but Evelyn Herbert has the distinction of having two children named after her. Last year twins were named after her and Douglas Stanbury. Evelyn's latest namesake is a baby born in Banning, D. C., weighing nine and one-half pounds at birth, and, according to last report, doing fine.

The following little sentiment which I read over the air recently has been the cause of a great many requests for copies:

A little more kindness,
A little less creed,
A little more giving,
A little less greed.

A little more smile,
A little less frown,
A little less kicking
A man when he's down.

A little more "we,"
A little less "I,"
A little more laugh,
A little less cry.

A little more flowers
On the pathway of life,
And fewer on graves
At the end of the strife.

"Why don't you boost California once in a while?" complains Margaret McKee, the world's most beautiful whistler. "You're always saying something about the south!"

Of course, you'd guess that Mickey is a Californiac. She went to a conservatory of whistling out west, but it was from the birds themselves that she learned to whistle those lovely notes. In fact, so well does Mickey imitate the woodland songsters that she is causing much disturbance among the feline listeners-in.

Channing Pollock, the playwright, bought a radio set recently and Mrs. Pollock has become a confirmed fan. Her charming daughter, Helen, is very much relieved that mother has taken up the radio. "There isn't a play on Broadway that a girl can take her mother to any more," sighs Helen.

This last was like old home week in the studio. Buster Keaton, the frozen faced comedian; his pretty wife, Natalie Talmadge, and his father, Joseph Keaton, dropped in. Which started some of the old timers reminiscing. Maurice E. McLaughlin recalled the days when the Three Keatons were an acrobatic act in vaudeville and Joe Keaton used to juggle little Buster around the stage.

Another reunion took place between Rose La Hart and our Daddy Jim Coomba. Jim was singing at the Hippodrome when Rose was prima donna there. Daddy Jim is the oldest member of the gang, and has had an interesting career. He is a graduate of Brown university, '97. He played the cornet in the college band, but he has since gotten over it.

After the performance we gave in Washington, several of the audience crowded around the stage. One woman forced her way to the front and grasped both my hands. "Roxy," she exclaimed, "it was wonderful! Why, it was so real we could almost imagine ourselves at home with the ear phones on!"

Caroline Andrews tells me that a neighbor of her's who is an ardent radio fan, is so proficient at turning knobs that she thinks he must have got his early training eating in the Automat!

The offerings from radio fans are a widely assorted lot. Flowers, apples, oranges, marmalade, homebaked cakes, candy, hot water bottles, bedspreads, lace curtains, souvenir postcards — especially of Niagara Falls—sleeve garters, and cough medicine. And now a dear old couple in Foxboro, Mass., offers the Gang the use of a house in the country for the summer.

This little strip of light
'Twixt night and night Today!
And let no shadow of Tomorrow,
Nor sorrow
From the dead Yesterday
Gainsay
My happiness Today!
And if Tomorrow shall be sad,
Or never comes at all, I've had
At least—Today!

ANONYMOUS.

A woman telephoned me yesterday. "Roxy," she said excitedly, "I've got a new radio. Please tell me what numbers to turn so I can get you!"

Betsy Ayres is with us again, having returned from a little vacation in Hagerstown, Md. Betsy had a wonderful time with some old friends who knew her when she lived in Dallas. She found it hard work keeping up with all the parties given in her honor. It seems that Betsy promised somebody to sing, "I Love You," over the air when she got back. Of course I don't know who it was she made the promise to, but she sang, "I Love You," and I never heard it sung with more feeling.

A MAN'S PRAYER.

Let me live, O Mighty Master,
Such a life as mine should know,
Testing triumph and disaster,
Joy—and not too much of woe;
Let me run the gamut over,
Let me fight and love and laugh,
And when I'm beneath the clover
Let this be my epitaph:
"Here lies one who took his chances
In the busy world of men,
Battled luck and circumstances,
Fought and fell and fought again;
Won sometimes—but did no crowing,
Lost sometimes—but did not wail,
Took his beating—but kept going,
Never let his courage fail.
He was fallible and human,
Therefore loved and understood
Both his fellow men and woman,
Whether good or—not so good;
Kept his spirit undiminished,
Never laid down on a friend,
Played the game till it was finished,
Lived a sportsman to the end!"

BROADCASTERS GET NEW CLASS OF U. S. LICENSE

Must Pass Mild Technical Examination.

Washington, D. C., March 21.—[Special.]—Announcement of a new class of license, to be known as a broadcasting station operator's license, was made today by the department of commerce.

"The present commercial second class operator's license form will be used, upon which the inscription 'Valid only for the operation of a broadcasting station' shall be placed in the space reserved for grading at the upper left corner of this license form, and also in the space provided in the lower part of the license," says the announcement as made by D. B. Carson, commissioner of navigation.

"The code test for this examination in transmitting and receiving the continental Morse code will be at the rate of twelve words per minute, counting five characters to the word. The theoretical examination will consist of a number of questions on transmitting apparatus such as is used at broadcasting stations, receiving apparatus, storage batteries, motors and generators, and the radio communication laws. The passing mark for this class of license shall be 75 per cent."

Credit for experience is to be rated as follows, and suitable evidence of experience must be submitted:

Three months' service at any class of commercial stations, including broadcasting stations, full credit of 20 per cent.

Holders of commercial licenses having had no commercial experience, instructors of recognized radio schools, and of radio courses at colleges, operators having only experience at federal government stations not open to general public service, 15 per cent.

Graduates of radio schools, those having had special training at colleges and holders of amateur first grade licenses, 10 per cent.

Holders of amateur second grade licenses, and correspondence school graduates, 5 per cent.

Questions to be used in this examination will be furnished to the supervisors of radio in the near future.

Operators holding commercial extra first class, first class, or second class licenses will be permitted to operate broadcasting stations as at present.

Radio Monopoly Hearing Is Deferred Till May 18

The federal trade commission has postponed the hearing of the alleged radio monopoly and it is now scheduled to be held in New York on Monday, May 18. The respondents are the United Fruit company, the American Telephone and Telegraph company, the Western Electric company, the Radio Corporation of America, the General Electric company, the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company, the International Radio Telegraph company, and the Wireless Specialty Apparatus company.

RADIO FAN FINDS FIRE.

A Washington fan, thanks to an interesting program which kept him up until 2 o'clock in the morning, smelled smoke and discovered a smouldering fire in the cellar, which otherwise might have caused serious damage.

'Fed Up' Air Artists Balk at Sight of White House Dinner

Not long ago Mrs. Coolidge entertained at tea a company of well known radio stars at the White House, whom she had frequently listened to from a distant station. It seems, however, the radio people had been the recipients of a large number of meals and were in the frame of mind of not caring to see more food for some time to come.

Following the tea the company was shown through the executive mansion where dinner had been set for the President and his immediate family in the state dining room. In fact, the fruit, the bread, and a few other things were actually on the table.

As the leader of the company glanced into the room he felt a tug at his arm and looked around to see that it was Kasage, an Hungarian violinist of the orchestra, who looked appealingly at the air impresario and said in a stage whisper, "Herr Director, my God, do we have to eat again?"

RADIO HELPS TO KEEP DAKOTA BOYS ON FARMS

Financing the purchase of radio receiving sets to keep young men on the farms has become a specialty of a North Dakota banker, reports J. H. Tregoe, executive manager of the National Association of Credit Men, who has just returned from a trip through the middle west.

One enterprising banker when confronted with the problem of keeping the young men in rural districts content to remain at home and work the farms, devised the unique plan of financing the purchase of radio sets. The idea was met with enthusiasm and has been successful.

Claims Refrigeration by Radio Possible

An invention by which refrigeration can be broadcast by radio is claimed by a Scandinavian. He says that if his special receiving sets are installed in iceboxes they will cool the boxes without any other aid at a cost of less than 2 shillings a year. His plans include a municipal transmitting station to broadcast the "radio ice." He claims all that is necessary to keep the food cool in the hottest weather is to have the receiver tuned in with central station.

NEW YORK WILL TRY TO BREAK SHOW RECORDS

Radio Scientists to Demonstrate Wonders.

New York, March 21.—[Special.]—With the announcement that 80 per cent of the space taken at last year's national radio exposition already has been engaged by exhibitors for the fourth annual national raido exposition, which is to open in New York during the week of Sept. 6-12, 1925, a preliminary list of exhibitors indicates every leading factor in the radio industry will be represented this year.

The exposition will be inaugurated this year by a demonstration of teledynamics in which leading radio scientists from this country and abroad will participate.

Three Miles of Exhibits.

It is estimated that over three miles of exhibits, covering the first three floors of Grand Central palace, will face the radio public on the opening night.

A radio pageant, which will illustrate the whole range and development of the radio art, from the day that the first signal was flashed and received over a distance of a few miles, down to the modern radio home, showing the manifold services that radio has brought to every member of the family, will be one of the new features of the exposition, it is announced by the management.

The new inventions section will be featured by a demonstration of power transmission by radio, given on laboratory scale, in which trains, steamships, farm machinery, and motor cars will be moved and directed by radio. New and improved methods of photographic transmission by radio will also be shown.

Prizes for Amateurs.

Thousands of dollars will be offered as prizes by the exposition management and radio manufacturers for a series of amateur set building and other contests, in which radio amateurs throughout the country are expected to participate. Amateurs will be given a chance to determine the all American radio set, composed of the best standard parts, a giant model of which is to be built and placed on exhibition at the fourth annual national radio exposition.

The entertainment program from Grand Central palace, which will include leading radio, stage, and concert stars, will be broadcast by the principal stations in New York.

WGY IS HEARD IN FAR REACHES OF NORTHLAND

Schenectady, N. Y., March 21.—[Special.]—The Sunday evening symphony program played in the Waldorf-Astoria hotel and broadcast by WGY was heard Dec. 28, 1924, in Pilot Station, Alaska, by Mr. and Mrs. W. R. E. Moore, the only white people in the village and forty miles away from any white residents, according to a letter just received. The numbers heard in that little settlement, on the Lower Yukon, 150 miles from Bering sea and within two jumps of Siberia, were "To a Wild Rose" and "To a Water Lily." The letter concludes with thanks for "your help in breaking the monotony of our life in the far away northland." Mr. Moore represents the Alaska division of the bureau of education of the United States department of the interior. This division has charge of the native school and the medical and reindeer service.

RAPID GROWTH OF RADIO FOUND IN NORTHWEST

St. Paul, Minn., March 21.—[Special.]—It is variously estimated that there are between 40,000 and 100,000 receiving sets in the territory tributary to St. Paul and Minneapolis. The farmers throughout this section have taken hold of it with unusual vigor.

Through a questionnaire sent out by the department of agriculture to county agents in the northwest it has been found that from Jan. 1, 1924, to Jan. 1, 1925, the number of sets in use by farmers in that section has increased three and one-half times.

When it is recalled that 82 per cent of the population of the northwestern stations is composed of those in rural communities the increase has considerable significance.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

BUDAPEST, March 21.—The municipal government of Budapest is using radio to direct official affairs. Schools, hospitals, fire houses, and police stations are included in the radio network.

AIR WILL CARRY U. OF C. PLANS TO 25,000 ALUMNI

Alumni of the University of Chicago in every state in the Union will listen in over the radio to speeches on the night of March 24, the opening day of the university's development program. Gatherings in every city where the 25,000 alumni live will hear Dr. Ernest De Witt Burton, president of the university, or other speakers, explain the aims and scope of the university and its plans for the future involving the $17,500,000 fund to be raised this year.

9,000 Are Invited.

"University of Chicago Radio Night" will embrace the most extensive broadcasting program yet projected by an educational institution. It will extend from New York to California and from the shores of the great lakes into the south. Programs are being planned by alumni in more than 100 cities in conjunction with the broadcasting. In Chicago, where Dr. Burton will speak from station WMAQ, there will be a dinner of University of Chicago alumni, at the Furniture Mart. Over 9,000 alumni living in Chicago or its environs have been invited. In addition to the radio speech, Dr. Burton will appear at the dinner, as will Coach Alonzo Stagg and others.

Nation to Hear Address.

At broadcasting stations in other cities speakers will read the address delivered by Dr. Burton. These will include Kansas City, Mo.; Cleveland, Detroit, Denver, Portland, Ore.; Salt Lake City, Los Angeles, Spokane, Pittsburgh, and Washington, D. C.

The alumni expect to raise on March 24 the greater part of the $2,000,000 set as their quota in the $17,500,000 objective.

THE NEW MORRISON HOTEL

Largest—and Least Expensive—in the World

THE practice of renting rooms for $3 to $5 that would cost $5 to $8 in other leading hotels has been a tradition at the Morrison for years. Now, however, a "sky-lease" will make these economies effective on a far larger scale; there will be 850 more rooms in the new Clark St. addition—400 in the tower—practically without ground rent. At this great elevation guests will enjoy the same pure atmosphere as at outlying hotels—obtainable by a short ride in an elevator, instead of a long one in a taxi.

The hotel's present capacity (1,054 outside rooms, each with bath) will eventually be 3,400 rooms—the largest hotel on earth.

The Morrison is the home of the Terrace Garden, Chicago's famous dance-and-dine rendezvous. The following artists will appear throughout the week beginning Monday, March 23:

FRED TRAVERS AND HIS ORCHESTRA
Interpreting America's Finest Dance Music
COSTER & RICH
Offering Artistic Ballroom Dances
MARIE ROSSI
Musical Comedy Soprano
JENNY & HYLIN
Sensational Roller Skaters

NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY

MRS. HOWARD LINN.

MRS. FREDERICK H. RAWSON.
[Moffett Photo.]

Most of Chicago's prominent and active women, be they socially or industrially inclined, are interesting themselves in the preparation of the Woman's World fair, to be held from April 18 to 25 at the American Exposition palace. Three society women who are identified with the actual work of the organization are Mrs. Howard Linn, Mrs. Silas H. Strawn, and Mrs. Frederick H. Rawson.

Mrs. Linn is vice chairman of the board of directors of the project, whose main object is "to provide a vocational clearing house for women, where women who have arrived can show their wares and talk of the opportunities of their vocations to the young girls interested in finding occupations." Nearly one hundred of the vocations in which women have succeeded will be represented at the fair.

Mrs. Strawn is a member of the board of directors and Mrs. Rawson is treasurer.

Fractious Friend Wants Something New in Smart Sets

By Mme. X.

SAID a fractious, captious, irritable, but fond friend of mine to me this morning as I sat down to paste my usual Sunday poster on my col., "For heaven's sake, do let me write your lead today! I am sick unto death, and I am sure lots of your readers are likewise, of reading of the same people week after week. If you'll hand over to me your 'great responsibility' for half an hour, I promise not to mention a McCormick, a Palmer, an Armour, a Field, a Blair, a Ryerson, a Coleman, a Fairbank, a Meeker, a Borden, a Waller, a Farwell, or any of those other hapless mortals whom you delight to dangle each Sunday before a surfeited world.

"I'll engage to intrigue your readers with an entirely new outfit of people deserving, to my thinking, the doubtful pleasure of the publicity your column affords. I could even, were I given half a chance, recast the complexion of so-called 'high society' and invent an entirely new set of social leaders. Your bridge playing, golfing, hunting, dancing men and women would be replaced by earnest, thoughtful, industrious, studious, temperate folk who feel that life is altogether too short for anything but the hardest kind of work for the benefit of mankind at large."

Fortunately lack of breath stopped this harangue, so that I was able to say, "It sounds like a ghastly business, life as you would shape it. The people whose doings I chronicle are all of these things which you describe as essential to right living, but in moderation and combined with the other attributes which go to make a cheerful nation and to keep the industrial part of the whole scheme going. Your righteous highbrows wouldn't give either retail or wholesale business enough to do. Those who live by restaurants, jazz bands, manufacture of automobiles, or growing ostrich feathers would all have to starve if your people ruled the roost. But I'm willing to give you a stickful of type with which to fool."

Here's the result. Shall we put it this wise:

Thus spake Zarathustra:

"In the first place, if all those people whom you exploit in your lucubrations were to leave Chicago forever, as so many of them say they would like to do, it would not make a dent on the city's real life. Art, music, literature, science would go on as if these Chicagoites had never been born. Even the great industries which make Chicago known the world over would continue to flourish. Although they bear the names of some of these well known families, you must remember it was the ancestors of this generation that founded these big organizations, not the sons and grandsons who today live on the results of the genius of the really remarkable men who made Chicago possible.

"What you call the smart set is only smart because it 'puts it over' on the rest of its fellow beings. The women who compose society, or say that they do, all talk too much and too loud. Their culture is purely superficial. None of them knows anything thoroughly. All spend an enormous time on outward appearances, on dress, on house adornment, on pleasures of an utterly unprofitable nature, and too little time and thought on cherishing their husbands and bringing up their children.

"Most of the men are even more useless as civic assets. They do nothing but make money for their wives to spend. They do not pretend to any kind of intellectual or artistic cultivation. They take absolutely no responsibility in the rearing of their offspring. They have no sense of responsibility toward that holiest duty of the citizens of a democracy, as evidenced by their attitude toward the eighteenth amendment. Even the highest highbrows delight to evade, flout, and outwit this far famed amendment. They inveigh against political corruption, but who of the bitterest critics gives either time or money to the point of personal inconvenience or self-sacrifice to bring about a better order of things? And as for the young of the day——"

Time to Retreat.

Here the misanthrope threw up a pair of long, white, querulous hands which gave the scribe an opportunity to interrupt and inquire about that entirely new set of names which had been promised to the readers of this pillar of polite information, names which would be as interesting and profitable as those which are usually strewed liberally over our page.

"Have you ever watched a cat who has successfully climbed a tall and somewhat slippery tree trunk trying to crawl down again? Some such painful and undignified attempt at retirement was tried by my fractious, captious, irritable, but fond friend, with the ultimate admission that perhaps those tribal names referred to after all is said and done did sum up the representative families whose dynasties were inextricably bound up in the social as well as industrial life of Chicago. New names creep into the list every day.

Also, once well known names drop off from time to time. For instance, a generation or two ago there was no better known family than the Rumseys. Two brothers, Julian and George Rumsey, early in the history of the city, settled in Huron street. Julian Rumsey built a fine mansion at the corner of Cass street. George built as imposing a one at the corner of Rush street. Mr. and Mrs. John A. Carpenter and Miss Ginny Carpenter live there now.

Part of the Past.

Mr. and Mrs. Julian Rumsey had a large family of sons and daughters. Mr. and Mrs. George Rumsey had only one daughter. Of the former family of three sons and eight daughters only one son, George Rumsey (who makes his home in Pasadena) and five daughters are left. The family home at the northeast corner of Cass and Huron streets has for half a century been a landmark in that neighborhood. It is a many roomed, spacious, dignified, gray mansion with the broad verandas and surrounding lawns customary in the days when families often spent summers as well as winters in Chicago, and sat out on front steps and on porches.

It used to be said in the seventies and eighties of the last century that it was a proof that one was in Chicago society if he or she attended St. James' church (the weatherbeaten, picturesque old sanctuary at the other corner of Cass and Huron streets), and sat on the Rumsey's front steps on warm evenings. People, even our "very best," used to congregate on their front doors when the evenings were balmy and have informal receptions. But that simple hearted era is long since buried in the past; the Rumseys—what was left of the family—have moved away and their old gray house, owned now by Cyrus H. McCormick, stands empty and hushed.

This fruitless digression is all the fault of my fractious, captious, irritable, but fond friend's animadversions on the monotony of my topics and the lack of variety in my handling of them. Both of which were justified. So this is but a farewell wave of the hand sent as this worn and wasted column departs for the gleaming coral sands, the crashing palm trees, and the gaudy hibiscus of the eastern seacoast of Florida. Perhaps we'll get a new line of ideas and names down there, and if we do, any readers we may have left will profit by the improvement.

Ball and Bridge.

Meanwhile, you will all have the opportunity of going to the army and navy ball next Saturday at the Congress hotel and taking part in what will be a lively and colorful affair. Also a goodly section of the women belonging to the world that amuses itself will be found on Monday afternoon, March 30, at Mrs. Charles Corsant's, 357 Fullerton parkway, playing bridge for sweet charity. Mrs. Corsant has given her house to Mrs. Claude Hopkins, Mrs. William A. Yager, Mrs. E. R. Fifield, and Mrs. W. F. Cleff for that day and they are organizing a big bridge tournament with prizes and refreshments and all that goes with such an occasion. They have sold 124 tables. Mrs. Corsant has do-

Gowns

FORMAL AND INFORMAL

The evening mode—a fairy-line of fabric, sophisticated, delicately lovely—clasps hands with the more informal expression of the creative artist. Informal frocks show a freedom of movement, a whimsical tendency to the original, the unique, never before permitted. These important tendencies are well exemplified in our collection.

Ensembles

FROCK AND COAT MATCH

The truly successful ensemble suit makes sure that coat and frock are individually smart, yet harmonious as a whole. Color and fabric, line and silhouette choose many ways to chic, but always the newest and smartest fashionable details appear on both frock and coat.

Sports

Nonchalantly conscious of an exalted position in the world of fashion is the impeccably tailored, youthfully smart sports costume. Appropriate on occasions innumerable, the sportswear of our display is marked by an easy grace and buoyancy.

Our Formal Opening Tomorrow

STEVENS PRESENT THE SMARTEST MODE OF THE HOUR

FOR our formal presentation of Spring Fashions, which begins tomorrow, each specialized department is ready with the newest and best—embracing every important mode of the moment. Wraps, Suits, Dresses, Millinery, and every accessory to the costume will be included in this interesting and exclusive display.

Coats

VARIED·SMART·UNUSUAL

Slim shoulders and straight lines show many variations—fullness at front or sides, jabot collars, wide sleeves—the attention is arrested by many striking details. Materials are always flexible, soft and rich, beautiful woolens or shining silks sharing honors. The use of fur bandings and borders is another distinctive detail.

COATS—WOMEN, FOURTH FLOOR, MISSES, THIRD FLOOR

Hats

FOR EVERY COSTUME

Severe little felt hats, turned and twisted to suit the fancy of the wearer, are everywhere. Crisply decorative straws, softly flattering silks, and effective combinations of silk and straw, or felt and straw are daily arriving. The very spirit of Spring lies in a new hat from our collection.

MILLINERY—FIFTH FLOOR

Blouses

The blouse ensemble is a complete costume in itself—original in design, unusual in treatment of necklines, sleeves and decorative detail. Color is important, and fabric—in this smart mode. Silk tunics of different lengths are also shown in delightful array.

Charming and desirable prizes have been given to be played for by the Bridgites. There will be absolutely no expenses and a net gain of every cent taken in. The charity to be benefited is the Red, White and Blue club, whose annual budget is this year being supplied by the members of the executive committee, each one raising a certain quota, and some raising much more than their allotted quota.

To Talk on Excavations.

Next Sunday evening the Casino members are to have the opportunity of hearing a notable man, Dr. David M. Robinson of Johns Hopkins university, Baltimore, Md., give an illustrated talk on an interesting subject, "The Excavations at Pisidian, a City in Antioch." Dr. Robinson is an archæological authority, and the theme of his lecture is one of the less known but valuable additions to knowledge.

The world today is becoming more and more interested in the ancient civilizations being brought to light by archæologists. Old King Tut's tomb and its day by day exhumation were a front page story a year ago. Romance and superstition and envy and malice were inextricably interwoven with the gradual resurrection of that amazing monument. Even today the much talked of case of the Dennistouns in London is mixed up via Lady Carnarvon with the ancient Egyptian king. So archæology and excavations are becoming every day of more popular interest.

Dr. Robinson is a cousin of Frederick T. Haskell. Mr. and Mrs. Haskell are the hosts of Dr. Robinson during his stay in Chicago and are giving a dinner to forty or fifty friends at the Casino preceding the lecture.

Never did an enthusiastic audience enjoy a more delightful program than happened at the Casino last Sunday evening when the Edward H. Bennetts gave a musical to a hundred or so of their friends and Alfred Cortot, the famous French pianist, provided the music. By many he is considered the greatest living pianist, the word greatest being one of the easiest to apply and the hardest to dislodge in the English language. Never was it, however, used with more justice than when describing M. Cortot. Even the most dispassionate and unmusical of his audience that night became fired by the splendor of his playing. The strains of the Concerto da Camera of Vivaldi and of Chopin's Polonaise surged about the Casino's green ballroom, now softening to softest sounds dripping off the player's fingers, now thundering into thrilling strains that sounded as if one were in a roomful of pianos all being played at once by Cortot, Braflowsky, Paderewski, Rachmaninoff, and the rest.

It was a wonderful exhibition of skill and art and understanding of music and what the composers wanted to reveal in their writings. I never saw such an extraordinary muscle development on any human hand as that on Cortot's. The muscle on the outer edge of each hand seems a second hand or a sinuous sac that inflates and deflates as the music grows loud or soft. It is evidently the source of his tremendous power and also controls the deftest, softest touch of his fingers. He is a remarkable man and one with a strong and interesting personality.

Coming Our Way.

Among the interesting notabilities who are coming this way later in the spring is Mestrovics, the renowned Serbian sculptor. He was a shepherd in the Albanian mountains. While tending his flocks he used to carve rough little things out of the waste wood lying around him. A fellow countryman saw some of his work and gave him an opportunity to leave his sheep and the lonely mountains and to get a simple education and to study to develop his promising talent. In the course of time he rose to being a pupil of the greatest sculptor France ever produced, Rodin.

Of Mestrovics Rodin is reported to have said:

"There are only two sculptors today: Myself and Mestrovics."

If he said this, it shows how high he ranked the simple Serbian shepherd. The latter is coming here in May with an exhibit of his works, presumably at the Art institute.

Have you been down to see St. Thomas' church at Kimbark avenue and 51st street? There are several things there that have been attracting the attention of our intelligentsia. One is a set of bas reliefs, the Stations of the Cross, by the Chicago-Italian sculptor, Faggi, which are said to be the most effective things of the kind in Chicago. There are likewise some frescoes by William E. Schumacher, the Boston artist of whose exhibit at the Arts club this column made mention last week.

Mrs. Charles Lilley, a daughter of the late R. T. Crane, and sister of R. T. Crane Jr. and of Charles R. Crane, gave either one or both of these artistic triumphs to the church.

Matter of Titles.

Mysterious and not to be understood are the whims and fancies of theater audiences. That delightful actor, Cyril Maude, brought to Chicago a play which had had an enormous success in New York, Cleveland, and other cities, intending to make a long stay here, and was forced to shorten his engagement here, leaving us last Sunday to return to Cleveland. People here did not take to "Aren't We All."

I wonder if the name had anything to do with the failure of the piece to catch on here. Years ago George Arliss brought a play to Chicago called "The Prime Minister." He is a clever and popular actor. The play was a capital one. Yet the late Herman Kohlsaat saw Mr. Arliss late in the first week of his engagement here walking up and down alone in the main sitting room of the Chicago club, his monocle in one eye, with every indication of trouble and depression. Although he did not know him, Mr. Kohlsaat, with that genuinely kindly impulse which governed his life, went in and spoke to him, inquiring if he was perplexed about something. Mr. Arliss, recognizing a friend in the gentle mannered stranger, thereupon told him that he had brought what he knew was a good play and a first class company to Chicago expecting a success and a long run. He had put it on for only five days and it had proved a failure. Mr. Kohlsaat asked him what was the name of the piece, and when Mr. Arliss said it was "The Prime Minister," inquired what prime minister was it.

"Disraeli," replied Mr. Arliss.

"Then why not call it 'Disraeli'? Every one knows who Disraeli was, but no one cares particularly about prime ministers here." He continued urging the change of name, and said he would see that the dramatic critic of the Inter Ocean, which he was then running, should give it a good notice and he would use his influence to get other dramatic critics to take notice of it.

The suggestion was accepted, and Arliss' "Disraeli" became one of the greatest successes ever known on a Chicago stage and from here went to similar popularity in every other city in which it was presented. Had Mr. Kohlsaat not taken the trouble to offer help to an unknown man, Mr. Arliss would have taken the play off the next day, disbanded his company, and we would never have had one of the genuine pleasures of playgoing.

County Problems Subject of Club Conference Here

By Kate Webber.

NEARING the close of one of its most active seasons, the League of Cook County Women's Clubs has planned a service to the clubs of the county by holding a two day conference next Friday and Saturday at the City club, 315 Plymouth court. The Chicago Woman's club and the Woman's City club will coöperate in the project.

Friday morning's subject will be on the government of Cook county, with Mrs. Harry J. Ilett presiding. The speakers will include Miss Harriet E. Vittum, J. L. Jacobs, Charles Ringer, and George C. Sikes. Warden Westbrook, Michael Zimmer, Mrs. A. L. Smith, and Frank Venacek will give addresses at the afternoon session, to be devoted to "County Institutions."

The subject on Saturday morning will be "Social Service and the Cook County Courts." Mrs. C. J. Ford, Mrs. Arthur Stephen, Mrs. John Milloy, and Roy Dewey will speak. Conservation will be the topic of discussion on Saturday afternoon, the various angles to be presented by Mrs. Frederick W. Blocki, Orpheus M. Schantz, Ransom R. Kennicott, and Bob Becker.

The luncheon meetings will be important parts of the sessions, and will be held also at the City club. On Friday Mayor Dever will speak on transportation problems, and Anton Cermak, president of the county board, also will speak. On Saturday Miss Harriet Vittum will be toastmistress and the subject "My Ideals for Cook County" will be treated by Mrs. Alfred C. Tyler, president of the Chicago Woman's club; Mrs. B. F. Langworthy, president of the Woman's City club; Mrs. Adena Miller Rich, vice president, Illinois League of Women Voters; Mrs. Edward W. Bemis, county commissioner, and Mrs. Harry S. Vaile, vice president, League of Cook County Women's Clubs.

The Rogers Park Woman's Club chorus and the River Forest Woman's Club chorus will furnish the music.

Meetings will begin at 10 o'clock, luncheon at 12:30, and the afternoon sessions at 2:30. Mrs. John Milloy is in charge of luncheon reservations.

The League of Cook County Women's clubs provides an interesting link between the clubs and work done by the county. It is nonpartisan, and its aims are to do county work like housekeeping, only on a larger scale. The league brings to its members, through committees who are constantly in touch with them, all of the various problems facing the county and their solutions. Speakers best qualified to discuss these problems are present at meetings to answer questions, and thus mutual understanding is promoted. Any club which meets in Cook county may send delegates to take back reports, or, upon request, representatives of the league will address clubs on subjects connected with county affairs.

Officers of the league are Mrs. Harry J. Ilett, president; Mrs. Harry S. Vaile, Mrs. Frank N. Prime, and Mrs. R. E. P. Kline, vice presidents; Mrs. Arthur B. Crosby, recording secretary; Mrs. E. H. Gardiner, corresponding secretary; Mrs. John M. Stahl, treasurer.

MISS GENEVIEVE TEUTON.

Miss Genevieve Teuton will have a stellar rôle in the presentation of Philip Barry's prize play, "You and I," to be given on Wednesday evening at the Winnetka community house. The proceeds will be devoted to the fund for erecting a memorial studio at Peterborough, N. H., to Anna Baetz, friend and nurse to Edward MacDowell.

MRS. HARRY J. ILETT.
[Moffett Photo.]

As president of the League of Cook County Women's Clubs, Mrs. Ilett will preside at a two day conference to be held by that organization next Friday and Saturday at the City club. The program will touch on subjects concerning Cook county problems and how they concern women's clubs.

MRS. JULIUS T. BENEDICT.

Mrs. Julius T. Benedict will be a sponsor for an Easter card party to be given on April 25 at the Trianon by the Rosary College Benefactors' league.

MRS. HARRY J. KING.

Mrs. Harry J. King, national president of the Ladies' auxiliary of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, will be chairman of a concert to be given on Friday evening at Kimball hall by the Helen Burnett Wood auxiliary, No. 74.

CLUB ETHICS

By Maude Swalm Evans

"YOUR president looks beautiful," the guest told her hostess as they waited for the morning club session to begin. "I'm glad that she takes off her hat when she presides; it makes the meeting so informal and chummy."

"She always does," answered the hostess, "and so do the other officers who sit on the platform."

"I was hoping our first woman governor would establish such a precedent when she made her public appearance," voiced the guest; then she asked, "Who's the woman in the knee length, baby blue, velvet party gown?"

"A new member. She thinks she has to dress up for meetings. She'll soon learn better. I was nearly as foolish at first; now I feel best in a plain dark dress—the material and fit must be right, of course. I change my beads and scarf when I want a new outfit."

"To my notion, the grooming and accessories count as much as the clothes," commented the guest.

"There's the speaker of the morning coming in the door; notice how plainly she's dressed—but she carries herself like a million dollars." Then the hostess continued: "It's funny what an unexpected rôle clothes play in club life at times. I'm thinking of a woman who lost out for office because she wore evening dress at the evening functions of the club convention. The district included many small town and country women, and they wouldn't vote for her because they considered her clothes too extreme for a club officer."

"When I lived in Kansas City—before petticoats went out—a woman who showed cascades of frills and fluffs every time she took a step or sat down ran for office," continued the guest. "Some facetious member dubbed her 'frilly fluffs,' and, if you please, the nickname defeated her!"

His Lesson Learned.

Ole Olson had been working as an engine wiper, and his boss, a thrifty man, had been coaching him for promotion to fireman with such advice as: "Now, Ole, don't waste a drop of oil; that costs money. And don't waste the waste, either; that's getting expensive, too."

When Ole went up to be questioned on his eligibility for an engineman he was asked: "Suppose you are on your engine on a single track. You go around a curve, and see rushing toward you an express. What would you do?"

To which Ole replied: "I grab the oil can; I grab the waste and yump." S. C.

THE OUTLINE OF SCIENCE — Edited by Prof. J. Arthur Thomson

HOW PLANTS ARE REPRODUCED.

IN that great burst of activity in spring which heralds the approach of warmer weather, plants make an irresistible appeal to the eye. We welcome the clear colors of the snowdrop, celandine, and violet, and still more the bursting bud and shooting blade covering the earth with a hundred delicate shades of green. The tree unfolds its leaves, and root stock and bulb push up new shoots through the soil; such plants wake from their annual rest and embark again on an active period. Among them arise myriads of seedlings, new plants growing from germinating seeds; in these we see a complete new start, the production of new individuals, the result of reproductive processes completed months before, in the previous summer and autumn.

The Meaning of the Flower.

The seed—the kernel in the nut, the pip in the apple—comes from the fruit, and the fruit is the end of the flower. So it is the flower that is concerned with the reproduction of the higher plants.

What is a flower? If we examine a buttercup or a lesser celandine we find to the outside a number—five or more—of green scales, the sepals (together forming the calyx), which in the bud protect the delicate internal parts and afterwards steady the full blown flowers. Then comes the corolla of bright yellow petals. Inside the corolla are numerous stamens, each with a stalk or filament bearing a head, the anther, which contains the pollen. In the center are many small green grains, the carpels, in each of which is an ovule, or possible seed, containing an egg cell.

The shape, color, number, and arrangement of these parts vary greatly from flower to flower, and on the floral characters the classification of the flowering plants is largely based. In many flowers some of the parts are wanting or are greatly altered in appearance. In the tulip the calyx, like the corolla, is brightly colored, and the carpels, three in number, are united to form an ovary containing many ovules. This union of the carpels occurs, too, in the poppy, foxglove, and many others. In the grasses the calyx and corolla are absent or represented by minute scales; the work of protection is taken over by small green leaves which correspond to the three leaves which stand out below the flower of the anemone. In the hazel there are flowers with stamens only, gathered in golden drooping catkins, and flowers with an ovary only, grouped in buds, each crowned with a tuft of crimson filaments. In the willow the two kinds of flower grow on separate bushes.

The Secret of the Seed.

Before the ovule can develop into a seed, the egg cell it contains must be fertilized by the pollen. The pollen is received on the stigma, a moist receptive surface, sometimes borne on a long style, as in the sage, sometimes sessile on the ovary, as in the tulip. The pollen grain germinates and sends a fine tube down through the tissues of the style and ovary to the ovule. The process of fertilization is preceded by a long process of intricate preparation. In the ovule there has been formed a single large cell—the embryo sac—containing a number of cells, of which two are important; of these one is the egg cell or female reproductive body.

The germinating pollen grain contains three nuclei, one of which is the male reproductive body or sperm. When the pollen tube reaches the ovule it brings its contents to the embryo sac, and the sperm and the egg cell fuse together. In each of these there is packed away the inheritance of one parent; the result of the fusion, the fertilized egg cell, contains all the factors which, as development proceeds, will stamp the new organism with the features of its kind. The egg cell, stimulated by fertilization, commences to divide and grows into an embryo with a root, two leaves, and a shoot bud; these parts can be easily seen if we open up a soaked pea or bean. Development goes so far and then stops; the young tissues dry up as the seed ripens; it is cast loose in a state of rest. The higher plants, like the highest animals, liberate young ones; they are truly viviparous.

Why Flowers Are Bright.

In the flower, then, we recognize the ovary as the organ which contains the female reproductive bodies, in which the seed is matured; the stamens produce the fertilizing pollen; the calyx is protective. But we have assigned no function to the corolla, that part which, to our esthetic sense, is the essence of the flower, giving it distinctive form, giving it color, frequently giving it scent and sweetness. For the nectar glands are in some flowers associated with the petals, though in others with the stamens or ovary.

The form of the flower, in particular the character of the corolla, is intimately bound up with the pollination, with the means by which the pollen is transferred from the stamens to the stigma.

The flower is now understood as an arrangement by which pollination is secured. Though the four parts of the flower have different names and forms and uses, they have fundamentally a common nature, for they are all leaves, transformed in various ways and combining to fulfill the plant's chief end—that it should produce seeds which will develop into full grown plants and bear next year's flowers. All the differences in the form and position of the floral parts, which give individuality and character to different flowers, may be referred to the variety of means employed for securing the transference of pollen, which precedes fertilization. Perhaps nowhere else in nature can we see so clearly the fineness with which two organisms—flowers and their insect visitors—are fitted to each other.

pollinated by slugs; aquatic plants, the grasswrack of the sea as well as the pond weeds and others of fresh water, have water borne pollen. These are relatively small classes, but rivaling the insect pollinated plants in numbers are all those plants with inconspicuous flowers, trees, and grasses which are pollinated by the wind.

If the supply of food gives the insect a material inducement to frequent flowers, color and fragrance guide the visitor in choosing its particular source of supply. The golden standard of the broom, the glowing purple of the sage, heather, or thyme, the massed yellow flower heads of sunflower or marigold, the white expanses of hedge parsley and hawthorn are illuminated signs advertising the goods within. That insects can distinguish between different colors is still a little doubtful, for it is not easy to discriminate between color as such and the intensity of light reflection. To our senses color is the most prominent feature of the flower, but to the insect scent may be more important.

While color and scent are the guides, floral structure determines what insects can profitably visit a particular flower, and often decides the manner of the visit. Thus a flower like the hedge parsley has its nectar freely exposed so that flies and such short tongued insects can easily reach it; the nectar cup being shallow all may drink, and flies wander about over the inflorescences distributing pollen indiscriminately. But in a flower like the sage the nectar is concealed at the bottom of the deep corolla tube; it can be reached only by long tongued bees, and the bee must enter the flower in one particular way. The lower lip forms a landing stage to which it clings; it thrusts head and thorax into the corolla throat, pushing against the lower ends of the two pivoted, leverlike stamens, the upper ends of which swing down and dust the bee's back with pollen at a definite point.

Such refinements are especially characteristic of those highly specialized flowers which, like the sage, the orchids, the toad flax, and the broom, possess bilateral symmetry. This permits of the formation of a landing stage for heavy insects, and also leads to adaptations which keep the visitor to one path. These adaptations are well fitted to secure cross pollination, which is advantageous as regards both quantity and quality of seed. Insect pollinated flowers are not always bright. Thus the cuckoo pint attracts flies by a carrion stench, perhaps also by the lurid purple of the club of its flowering axis. The flies are trapped among the female flowers by a circle of hairs (modified stamens) inside the base of the hood. They are liberated by the withering of the hairs, when the staminate flowers are ripe; dusted with pollen, they then escape to other plants.

WOOD SORREL (Oxalis).—The leaves are seen in "sleep" position. They fold up at night and seem to withstand cold better. They also fold in bright sunlight, and thus avoid overheating. Apart from these conspicuous movements, the leaflets continually move slightly in an irregular fashion. They also close if shaken violently. [Photo: J. J. Ward.]

There are fruits, for example, the banana, which ripen without pollination. There are even cases, like the brambles and the hawkweeds, where the sexual process has been so completely dispensed with that seeds are formed without fertilization. But usually pollination is a necessary preliminary to fruit and seed production alike.

Wind Pollination.

In wind pollinated plants the adaptations run on different lines. The pollen is dustlike and is produced in enormous quantities, for the chances of a grain borne in the air reaching the stigma of a flower of its own species are remote. The grains are small and light; in the pine they are provided with two little bladders, the better to float in the air. Conspicuous corollas are useless; they would even be a hindrance, catching the flying pollen and preventing it reaching the stigma. The corolla has almost entirely disappeared, the wind flower is small and inconspicuous. The stamens hang far out of the flower on slender filaments, dangling in the air, shaken by every gust. The stigmas, too, protrude—the crimson filaments, of the hazel, the feathers of the plantain, the brushes which hang from the grass ear—winnowing the air for drifting pollen.

Cross pollination is secured by having male and female flowers on separate plants, as in the poplar, or by ripening the stamens and stigmas at different times, as in the grasses and plantains.

Cross Pollination: Its Meaning.

Cross pollination is of great importance to the progress of evolution. By it the various new characters which are always cropping up in different plants of a species are combined and recombined, so that an infinite number of races is produced for the sifting process of natural selection to work on. By cross-breeding, in nature as in the garden, the advance of evolution is speeded up. There are also cases where cross-pollination secures a stronger progeny; the maize is a notable example, and one thinks of Darwin's primroses. But it seems that this is due to a rearrangement of the hereditary complex, and not to any essential stimulation. There are certainly many plants which get on very well without cross pollination, and there are many others which are adapted to secure self-pollination if the cross fails.

The abundant well filled capsules which ripen among the leaves of the sweet violet in autumn are not the product of the spring flowers, so well adapted for insect visits, but somehow so seldom visited; they come from flowers, hidden among the leaves, little green buds which never open, the stigmas of which receive pollen from the stamens of the same flower.

Significance of the Seed.

The seed is generally considered the reproductive body of the flowering plant, but if we consider the process outlined above we see that the true reproductive bodies are the egg cell and the sperm cell. When the egg cell is fertilized by the sperm cell the initiation of a new individual is complete. All subsequent events are stages in the development of that individual; the seed is merely a phase at which development has been temporarily arrested.

This arrest, the formation of a seed, has two functions. It provides for a dormant period and it provides for distribution. Delicate leaves and shoots are not fitted to withstand extreme conditions, whether the rigors of the northern winter or the prolonged drought of more arid climates. The resistant leaves of the evergreens persist through the cold months, but broad leaved trees seed their leaves and present bare branches to the storms. herbaceous plants die down, persisting underground as root stock, rhizome, and bulb, buried deep from the cold. But the seed is the most striking resting phase in the plant's life history. Dried up, its vital activities are reduced to a minimum; its close textured coats protect it; it can resist temperatures far below any occurring in the coldest winter; it can withstand considerable heat; many seeds preserve their life for decades. The seed can carry the plant over the most unfavorable conditions of nature; for many plants it is the only resting and resistant stage.

As important is the function of distributing the individuals of the race. Fixed in the soil as soon as it germinates, the plant can travel only at this specialized stage of its career. So the ripe seed is cast loose from its parent.

Art News and Notes

It is always interesting to note what paintings are bought at an exhibition. From the Chicago Artists' exhibit, that closed recently at the Art institute, these were purchased: "Still Life" by Constance Harley, "Windswept Dunes" by Allen E. Philbrick, "Forest Flames" by Frank V. Dudley, "Summer Sky" by Charles E. Hallberg, "The Mojave Desert," by Wallace L. De Wolf, "Lake Superior" by F. N. Spolander, and "Siesta" by William Owen.

The exhibition of etchings by the Chicago Society of Etchers in the print galleries at the Art institute has been followed by an exhibition of drawings by the famous English artist, Muirhead Bone, and an exhibition of English landscape and architectural aquatints and sporting prints.

The exhibition of Indiana artists at Marshall Field's is well worth seeing. Wayman Adams, T. C. Steele, William Forsyth, J. E. Bundy, and Otto Stark are represented by fine canvases, and from the walls Indiana's favorite sons, James Whitcomb Riley, George Ade, Booth Tarkington, and John McCutcheon, look down. The Adams portrait of Tarkington is a bit disappointing, accentuating as it does the author's well known slouch. J. Murray Wickard, a young Indianapolis artist, has three paintings of distinction and is a prize winner in the exhibit. Margarita W. Weaver's portrait of Mr. McCutcheon, which won the Purdue Alumni prize, is both a splendid likeness and a fine painting. The color is clean and fresh, the handling reserved and dignified, and the result most satisfying. The Hoosier state has reason to be proud of its painters as shown in this exhibition.

Pieter Van Veen, an American artist with a distinctly Dutch name, has an interesting one-man show in a local gallery. Paintings from his brush are owned by the Queen of Belgium, the Youngstown Museum, the Seattle Museum, the Henry collection, the Chas. H. Frye collection of Seattle and the Edward L. Doheny collection of Los Angeles.

Tomorrow afternoon in Fullerton hall of the Art institute at 2:30 o'clock, Charles Fabens Kelley will speak on "What English Cathedrals to See." Members of the Chicago Symphony orchestra will give a concert on Tuesday afternoon in Fullerton hall at 4 o'clock. Dudley Crafts Watson will give his talk for children on "Castles and Palaces" on Saturday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

An exhibition of Chinese ceramics opened last Sunday in a gallery in Hutchinson wing of the Art institute.

ART AND ARTISTS

Mural Paintings Occupy East Wing of the Art Institute

Safe in my arms and warm against my breast
I hold you with a song and with a smile.
Safe in my arms, as hedging in its nest.
Are you, my child. The future waits a while.

Safe in my arms and close against my heart.
Your little life begins its little day.
I turn with terror from the threatening storm
And beg for sun and flowers all your way.

My mother heart a widening circle is,
To compass you against each ache and harm.
O, little babe! I dread the cross you bear—
It weighs so heavy now upon my arm.
E. J.

By Eleanor Jewett.

IT seems scarcely probable that Mary, the mother of Jesus, did not at times grieve and grieve bitterly for the future that waited to trap in its savage jaws her child. When he was safe with her, a tiny baby, peace probably at times soothed her terrors, but as she was human, a fear for what might come to him, in the greatness that was his allotted part, must often and often have made her tighten her arms around his chubby body and sing to him, reassuringly. The cross hung above the manger. Gethsemane pressed hard upon the nativity.

There was, of course, after the passing from this world, the glorious eternity with its life everlasting; the marvelous wonder of the Easter and resurrection; the ever abounding fact of the house of many mansions, and Jesus and God and the Holy Ghost, and a human world saved from its sins. But, even so, the human Mary must have wept often as she rocked her child.

This Mary, who might be any mother, has been given to us time and again in paintings by the old masters. The primitive Italian school endowed her with a charm of simplicity that has never been equaled. Now and then a later artist arises in the strength of his genius and gives to us another portrait of the virgin mother of Bethlehem. The sweeter and simpler the painting, the more impressive.

In the exhibition of mural decorations by members of the National Society of Mural Painters, which opened last Tuesday in the east wing galleries of the Art institute, there is a cartoon in water color for a stained glass window, by Maurice Denis, that recalls the old paintings, recalls and abases itself in the recalling. It is a frankly modern conception of that scene in the stable. One realizes that fashions change, but that seems the feeblest of excuse for introducing a little boy in a suit of rompers and a woman in a figured blouse.

A window, from its very nature, presents a different problem to that presented to a painter on canvas. There are certain facts, however, that should be obvious. Setting and characters should be in keeping with their subject. If you are attempting to render the Nativity, do not make a farce of your effort by introducing into the picture a whiff from the twentieth century. Also, do not crowd your canvas and do not exaggerate in either color or form. Particularly do not exaggerate when the result is to be a stained glass window. How many such there are where the composition is pleasing, the subject beautifully treated, but the colors—the reds and blues—are hard and blatant.

These projected windows, however, are but a part of the vast total of material that makes up the present exhibition. The exhibition bears a foreign flavor. One of its most interesting divisions is largely French, with a smattering of Spanish and Russian. Possibly the most striking of the French work is found in the splendid cartoons by Puvis de Chavannes. There are three of these, designed for the Pantheon. The stunning decors by Paul Albert Besnard for the Comedie Francais and his series for the Chapel of Berk do their fair share also toward making the French group memorable.

Mural decoration is an elastic term. Under it many delightful little pieces have slipped into the exhibit. They are a relief and an enlivening influence after the colossal cartoons of Besnard, for example. Among the photographs and sketches for completed work in large buildings, we discover many a fascinating, colorful small wall panel or bit of beautifully painted textile. There are such a number of delightful over-mantels and panel designs that to go into detail concerning them would be like entering a labyrinth with merely the faintest smudge of hope that a way out would be found.

Among the artists responsible for them are Robert Chandler, W. T. Benda, Cameron Burnside, Willard Deming, Lucy Hurry, Joseph Lauber, J. Markee, and J. Mortimer Lichtenauer.

A Spanish artist, Ramon Lopez Morello, young and not well known, contributes some exceedingly unusual and beautiful designs on cloth and paper. Keeping to a big design, with all the flourish and excessive embellishment conceivable, still he preserves a delicacy of technique that is little short of marvelous.

Practically without exception our modern mural painters are forsaking the flat, gray background of the Puvis tradition and seeking release in color for gayer, brighter, more excited emotion. Gardener Hale realizes this modern tendency in a design for a restaurant here, a design that embraces views of Chicago, skyscrapers and bridges, joyously outlined against a vivid, smokeless, blue sky. Stephen Hawais and Putnam Brinley are two other artists who in their decorations are bringing life and pleasure to the walls they decorate.

In the list of exhibitors are also found the artists Vedder, Frieseke, Hale, Mora, Roishoven, La Farge, Deming, Reuterdahl, Dabo, Desvallier, Caro Delvail, William Dodge, Munroe Hewlett, and Edwin Blashfield, the dean of American mural painters.

"The Summer Visitor," by Edgar A. Rupprecht, was one of the most charming to be found in the recent Chicago artists' exhibition at the Art institute. It has been purchased by the Municipal Art league for its permanent collection.

We can answer today the question raised in our column last week concerning the prowess of the Spaniard Hermengilde Anglada y Camarasa. How does this famous Spaniard stand in the light of the work of his celebrated countrymen, Sorolla and Zuloaga? He is vastly different from either.

Sorolla gives us real persons busy in real, natural occupations, in pleasant places, where, usually, the sun shines bright and hot. Zuloaga gives us striking portraiture against a generally monotonous background of a dull, somber color. A third contemporary Spaniard, Beltran-Masses, sees his subject through tinted glasses and presents it to us on a silver platter, delightfully wrapped in weird incenses and changing lights.

Anglada does none of these. He is dramatic, theatrical even at times, if you like, sophisticated, exaggeratedly so, but always, primarily, decorative. Living his life in the sunshine, on the Island of Majorca, it is not surprising that his paintings are sumptuous with sunlight. No need, nor room, nor knowledge, has he of darkness and shadow. Rich, sensual, sensational color and garb and person, that is what he finds in his world, a background of pink and cream houses and rustling trees and gardens and arbors overrun with flowers. Embroidered shawl and jacket, pallid face, burning eyes, midnight hair, a generalization of subject to gain a suitable excuse for an elaborate painting of texture and textile, there you find Anglada, a magnificent retailer of peacock plumage.

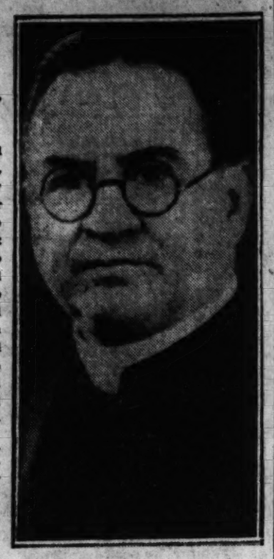
NEWS OF THE RELIGIOUS WORLD

Immanuel Church Hopes to Be Out of Debt by Easter

By the Rev. W. B. Norton.



THE VERY REV. MGR. C. J. QUILLE.
[Lavecchia Photo.]

Immanuel Baptist church at 23d street and South Michigan avenue, Dr. Johnston Myers, pastor for nearly thirty years, is in a campaign for $45,000. With this money raised the church will not only be out of debt but will be the headquarters of the Baptist denomination for the west and in many particulars for the entire Baptist northern convention. It will also enable the church to continue in a ministry of feeding, clothing, and getting employment for thousands. The campaign for the special fund will continue until Easter, when it is hoped the full amount will crown the spiritual rejoicing of that day.

The Immanuel church has had a remarkable history. Twice its building was burned and three years ago its tower was blown down in a storm. Disaster has been met by a greatly improved church plant until it is one of the finest in the city. Business has encroached with the loss of a residential neighborhood giving regular support. Dr. Myers, his deacons and other officials of his church have felt a profound conviction that the church was needed in downtown Chicago, deserted by so many other churches of various denominations. Not only are the Baptists of Chicago intensely interested in the success of this Easter campaign, but a large number of philanthropic citizens who believe that a church is needed on automobile row and who see in Immanuel a church with a history and a program that justifies the highest expectations.

The Rev. Father Joseph, founder of the order of St. Francis in the Episcopal church, will preach morning and evening today in Calvary church, 3162 West Monroe street, the Rev. W. R. Neely, rector. The mission will close tomorrow evening.

A religious drama, "The Rich Young Man," will be given tomorrow evening at the Chicago Training school, 4949 Indiana avenue. The school has established a department of religious dramatics and pageantry. A portable stage in the form of a Greek temple is being put in Harris chapel, named in honor of the late Norman Walt Harris. Dr. L. F. W. Lesemann is president of the school.

A pre-Easter rally of the Evangelical churches of Chicago and vicinity of the Illinois conference of the Evangelical church will be held today at 2:15 at the Chicago temple, Clark and Washington streets. Bishop S. P. Spreng, resident bishop of the Chicago area, will give the address. John J. Arnold will preside and the Rev. A. J. Byas, district superintendent, will lead the devotions. Bishop Spreng will speak on "The Great Missionary Conference at Washington."

The Rt. Rev. Charles P. Anderson, bishop of Chicago, will preach this morning at 11 o'clock at St. Bartholomew's Episcopal church, 6720-34 Stewart avenue. The Rev. H. R. Brinker, rector, will conduct the services at 7:30 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.

ADAPTO SHOES for STOUT WOMEN

AN EXCLUSIVE SERVICE

Under the direction of DR. BYRON SCHINDLER, Foot Specialist, upon request, foot examination will be given to Adapto shoe wearers and those who suffer with their feet. This service is free.

ADAPTO Shoes relieve and tend to strengthen fallen arches by means of ADAPTO'S exclusive high arch feature.

ADAPTO Shoes relieve the pressure upon bunions and help to prevent their future re-appearance.

How quickly the first sign of Spring awakens the desire to "shop"—the love of nice things! Dainty, new frocks; flimsy, little gowns; smart suits for the afternoon.

And to go with each article in your new Spring wardrobe you'll want just the right pair of shoes—be they slippers, pumps or oxfords.

Heretofore the Stout Woman had to sacrifice this final touch of a well-dressed appearance. She could not get truly fashionable footwear that would give her feet the necessary comfort. But now, in ADAPTO shoes, made expressly for Stout Women, she can combine the latest fancy of the mode with the oldest requisite of happiness—comfort.

Your body breathes!

In one of the miracle plays of the middle ages, a small boy was cast for the part of an angel. To produce the effect they wanted, his body was gilded from head to foot. The boy died—because his little body could not "breathe."

If your corset will not permit the pores of your body to breathe, Nature will make you pay—first in discomfort; later perhaps in a permanent blight on happiness. Let your body breathe!—it is vital to health, to sustained youth and vigor.

Corsets made with Kenlastic, the knitted elastic, adjust themselves instantly and naturally to every change in motion and posture, holding and moulding the figure without restraint. Corsets made with Kenlastic let your body breathe!..

Kenlastic—in America's finest corsets—guarantees unvarying quality. Whether you purchase a model made with silk Kenlastic—the most luxurious corset fabric made—or a model made with cotton Kenlastic, you may be sure of the same Kenlastic excellence. There is the same grade of rubber; the same meticulous care in knitting by our special and patented processes; the same expert testing; the same expert finishing.

BLUE RIBBON FICTION

The HAWK by Dane Coolidge

IF YOU LIKE the picturesque west of cowboys, cattle rustlers, bad men, and action, read this story. Dane Coolidge is a veteran writer of first class cowboy yarns. Among his popular stories are The Desert Trail, Rimrod Jones, The Texan, and The Fighting Fool. Start this thrilling tale of love, fighting, and adventure, and continue it tomorrow in The Tribune.

INSTALLMENT I.

THE HAWK WAKES UP.

THE Powder river roundup had crept far up above the plains, gathering company cattle within the shadow of the Red Wall. During the long morning hours that the cowboys had watched the trail not a rustler had appeared on the heights, but as the circle was finished and the cook hammered on his dishpan a horseman rode out on the rim. In the thin mountain air he loomed big against the sky, his neck craned as he looked down at their camp, and the cowboys gazed back in silence. It was Cavey Hooten, tall and stooping, almost sinister.

The fastest eaters among the cowboys mounted their horses and jogged out to relieve the guard, and as the famished day herders came in on the lope the cook rolled his eyes at the boss.

"Heah comes Dull Knife, suh," he said.

Noisy Connolly, the foreman, was big, and his battered face gave him a look of brutal ferocity; but the mighty shoulders of Dull Knife Arrants towered well above his, and there was a wild, fighting look in his eyes. He nodded to one of the boys and, studiously ignoring the foreman, dismounted and picked up a plate.

"Hey! You!" barked Connolly, advancing on him threateningly, "put down that plate—understand? You don't eat at the NA wagon!"

"O, I don't, eh?" grunted Dull Knife, going over to the ovens.

"You're blackballed for stealing mavericks, and no association wagon will feed ye."

"You can't steal a maverick," declared Dull Knife, heatedly. "The last legislature passed a law making them any man's property, and I'm jest out to git my share. Neither you nor Cato Clark can show a single calf that I ever weaned or led away from its mother, but I can prove by any boy here you blotched one of my yearlings this morning!"

"Ah, now, Dull Knife," protested Connolly, "why do you always want to make the worst of it? If it was done, it was all an accident."

"You rich man's cow thief! Take off your gun, if you're afraid to shoot it out, and I'll whip you with my two hands."

The big range boss hesitated and glanced about at his men, and in the silence a voice came from the heights.

"Look under that bed wagon, Dull Knife," it called. "He's got one of his gunmen hid out."

Dull Knife started off across the flat to where the bed wagon stood with the rope corral extending from its wheels, and as he walked in on the slender form lying, half hidden, beneath the wagon, Cavey Hooten shouted again from the rim:

"Git down, you pore fool, or he'll beef you in your tracks. That's one of them Texas gun slingers."

Dull Knife advanced a step nearer and stood crouched.

"Come alive, there!" he challenged, and, swinging back his foot, he booted the hat into the air.

The Night Hawk blinked and looked up at Dull Knife, with eyes half blinded by the sun —and yet they were not so blind. They were big, like an owl's, and like an owl's they showed dark centers of velvety black, but as they came to a focus on the scowling face above him they changed to a fearless stare.

"Well, what will it be?" he inquired.

"I hear you're a gun slinger," sneered Dull Knife, insultingly, but the stranger held up his hand.

"Not so fast," he said, "you have been misinfo'med, my friend. And I'll trouble you for that hat."

"You from Texas?" Dull Knife demanded suspiciously.

"Yes, suh, I am, to tell you the truth; but that don't make me a gunman."

"Well, it comes pretty near it," stated Dull Knife. "What you doing around these parts?"

"Why, I'm nighthawk for Mister Connolly, if it's any of your business—and I'll trouble you to pass me that hat."

"Here's your hat, pardner," Dull Knife said, and, passing it hastily back, he turned and strode back to Connolly.

"Now here," he began, "whether he's a gunman or not, it makes no difference to me. You're the man that blotched my brand and put NA on my critter, and I'll give you the choice between venting him back and taking a danged good licking."

A team of dappled grays came swinging around the point, whirling a cloud of red dust in their wake; and behind them, yielding ponderously as they fought against the bits, sat Cato Clark, the manager. He was large and dark, with rough hewn features, and underneath his broad hat his hair showed snowy white. Hooked over his ears he wore the pair of huge spectacles which had given him the name of Old Cheaters, and from behind their smoked glasses his eyes peered out, unseen, as he brought the champion grays to a halt.

He was a man born to rule if there is anything in will and pride, and the indomitable resolution to overcome; and by his side, flushed and fearless, sat Anita Mogaridge, his stepdaughter, without whom he never drove. She was small compared to him, and wondrously beautiful to the cowboys, with her black hair and dark Spanish eyes; but though several gazed at her wistfully she smiled on all alike, with a quick little nod for the cook.

"Well," demanded Clark, as he saw their angry faces, "what's going on today?"

"Who gave you any license to run this country?" Dull Knife demanded. "I'm a free born American and this land is mine. I've homesteaded it—you're standing on my claim, and I tell you to get out—and take all these cowboys with you."

As he delivered his ultimatum there was a shout from the heights, and they saw them swarming with men.

"Get back there!" ordered Cavey Hooten, waving his rifle at the cowboys, "get back—let 'em fight it out. The first man that horns in——"

He paused, and Dull Knife wheeled about. Across the flat from the bed wagon the Night Hawk was coming toward him, a pistol slung low on his hip. But now that he was on his feet he was a different man from the sleepy eyed, inoffensive horse herder—he moved forward with the soft footed grace of a panther.

"I beg your pardon," he said to Dull Knife, "if I seem to be horning in where perhaps I'm no way concerned, but I see there's a lady present."

differently situated 90 days ago when I purchased my 6-55 Flint Sport Touring. I have a decided preference for the appearance of my car and any known test of the motor will best tell the story of the car. It is equipped throughout necessary including 6 Fisk balloon tires. Not a scratch on the car nor even on the spare. The upholstering also bespeaks little use and good care. I still owe a balance of $1,050 payable $75 a month till paid, including all interest. I would have paid $1,100 on this car and will take $400 for my equity if sold today. Need money—am leaving town at home today—only A buyer can take over my contract. 5053 Ellis Av., corner Hyde Pk. blvd. Kenwood 5890-J. Austin.

SPECIAL SALE NEW 1924 Studebaker Cars Light Six Models At Cost

We have a very limited number of perfectly new Studebaker Light Six Phaetons and a few Special Six Sedans.

To close out this stock in the next two weeks we are pricing these cars at actual cost.

They are standard 1924 Light Sixes. Thousands of these models are now in service in Chicago and giving perfect satisfaction. In chassis design they are very similar to the new 1925 models.

Each car carries a NEW CAR GUARANTEE and NEW CAR SERVICE privileges.

At the price quoted on these cars it will pay you to buy a NEW CAR instead of a used car—the resale value of such a car being low, the price you pay today makes the purchase an investment, and the savings in the lower upkeep of a NEW CAR compared with a used car will easily pay the interest on your investment.

VERY LOW DOWN PAYMENTS. VERY LOW MONTHLY PAYMENTS.

Even balloon tires and natural wood wheels at slight additional price.

There are only a very few of these cars left. Come in TODAY and pick out your car for next spring. If you haven't all the money a deposit will hold your car until you are ready for it!

AUTOMOBILES WANTED.

An Opportunity for Some New Car Dealer to Solve His Used Car Problem.

To some new car dealer who is handicapped for any reason in the disposition of his trade-ins, I can offer unusual facilities.

A good location, plenty of space for 25 cars in a new garage building, excellent showroom with 80 ft. frontage on a prominent street, extensive clientele, and experience in the business gained from 13 years' clear record with one of the leading companies on Michigan avenue.

I can move a volume of salable merchandise priced right, but junk stock will not be considered. Some nearby out-of-town dealer handling a popular or high grade car would, doubtless, find it profitable to take advantage of the Chicago market as an outlet for his surplus.

I shall be glad to talk over working agreement on a commission basis with interested parties. Long distance telephone Fairfax 9549.

SHRINERS READY TO BUILD CHICAGO HOSPITAL UNIT

For Charity Treatment of Crippled Children.

Before another year has passed, some sixty crippled children will be having twisted legs straightened and curved spines made strong in the Chicago unit of the Shriners' Hospital for Crippled Children, for which bids were opened yesterday at the La Salle hotel.

WILL H. WADE. [Wallinger Photo.]

By summer, work is expected to start on this, the ninth unit in the Shriners' chain, which is to be built, at a cost of between $350,000 and $400,000, at the southeast corner of Oak Park and Belden avenues.

The bids were taken last night to Philadelphia, where the full board of trustees of the Shrine will meet to-morrow and Tuesday. Contracts, it is expected, will be awarded there.

In an adjoining column appears a picture showing how the completed hospital will appear.

Medinah Temple Gave Land.

It is to be erected on the corner of the seventeen and one-half acre tract, purchased by Medinah temple at a cost of approximately $2,500 an acre and presented to the national board of trustees. Hentz, Reid & Adler of Atlanta, Ga., supervising architects for all the Shrine hospitals, with architect Robert C. Fletcher of Chicago associated, designed the building.

The hospital is to be of Georgian design, built of red brick with stone trim, and will front 350 feet on Oak Park avenue. In the two wards at either end there will be accommodations for sixty patients. Since experience in the other hospitals has demonstrated that the average stay of a patient is three months, 240 children are expected to pass through the hospital each year. In addition an outpatient department for those who do not require hospital treatment will be maintained.

Local Shrine in Charge.

While the Chicago unit, like all others, will be supported by a tax of $2 on each one of the 500,000 members of the Shrine, its immediate management will be in charge of a local committee, of which Will H. Wade, past potentate of Medinah temple, is chairman.

Seven Shriners' hospitals are already in operation, caring for 500 children at one time. These are in Shreveport, La., Minneapolis-St. Paul, Minn., San Francisco, Cal., Portland, Ore., St. Louis, Mo., Springfield, Mass., and Montreal, Canada. The eighth hospital, in Philadelphia, is nearing completion. In addition, the Shrine maintains four special wards in hospitals in Honolulu, Spokane, Salt Lake City, and Winnipeg.

Charity for All.

No child, whether the son or daughter of a Shriner or not, is barred from one of the hospitals provided that treatment is otherwise financially impossible. Children of all races, creeds, and colors are welcomed. The only requirement is that their condition offer reasonable chance of cure.

FLAT, BUSINESS SALES NET TOTAL OF $446,000

The twenty-four flat building at the southwest corner of 64th street and Kenwood avenue has been sold by Katherine M. Paule to David S. Lefler and James J. Flanagan for a reported $155,000, subject to $148,000. Robert Quait represented the seller, and S. A. Bernbach & Co., the buyers.

Tevel Katz has sold to Pauline Ambrossius the fifteen apartment building at the southwest corner of Addison and Jansen streets for a reported $112,000, subject to $68,000.

Schwartz & Schwartz were the brokers in the last five sales mentioned above.

The Yale Electric corporation has leased from the Ford Roofing Products Co. the three story factory at 2339-41 South La Salle street for a term of years at a rental of $28,600. All parties to the transaction were represented by Louis B. Beardslee & Co., who also report the lease by Dominick Garibio to George H. Hall and Charles J. Krick of the building at 634-36 Plaisance street for a term of years at $10,800 rental.

Add 20 Acres to Bellevue Subdivision in Roseland

Teninga Bros. has sold fifteen acres to Dick Westerveld has sold five to Cornelius Teninga at 108th and Wallace streets, the former for $15,000, the latter for $18,000. This makes 100 acres of subdivision in the Bellevue addition to Roseland. Teninga Bros. & Co. report the sale of fifteen homes and thirty-two within the last month.

New Movie House, 59th and Kedzie

C. M. Wasson, Frank Jamison, and Ed Qualkinbush head the syndicate which will erect this 2,500 seat movie house at the northwest corner of Kedzie avenue and 59th street. The design for the building, which is expected to cost $840,000, has been drawn by Loewenberg & Loewenberg, architects.

The ground, purchased for $151,000, fronts 175 feet on Kedzie avenue and 125 feet on 59th street. The Spanish type of building will contain, beside the theater, a large Chinese restaurant, twelve stores, six offices, and twelve apartments. O'Connor, Burke & McDonnell, who negotiated the real estate transfer, will manage both theater and building. Maddock, Jaffe & Green, attorneys, handled legal details.

Work, it is announced, will start at once.

New Movie Theater for Cicero Avenue and Belmont

A new movie theater is projected for Cicero avenue near Belmont by Louis Goldson, owner of the Plaza theater. He has purchased the property, 125x180, on the east side of Cicero avenue, 175 feet north of the corner, from Sam Arado, Gilbert Molstad, and Richard Mauer for a reported $50,000. The theater project and the extension of the Belmont avenue car line has boosted prices in the neighborhood. Business corners are being held at around $1,000 a front foot.

NOW WE'LL SEE WHO GOES TO WEDNESDAY NIGHT PRAYER SERVICE

Wives of members of the Chicago Real Estate board need no longer go alone to Wednesday evening prayer meeting.

"Some day the charge will be made that the Chicago Real Estate Board is composed of a lot of un-Godly heathens who intentionally fix their regular monthly meeting on Wednesday evenings so that the men can have an excuse for not accompanying their wives to the weekly Wednesday night church meetings," wrote one righteous realtor.

"Does the Chicago Real Estate board want to promote strife and discord in the relations existing between its members and their wives?" he continued. "If I must choose between attending the regular monthly board meetings or going to the Wednesday night church meetings with my family, I for one propose to stick to my family!"

The board of directors thereupon changed the time of the next monthly meeting to 4 o'clock in the afternoon. They are waiting to see how many good church members, formerly absent, put in an appearance.

HERE AT LAST! THE $12,600,000 EITEL BUILDINGS

Hotel, Theater, Offices Are on the Way.

Workmen are demolishing the old buildings, caissons for the new already have started down. Greenebaum Sons Investment company has underwritten a $7,750,000 bond issue—and in an adjoining space appears the picture of the latest huge building project, the Eitel brothers' $12,600,000 hotel, theater and office block on the south side of Randolph street between La Salle and Wells streets.

Long awaited, this combination of buildings being erected by Emil and Karl Eitel will soon be rising above the street level, and will be ready for occupancy in another year.

Occupying the entire 181 foot La Salle street frontage and extending to a depth of about 56 feet on Randolph street will stand the twenty-two story Metropolitan office building. Immediately to the west will be the entrance, some fifty feet wide, of the New Palace theater, latest and finest of the Orpheum circuit. The theater itself, seating more than 2,500 persons, is to stand in the 152x146 court in back of the hotel and west of the office building.

Where Old Bismarck Stood.

On the west corner, occupying the remainder of the Randolph street frontage and 127 feet on Wells street, will rise the new Randolph hotel and Bismarck restaurant, to stand on the site, famous since 1894, of the Eitel's old Bismarck hotel.

C. W. and George L. Rapp are architects of all three buildings. Albert H. Wetten & Co. have been appointed agents and are making leases for May 1, 1926. The Hegeman-Harris company, who are completing their work on The Tribune Tower, are the contractors.

A total expenditure of $12,659,213 will be involved in the undertaking, according to estimates.

Same Bismarck Tradition.

Interesting because of its association with the old hostelry and the traditions built up by the Eitel brothers rather than through any pretentions as to size or grandeur, the new hotel will form the keystone of the block.

As a matter of fact, the Randolph hotel will contain only 596 rooms, a small hotel in comparison with those already built and building in large cities.

"Our aim is not size," explained Karl and Emil Eitel, as the plans were made public, "but it is to create the same atmosphere that surrounded the old Bismarck and made it famous."

But Minus Famous Steins.

"Randolph hotel" is only part of the name. For "and Bismarck restaurant" is included. The same staff of cooks will be on hand, and all that will be lacking will be the creaming steins that brought patrons by the score to sit about the tables of the historic eating place.

On the Randolph street side the hotel will be eighteen stories high. The south seventy-six feet of the Wells street wing will be four stories high at first, to be used as service quarters, but with foundations heavy enough to permit the addition of fourteen stories.

Finest Orpheum Theater.

The New Palace theater, besides being planned for the most notable in the fifty theater chain of the Orpheum circuit, marks a stride westward of the Randolph street Rialto. It has been leased for twenty years for the production of Orpheum vaudeville.

Measuring 50x110, and rising through five stories, the lobby, it is claimed, will be the largest of any theater in Chicago.

There will be 1,250 orchestra seats, a mezzanine floor of boxes where smoking will be permitted and where overstuffed arm chairs will replace the usual straight backed seats, and another 1,000 or more seats in the balcony.

A ventilating and cooling plant is to furnish fresh air at the rate of thirty cubic feet per person and at a temperature of 70 degrees. Two elevators, each carrying forty passengers, will take patrons to the mezzanine and balcony. Back stage there will be eight tiers of dressing rooms, each with a private bath, and those of the stars with reception rooms. A National Vaudeville Artists' club room also will be included.

A date shortly after Feb. 1, 1926, has been set for the completion of the theater.

Metropolitan Office Building.

The office building, named from the old block across the street, owned by the Eitel brothers, will have 180,000 square feet of office and 8,000 square feet of store space. Both hotel and office building will have light on all sides because of the central court.

The fronts of all three buildings will be faced with polished granite for the first story, with terra cotta or Bedford stone for the next three stories, and with brick, trimmed with terra cotta or Bedford stone, for the remainder of the way up.

The total frontage of the buildings is 612 feet, twenty feet being taken off the present 324 foot Randolph street frontage for the eventual widening of La Salle street.

One hundred and nine caissons are to be put down to a depth of 120 feet as a foundation, and 6,500 tons of steel are to be used.

Geernebaum Sons estimate the gross annual income of the completed block at $1,356,607 and the operating expenses at $44,115.

Where the Old Bismarck Stood

C. W. and George L. Rapp are architects of this $12,600,000 hotel, theater, and office building group, being erected by Karl and Emil Eitel on Randolph street between La Salle and Wells streets. Work has started. Full story in adjoining column.

3 NEW FURNITURE STORES TO ENTER 3 NEW BUILDINGS

Dubin & Eisenberg, architects, are preparing plans for a $100,000 three story and basement building, to be erected at 4132-36 West Madison street, on the property, 50x175, bought by Louis Marschak from Joseph Mudd for a reported $42,500. The building is to be occupied by Joseph Marshack & Sons as a furniture store. M. Rubin & Co. were brokers in the sale.

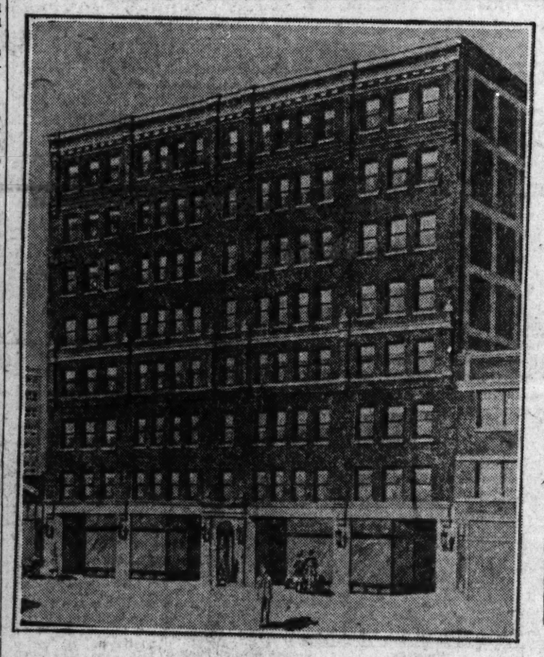
R. G. Schmidt company, architects, are drawing plans for a building to occupy the site on Michigan avenue, 81 feet frontage, 125 feet south of 115th street, purchased by Cornelius Teninga from Walter Schmidt and Emil Seip for a reported $50,000. A furniture store will occupy the building.

A one story and basement building will be reected on the northeast corner of Michigan avenue and 115th street, also to be used for a furniture store. Teninga Brothers & Co. were brokers.

FOUR OF EVERYTHING.

The four flat, four store, and four garage building at 4050-56 North Rockwell street has been sold by I. Rabiner to Hyman Berkson for a reported $72,000, subject to $48,500. The Coffman Realty company were brokers.

Replaces Old Landmark



The building of the Roydon apartments at 1007-1011 Davis street, Evanston, marks the passing of the old Benjamin Sargent house which formerly occupied the site. Benjamin Sargent was one of Evanston's early residents. His son, Leroy H. Sargent, is owner and builder of the new apartments.

The building was designed by Architect Edgar Ovet Blake and will cost, eventually, $500,000. Only four stories will be built at present. It will contain, when completed, four stores and fifty-four apartments. Quinlan & Tyson have underwritten a bond issue and will manage the property.

Standard Oil Company Acquires Two More Sites

The Standard Oil company has acquired two new properties. One is at the southeast corner of Devon avenue and Ridge boulevard, 170x114, from Lauretta Reedy, for an indicated $70,000, subject to $35,000. The other is in Forest Park, at the northwest corner of Des Plaines avenue and Randolph street, 33x140, from Louis Romanoff and Ellis Levin for an indicated $13,500.

BUYS IN HINSDALE.

Richard C. Potter & Co. has purchased of the Harvey T. Weeks estate 390 fifty foot lots in the Hinsdale business section for an undisclosed consideration.

BANK, INSURANCE BUILDING, HOTEL FOR WEST SIDE

At Ogden Avenue, Wood, and Van Buren.

A hotel, a bank, and a pair of insurance buildings are to be erected on Ogden avenue at the northeast corner of Van Buren street, as one of the latest developments on the west side.

Henry W. Lydig purchased from the Allied State Securities corporation last week the property fronting 126 feet on Van Buren street with a depth of 75 feet on Wood street and Ogden avenue for a reported $70,000 subject to a trust deed of $30,000. It is on this site that a 300 room hotel will be erected.

The property is close to Chicago's great hospital center, and the hotel, it is expected, will fill a long felt need in offering nearby shelter to patients who must be under observation, but who do not require hospital care. Special diet kitchens are to be part of the hotel's equipment.

Allied Bank Building.

Just north of the hotel will be the Allied Bank building, a picture of which, designed by K. M. Vitzthum and John J. Burns, has already appeared in these columns. John J. Arnold, former vice president of the First National bank and now head of the Allied State Securities corporation, is to be president of the new institution. The corporation is behind the whole project.

The bank, it is estimated, will cost in the neighborhood of $350,000 to build. Other officers of the bank are: Edward E. Kastner, vice president; Dr. George L. Perusse, Lee D. Mathias, George Barron, S. C. Postlewait, J. H. Koren, Dr. James A. Wright, Victor Behrens, Merrill L. Hawkins, William Fain, and John C. Hector. Theodore E. Guy is attorney.

$400,000 Insurance Buildings.

The Great American Casualty company and the Standard American Fire Insurance company, of both of which George W. Wolfe is president, will build on the 150 foot Ogden avenue frontage northeast of the bank. Their building will be six stories high and will cost approximately $400,000. Louis Guenzel will be the architect.

Incidentally, the Allied State Securities corporation did not make such a bad deal when they bought the property on which all these buildings are to be erected. They received $90,000 clear, it was reported, for the insurance company lots. With the $70,000 for the hotel site, they took in $160,000. According to Attorney Guy, who handled legal details for the corporation, the property was purchased for $140,000. The answer is: A bank site and $20,000 profit.

Ramps from the broad doors give easy access to the ground for the crippled patients. An "L" in the rear will be the out-patient clinic.

WESTERN AND DEVON CREATE LITTLE REALTY ROMANCE OF THEIR OWN

A money making little romance of the real estate world was disclosed last week when Attorney Raymond M. Smith took title on behalf of a syndicate to the southwest corner of Devon and Western avenues, a piece of vacant property 248 feet on Devon and 126 feet on Western. In addition, the sydicate purchased the property, 130x107, adjoining the first holding on the Western avenue frontage.

Harry C. Wirsing and Harry W. Labey were the sellers and the broker was Henry W. Hoffmann. Where's the money making little romance? Wait!

That corner piece was bought thirteen years ago for $4,500. A year later it changed hands for $5,700. Then it was sold for $12,500. In 1922, Ben Friedman bought it for $50,000. In June, 1923, Friedman sold it to Wirsing for $100,000. The other day the sale of that same piece brought approximately $200,000, subject to $100,000. The adjoining piece brought almost $100,000.

Thirteen years ago, there was hardly a house in sight and the corner was a rank growth of weeds and tin cans. Within a short time now a 3,000 seat movie house and store building is to be erected on the corner at an approximate cost of $500,000. A $250,000 bank building is to adorn the property to the south. Work is expected to begin this fall.

Temple Buys on Bernard St. for Religious School

Temple Beth Israel has purchased the frame residence at 4850 Bernard street, 36x125, from Thomas B. Maginnis for an indicated $14,000 subject to $3,000. The house will be used for a religious school. A. N. Lustig was attorney for the temple.

THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER

March 22, 1925

PIGWEED by Carroll K. Michener

"If I look again," she murmured, "it will be only a dream. Galahad—you are like that!"

Those Blood Red Poppies Spoke to Him of Mystery and Tragedy—and There Was the Girl, Golden as the Poppies Under the Pacific Skies

THERE should have been a cross—a pair of rude boards lettered with a name—to make the illusion complete. For somehow the place spoke to Hemingway of a grave; these red field poppies spoke to him of a million graves.

It made no difference that the spot where he stood was four thousand miles from the heart of France. There was in it, for him, the identical emotion with which he remembered battlefields. Red of blood, red of petals, were those fields, an association poignant, imperishable. His breath came sharp at the reminder and pulse quickened into a martial cadence.

And yet all this was but prelude, and irrelevant at the moment, to a paramount emotion. Beyond the poppies—one of them, yet of another kind—was the girl; not scarlet, like these petals alien to America, but golden as the poppies that know their blooming under Pacific skies. From some botanic corner of his brain, even in the ecstatic instant when his eyes made certain their discovery, emerged the textbook designation. Absently, conscious of absurd and inappropriate pedantry before the beckoning of romance, his lips formed the Latin syllables. Eschscholtzia—that was the resemblance; she was like the Eschscholtzia californica.

She stood, outlined against deep foliage, upon a rude balcony of weathered timbers. Against a decrepit, vine hung wall was this eyrie, under the ruinous eaves of a building Hemingway had recognized from the river as an old mill. Beyond rose the green steep of a ravine, shouldering into a narrow, deep pond the small stream that pushed lazily against rotting timbers of the dam and spilled with a hollow murmur into the pit that might have hidden a corroded turbine.

The girl, the poppies, confirmed for Hemingway a keen sense of magic. To come upon this spot, out of a threadbare day, was open sesame into illusion.

He had been conscious of it from afar. And it was this, more than the crankiness of Hercules, his motor of the one wheezy lung, that had brought him to paddle shoreward. Here was room for the night's camp. Mosquito net could be hung, perhaps, in some corner of the old mill, where he might sleep to the sound of cool water garrulous of the past. And here would be workshop, upon sufferance of the owner, for overhauling Hercules.

The mill was solitary in this cleft in the great bluffs. Elms cast protective limbs over its sagged roof. A cottonwood stood sentinel beside the tail race, roots bared by some spring freshet. Above, climbing steeply to the ravine's summit, from which fields ready for the harvest no doubt ran back limitlessly toward the lowering sun, were mixed families of oaks.

Exposed to the four winds stood a bleak structure, with no tree for shelter, no shrub for ornament. Behind were barns, beggarly, intimidated—mere sheds overawed by the square stone pile; and the whole topping a smooth knoll, brown of vegetation in midst of the lusty greenness of young summer.

TO Hemingway, surveying it from the river, there had been in the house a suggestion of unholy sanctuary; as if the place were set apart by some spiritual quarantine, cut off by act of those within.

The house was invisible from the green retreat of the mill stream. Hemingway was grateful for that. When he had pulled his indolent flatboat over shallow ripples, and anchored its nose to the stones of the mill foundation, he looked up with a sigh at the friendly welcome of rank vegetation. He was at home here with these sumac—with wild blackberries, hazel brush, sweet clover; comfortably at ease with even those agricultural outcasts, the burdock, giant ragweed, the bull thistle, and white goose foot.

There were the poppies, curiously alien to all else. Red wraiths, they were, from those French battlefields. Neither the feet of the American army, bearing the dust of France, nor emotional patriotism, grown thin since the war, had succeeded in transplanting them to new world soil. Yet here they were a rug of scarlet, flaming in the patch of sunlight that fell before the mill door.

And the girl? She, like the poppies, seemed curiously out of place. Hemingway could not consider her, at any rate, a habitant of that forbidding house upon the bluff. She was an enchantment, a genie of the mill; she was unreal, not unfamiliar, to the surrounding.

He had come silently through dense grasses margining the poppies. Evidently she was still quite unaware of his presence. She stood poised like a butterfly, steeped in sunlight, bathed in scent of sweet clover. Her hair, haloed, was molten gold.

There was an air of meditation about her, concluded Hemingway, the habit of one who is accustomed to solitude. A creature of such vividness, such evident vitality, could not, he thought, be unhappy, yet there was upon her a pensive shadow, the cloud of some disquiet.

He followed her gaze to where it seemingly rested, but saw no more than a circling water bug marring the liquid polish of the pond. Her balcony hung sheer over the edge of that still mirror, at the point where it became fluid and spilled through rotting water gates into the cavernous pit.

Hemingway remained rigid as if movement, or a sound, might have shattered the spell. But presently the girl became animate with sudden grace. He saw the motive for her appearance upon this insecure perch, jutting from a deep, half boarded window. At arm's length, under the eave, was a nest of wrens.

The girl peered into it, bringing her young body straight and taut against the balcony rail.

Crazily, the old timbers creaked with her movement, and Hemingway's lips parted for a word of warning. At sound of his voice there was new tenseness in the straining figure, an abrupt turn of the girl's head; with it the crackle of decrepit wood. Uttering a cry, she fell, clutching vainly at loose clapboards. The pond swallowed her; the ravine echoed with the splash of violence to its serenity.

HEMINGWAY, adrip from his plunge of rescue, carried the girl into the sunlight; sat down, still clasping her in his arms, upon the rug of poppies.

She was inert, but it was evident to him that she was not without life. Laying an ear to her breast, he could detect the faint murmur of her heart. She had been stunned, he thought, by the water's sharp buffet, or by a blow from the broken railing that had accompanied her fall.

How to rouse her! It would be futile to dash water against cheeks still dewy with immersion. To slap them? He could not endure the thought of that further indignity—of marring with even a moment's harshness of his hands the smooth perfection of those surfaces.

The figure of the poppy recurred to him. In this miraculous proximity he could see the complete aptness of his fancy. She was the golden Eschscholtzia. An orange gingham clung, now in wet curves, to her slight body. The hair was a deeper gold from its rude bath. There was the waxed transparence of thin petals in cheeks and throat; yellow corolla cupped in the calyx of her sunburned shoulders.

She stirred, abruptly, when these imaginings might have begun to turn, for Hemingway, into a prompting of apprehension. Her eyes opened, and she looked questioningly into his. She sighed, then her eyes closed again, as if confidence had been their answer.

"If I look again," she murmured, "it will be only a dream. Galahad, you are like that."

He would have put her down beside him, but she clung fast, like a child, tightening a slim arm round his neck.

"This may never happen to me again," she said, pink glow flooding into the wax petals of her cheeks. Lids trembled, but still hid the lobelia pools beneath.

For the space of a sharp breath, Hemingway was abashed. He had no flare for easy conquest. And in that brief interval since his first beholding, the girl had become for him a nebulous emotion; he did not wish to find her common. She had been, somehow, a part of the sentiment hovering above the poppies. Discovery of her had given him the same keen thrill of the unspoiled and new that came with the encountering of some green leaf, by him still unidentified.

But reflection preserved for him the sanctity of this ideal. He could see in her action no erotic copying of the prevalent loose mannered youth; hers was not the brazen gesture of the dizzy, marathoning marionette. What he heard in her murmured words, felt in the constraint of her smooth young arm, was a vast hunger of the imagination, the pain of a starved life. Hers was the mild complaint of one whose expectancy of romance has been repressed and made dull.

"TELL me your name."

He told her.

"Trafford," she repeated, caressingly. "Trafford Hemingway. I'm glad not every one is named from the Bible. They called me Shubael. But I've named myself Venetia—from a poem."

"Shubael is masculine!" exclaimed Hemingway.

"I know. But I was to have been a boy. 'And Jedediah begat Shubael.' I suppose that's the way it reads, somewhere in the Old Testament. Jedediah is my father."

She looked at him suddenly.

"You should be a poet," she said, "with a name like yours."

His laugh sent echoes rocketing through the ravine.

"I'm an agronomist, a specialist in weeds! That's my poetry. I'm taking a vacation, and at the same time gathering a little material—more or less because I can't help it—for a farm bulletin."

"And you've found a new one—a new weed," she said, ruefully, abruptly self-conscious. "You must put me down. Father would call me poison weed."

"Weeds?" he questioned, soberly. "There are none, really. It all depends. What's weed to one may be wildflower to another."

There was a cloud over the sun as he lifted the girl to her feet. Only when they stood, thus, was either conscious of dark scrutiny from the steep pathway staggering crazily up hill.

"It's father!" whispered Shubael.

He was like a great owl, peering from behind the crown of a young sapling. Observing that they were aware of his presence, he came down, heavily, to the end of the path, arms gesturing angrily, lips moving against the background of a livid countenance. Yet no sound came from his throat. He was either mute, thought Hemingway, or inarticulate with passion.

The man was of tremendous figure; long legs, short bust, a square head. His skin, burned by sun, weathered by wind, flamed through a stubble of beard. Hair, unnaturally white, gave him an unkempt thatch. The eyes, to Hemingway, seemed filled with an indescribable contradiction of remorsefulness and remorse. There was in them a glint of sacrifice, dulled by some doubt of righteousness, the pain of some fear.

"Go!" uttered the old man, at last, in a voice so choked and harsh, so rasping and low as to make Hemingway's throat ache with a curious physical sympathy. "Go. You're trespassing here."

For Shubael he had but a gesture of one flailing arm, which paused to point insistently toward the path.

The girl moved to obey.

"You see," she said to Hemingway, with the wraith of a smile, "it was only a dream. I should never have opened my eyes. But I'll remember."

She swung up the pathway with the lithe spring of young hickory.

"Find Elijah!" the old man called after her. "I've been looking for him. He left his corn plow over an hour ago."

The girl vanished, without looking back.

Hemingway felt suddenly chilled in his wet clothing. The valley, at first so vocal with friendliness and peace, seemed silent now with some sullen enmity. The old man stood, menacing, before him.

"I'm afraid you don't quite understand, sir," began Hemingway, mildly, yet with the imminence of anger in his voice. "She had a bad fall." He pointed to the broken balcony. "She might have drowned."

A harsh judgment parted the lips of the owlish giant.

"Not likely—too good a swimmer; but might have been better if she had," he muttered, though Hemingway saw in his eyes an expression of pitying terror, seeming to soften this violence of word.

Abruptly the man's manner changed. He became querulously old. At his feet was a mixed tribe of young weeds. He kicked at them savagely. Hemingway saw goosefoot, milkweed, vervain, wild Bergamot, still others, yield to this attack.

"Weeds!" whimpered the old man. "The curse of God. And all women, too. They are weeds. She is one—Shubael. Going the way of her mother. Poison ivy. It clings wantonly and leaves torture."

His coarse hands assisted, now, in the work of destruction. He grasped whole clusters of nodding poppies.

"And these—something new," he went on. "I can't remember anything like them. They weren't here when I was a boy. But every year brings a new weed—another trespasser. They come down stream—down the river."

He stopped sharply, as at some unwholesome recollection.

"These," explained Hemingway, holding a red chalice to his lips, "are French field poppies."

A NEW hardness came into the old man's eyes. His body straightened, became vengefully tense.

"French!" he repeated, in a tone of startled and terrifying repression. His arms began, once more, their flailing.

"Go!" he said, before returning completely to the grotesque silence of moving lips and livid countenance. "Weeds . . . trespassers . . . all weeds!"

Hemingway, indeed, had no desire to stay. The place had become somber, not solely with evening shadows. The dove, now, was silent; even the mockery of a catbird had ceased..

"Very well; good-by, sir," he said, and went down with a feeling of relief, toward the tethered flatboat.

Beyond the scarred corner of the mill he stopped, abruptly. Bending over the bow of the boat, from an insecure perch upon a root of the cottonwood, was a man of sharp, hawk nosed profile, lean and ungainly angular. With prehensile, gnarled fingers this ghoulish visitor tugged, speculatively, at a small padlock securing the lid of Hemingway's locker.

Conscious, no doubt, that he was under observation, the man started up, wetting a foot in his sudden maneuver. He regarded Hemingway with leering, defiant embarrassment. This he masked, after an instant of recovery, with a burst of laughter, high, immoderate; Hemingway was in the mood to call it demoniacal. It was nasal, equine, a whinny of sound.

"Kind of caught me, didn't you?" remarked the unwholesome creature. Hemingway saw that his eye was lewd, sly, balefully humorous. Was this Elijah of whom the old man appeared to be in search?

"I hate a thing that's locked—makes me kind of mad."

The meddler seemed to be in some anxiety to explain.

"Not that I want what's in it. I wouldn't take nothin'. But there's mystery—that's what it is about a box, I guess. I've always got to see what's inside. I'd have busted the lock, probably, if you hadn't come along."

Hemingway made no reply. He hurried with his business of embarcation.

"Doesn't draw much, does she? Lookslike she'd sail in a heavy dew."

The man spat a drool of tobacco, by way of indication, toward the flatboat. Whinnying with laughter, he shook at his own humor.

When the boat drifted free with the shallow current, Hemingway turned his eyes once more for a glimpse of the old mill. His observer saw, and chuckled.

"I watched you two, up there. Mighty purty."

The tenor of his speech changed; there was in it something between threatening and a warning.

"But let me tell you, son—don't be playing with that puss. There was a feller like you here once, after her mother. And where is he now? Ask the river, son—you jest ask the river out there!"

And Hemingway heard again an echoed outburst of derision. An owl, awake to the quick evening of the ravine, answered.

To Hemingway, it seemed, eyes were peering at him, everywhere, in the dank valley.

ACROSS the river there was sand and an open beach. Hemingway had intended to go on, perhaps to the companionable lights of some village, but the bleak house on the bluff, when he was sufficiently distant from the ravine to see it once more, held him with a force greater than its repulsion. The light would last, here, till he had moored for the night, raised his tent, and cooked a small supper. He would need a fire to dry his sodden clothing.

This, he told himself, piling twigs against a bowlder, was curious holidaying. That is, he had been on a holiday; it seemed, now, that he was upon a quest. Unexpected responsibility had intruded upon an indolent excursion. There was that mystery across the river; the girl—that flower springing from a sinister soil.

To Hemingway, indeed, his lone voyage—whimsically undertaken—appeared to have reached an end, though it had had no goal, no destination.

But this was done. There was the girl to be considered.

Imagination sketched for him the imprint of her round arm across his neck; memory stirred into vivid outline the waxen, wet face against his shoulder.

Should he have acquiesced so meekly to her father's inhospitality? But violence, he reflected, would have been fruitless, at the moment. It was better to wait.

HE looked up at the stone house, while an egg sputtered in its skillet. Red reflection of sunset etched the farm buildings sharply against their bare setting. He imagined a girl's figure—the figure of Shubael—dim in the midst of a slate shadow; Shubael, watching for him, spying the glowing signal of his small fire, the dun mound of his tent.

A crackle of twigs and the rustle of bent underbrush startled him.

"Evening," greeted a prompt voice out of the twilight; a young man, Hemingway observed, in a brier torn shirt—hardly more than a boy.

"Ain't seen anything of a cow, with maybe a calf?"

Hemingway had not, but the boy approached, sat down, and watched amiably the consummation of supper.

"They're queer," he resumed. "Cows, I mean. Always hide out somewheres when they're ready to calf. We found one way below here, last year, in the flats."

Hemingway offered the boy food, and presently questioned him about the house across the river.

"Old Jed's place—Jed Harlan," the boy answered. "Been over there?" He's a queer one. Not crazy, exactly—just queer. And strong as an ox. I've seen him throw a horse to bridle him. Sure! Wrap his arm right around the horse's neck and kick his feet out from under him. But he's queer in a lot of ways. On account of his wife, I suppose, and that Frenchman."

The boy finished a banana, then lay back upon the sand. Evidently he would be loquacious, and Hemingway was careful to avoid interruption.

"But you've never heard anything about that, I s'pose? She was a fine woman, Ma says; younger than Jed, and good looking. But she ran away—with that foreigner. Lebaire, they called him. He came down the river in a canoe—something like you, I guess. It was bad weather, and he stayed over a few days in the old mill."

"Just what I was going to do," mused Hemingway. But the boy's speech ran on:

"He was a funny one—they were all queer. Nobody ever knew just what he was up to. Kind of silky, like. He'd come down from somewhere up the St. Croix. And he had a chest with him. Somebody started a rumor, down at the Crossing, that it was full of money. A lot of people believed it. They said he was a Canadian farmer, who'd sold out and was going south to New Orleans. But I dunno. Box is still over there, in the mill, just like it was when he left."

"Empty?"

"Empty as sucked eggs. Us kids used to play a game on account of it. We called it Frenchman's chest. That was quite a while ago, you see. I don't remember much about it. But I know there was a bad storm—it blew down our barn. And the next day we heard Jed's wife had run away that night, in the canoe, with the Frenchman. Lije—that's Tobin, Jed's hired man—found the canoe a mile or two down stream. He allowed they'd probably been drowned. But dad says you can't tell. It was mighty queer."

Hemingway began to fear that in this recital there would be nothing about the girl, and it was of her that he wished particularly to hear. He mentioned her, casually, and was startled, irritated, at the boy's sudden laughter.

"Pigweed!" exclaimed the youngster, sitting up and slapping his knees. "That's what we called her. You see, we were neighbors, on that side, when I was a kid. She went to our school. She's got a real name, out of the Bible, on account of Jed being so religious. But I guess he's not so pious as he was. He hasn't been to church since his wife left him. I guess that made him hate women. He calls 'em weeds. And I s'pose that's how we got the idea for the nickname."

The boy looked at Hemingway appraisingly.

"Say," he resumed. "You ain't gone on her, like all the rest? Because it's no use. She won't have any one. It's on account of her mother. Old Jed's made her promise never to marry. He says that's the only way to stop weeds—don't let 'em seed."

Hemingway dealt swiftly with his cooking kit, to hide the curious agitation that assailed him at the brutality of this fact, and the naked manner of its telling.

"But, say," resumed the boy, "I wouldn't bother about that, if I wanted her—which I don't. She's three years older than me. But if I wanted her, I'd look out for Lije. I don't like him. Nobody does. He's a weasel. I've heard him talking down at the Crossing. He's always said he'd marry Pigweed when the right time came."

The boy went away presently, stumbling through a pathway snarled with forest growth. A fragment of moon stood over the stone house, and there was a faint ripple of sound from the river. Hemingway listened to the drowsy chorusing of frogs.

Shubael—Venetia—Pigweed. What tragi-comedy was in that constellation of names! And there was more, still, of pathos concerning her, culled from the boy's young garrulity. She was alone, in that house, with those strange men. She cooked for them, served them. She moped, the boy said, in the old mill; swam, sometimes, in the mill pond. She was rarely seen, now, in the village. But she read books, he had heard; she had read "all the poetry in the world."

HEMINGWAY roused himself from the narcotic of his imagination. He had been sitting, oblivious of mosquitoes, too late amid his reveries. The cold touch of river damp was upon him, and the moon was high. After all, he reflected, moving toward the tent, he had not come down the Mississippi upon any such quixotic errand as playing knight errant to the daughter of wanton and madman.

He yawned, reaching for an opening in the mesh of his net. At most he must think only of taking her away, by means of some persuasion with her father, to a more hopeful opportunity for life.

Unless, of course, there was some hideous error in all this. Mystery distorted things. Perhaps, when everything was clear—— But Hemingway deliberately stemmed a seductive current in his thoughts.

The air was humid and unstirring. Southwestward the sky was heavy with promise of rain, a prediction affirmed by the moon's polychrome collar. But there was still a pathway of glitter upon the smooth river, and into this lane of light, as he looked, came a moving object. He watched it drift on into blackness. A deadhead, he thought; yet he was certain that its movement had been across, not with the current.

Hemingway dropped the mosquito net and went down to the edge of the water, listening. Above the rippling murmur of the river—he was sure of it now—there was a sound of swimming.

Shubael?

The thought lent swiftness to his fingers as he unmoored the boat. Disdaining Hercules, he rowed breathlessly, pausing at intervals to catch his bearings. He shouted, and a faint cry answered him.

Shubael, indeed! But further away, now, downstream. She had not sufficiently allowed for the strong sweep of current. The path of moon disclosed her once more, and he followed, panting at the oars, until he could reach her, pull her, exhausted, over the bow.

She did not speak until the boat had nosed shore, and Hemingway had helped her, half carried her, toward the smoking ashes of his fire. He felt against him once more her wet body, resistless, wordlessly entreating protection. Was she to come to him, always, a drenched flower, gasping from some dramatic immersion?

"Elijah!" she whispered, shudderingly. "He'll follow. He——"

She sobbed; caught her breath, then began speaking calmly.

"He said tonight it would have to be tomorrow, or he'd tell. He wouldn't wait any longer."

Hemingway could only guess, through this incoherence, her meaning.

She clutched his arm, fiercely, trying to see his eyes.

"You'll save me? You'll save me from Lije! Take me away—anywhere. I'd go—with you. Maybe it's wrong, but I thought you'd know what to do about me. I want to be where there are women. I'm so alone!"

Her hands covered her face, and she trembled with reaction from the violence of her physical effort. He saw that, except for shoes, she had been swimming fully clothed. The skirt, fortunately, was short, its width ample.

Hemingway looked out over the river. His eyes were upon the silver lane through which a pursuer must come. An inky silhouette entered it; vanished as had the figure of the girl.

"Go into the tent," he said to Shubael. "And don't be afraid."

He felt her shiver as he touched her, urging her forward.

"You'll find a towel, and some dry clothes—mine, of course, but they'll do. You'd catch cold, in these. Hang your wet things outside, on the tent rope, and I'll build up the fire to dry them."

He was like a great owl peering from behind the crown of a young sapling. "It's father!" whispered Shubael.

She hesitated; sighed, as if conscious of security; then moved away, obediently.

"If you hear anything—if you hear voices," he added, "don't be frightened. Just keep quiet."

She stooped to enter the tent, and he moved away toward the shore. There would be time enough for the fire after dealing with Elijah.

HE could hear the splash of a paddle, now, and the sound of a clumsy handle against the gunwale of a canoe. Distastefully, he brought forth the weapon that had been with him in France; inserted a clip of cartridges. He sat down under the deeper shadow of an elm, upon a freshet-bared root. When the canoe grounded, he spoke:

"You needn't step out, Tobin. Stay where you are. I want to talk to you."

The man's lewd, immoderate laughter answered him.

"Hell!" he said, with an expectoration, "I knew she'd be here. And if you know what's healthy for you, young man, you'll hand her over."

Hemingway caused his weapon to emit a series of suggestive, unmistakable sounds.

"You're an excellent mark," he said, "against that glitter of moonlight. Something, out of all I've got here, would be certain to hit you, even in the dark."

An appfehensive drawl came into the voice of the man in the canoe.

"Now, son, you look here. There's no call for violence. Trouble is, you don't rightly understand. You don't want that girl—don't want anything to do with her—an' you'll think so yourself when I tell you. Her father's a murderer, that's it. Killed his wife and her lover, in cold blood. She knows, and I know, and old Jed knows. But the rest of the world don't—not yet."

A smarting sense of conviction assailed Hemingway. The tale was plausible enough. There had been a suspicion of it in his own mind.

"But I've been told," he said, "that they were drowned—Mrs. Harlan and the Frenchman; that you said so, yourself."

"Drown-ded, hell! And why shouldn't I say so? I didn't want to give the old man away—not then. But let me tell you, son, I was there. I saw what happened. I'll just let you have it—since you seem so mighty interested in what hadn't ought to concern you. He'd been away all day—old Jed—down to the village. Little Shuby was with him. And when they come home, for supper, the house was empty. Of course, Jed suspected what was up. I knew he'd been gettin' crazy jealous. And he was right in thinkin' they'd try to get away by the river. I followed him down, from the barn to the old mill where the Frenchman bunked. He was a sickly crittur, this man Lebaire, and Mrs. Harlan had been taking grub to him. To pay for it, sort of, he'd been digging up the ground down there, in front of the mill, to make her a flower garden. Somehow, up on the bluff, things wouldn't grow right.

"Well, old Jed didn't find 'em, of course. It was mighty dark, and Jed hadn't stopped to bring a lantern. But it was comin' on to rain, and every few minutes there was a flash of lightnin'. That's how Jed happened to see 'em, out in the canoe, beyond the mouth of the creek. He waited for another flash, and shot. I heard a scream. An' when the next flash come, he shot again. Then they was gone. It was an old Civil war rifle he had, but it could shoot, if you'd happen to ask me. I found the canoe, next morning—this one right here. Still good as new except for the hole he shot in it, and I've patched that up.

"That's what happened to 'em, son—that's the way they come to be drown-ded, as you call it."

Hemingway had harbored a quiet rage throughout the length of this recital. Though the tale held plausibility, it left him stubbornly unconvinced.

"So now," he commented, "you're making capital of what you know; a sort of blackmail to force the girl to marry you."

"Why, that's no purty way to put it, son. Old Jed won't live forever. This business has aged him. He's got a good farm over there, if it's worked right. And there ain't a relative, that I know of, to take care of little Shuby."

Hemingway considered for a moment. An idea had taken root among his doubts.

"See here, Lije," he said sharply. "You'd hate to tell that story of yours to a sheriff, wouldn't you? It wouldn't sound well, after all these years. There might be a lot of questions. I can think of one that ought to have been asked. What about that box—the chest of money?"

Elijah's cackle of laughter rose like the cry of a loon.

"Why, hell, son, so you've heard about that? It was the only funny thing about the whole situation. There wasn't any money in that box. It was full of dirt, just plain sandy loam. I told you the Frenchman was queer. He'd brought it with him from France. I opened the box, of course—old Jed wouldn't touch it. There was a paper—a kind of will. Seems he'd had some trouble over in France—had to leave home. He knew he couldn't ever go back. But just the same he wanted to be buried in French soil. You see the point, don't you?"

Hemingway, indeed, perceived that, and more. The poppies were explained for him now. How else could they have come to this far corner of the world than in French soil, pregnant with their seed? No science was needed—it was layman's knowledge that earth's arable covering teemed with life, seemingly indestructible, waiting for a moment that should be propitious for emergence.

"And what did you do with it?"

He spoke quietly, to conceal the motive of his questioning.

"Do? Why, I figured it was only decent to respect his wishes, even if he was a sboundrel. Most any one would have done the same."

"You buried him in his soil?"

Hemingway observed a sharp movement in the canoe, noted irritation in the instant reply:

"Hell, no! Poured it into the river, after him, of course."

"Ah. You know, Lije, there's something queer about that. You must have spilled some of the dirt—when you were carrying it down to the river, I suppose. He hadn't planted anything, had he—the Frenchman?"

"No. Old Jed was bringing flower seeds from the village the day they skipped. Lebaire had just been spading up, ready for 'em. Why?"

"Well, you see, I know something about plant life. And those are French field poppies, growing there in front of the mill, in the Frenchman's garden."

HEMINGWAY heard a sound from the canoe, vaguely indicative of some disturbance on the part of its occupant. From this his theory gained assurance. Possibly it was absurd, he told himself, but it was a talking point, and he would make the most of it.

"Why, yes, Lije," he resumed. "You must have spilled some of that dirt. It's the only way I know of for those poppies to have got started in such a place. They're not common to America. In fact, I've never seen them before on this side of the Atlantic."

The answer was but a sullen silence, and Hemingway pressed home his insinuation.

"You know, Lije, there's something suggestive to me about those poppies. I've seen plenty of others like them growing over there in France, on soldiers' graves. I could even imagine them, sometimes, blooming on my own grave. Maybe it's only sentiment, but when I saw those red blossoms this afternoon that's what I thought of—graves. They're like telltale blood coming up—murdered blood. I'd root them out, if I were you. I'm superstitious, I'll admit. They'd be like the ghost of that Frenchman to me. Why don't you dig them up, if only for the old man's sake? He hates all sorts of weeds."

The other's silence was broken by words half of conviction, half scoffing.

"I will, some day, mebbe. Old Jed's always at me to mow weeds. But, see here, son, the thing that's bothering me now is what you're going to do about that girl. Can't you see reason? It ain't right for you to be goin' off with a young female like that."

The tone was milder, more conciliating.

"I'll take care of her, Lije. You needn't worry. Time you were losing interest in her, anyway, since she won't have you. All you can do now is to tell your story—have your revenge. I suppose you'll send poor old Mr. Harlan to jail. Only there's one thing I wouldn't mention, if I were you. I wouldn't speak of that box, or of the poppies. Some one else might get the same queer notion I've got. Some inquisitive sheriff might take it into his head to do a lot of unnecessary digging around the old mill."

Elijah's laugh rose again, with high and simulated bravado.

"Can't say as I exactly understand you, son. You ain't hintin' anything particular, are you? But it don't matter. You'll see your mistake about that—and about the girl, too. I'll be goin', if it's all the same to you. But I ought to remark, in sweet farewell, that old Jed's still got his rifle. And I guess he can shoot as good as he used to."

The canoe moved out from the shore, and Hemingway watched without offering objection until its opaque outline was swallowed in deeper shadow. The moon was gone. He waited, cautioning himself against some treachery, but was reassured by an echo of Lije's loonlike mockery floating across to him from the entrance of the ravine. Then he arose, relieved, filled with a quiet exultation.

A bank of cloud had risen in the west. Faint gleamings of lightning defined at moments its blue, cumulus crest. The sky was thick, the air oppressive. There was expectancy among the trees—the hush that precedes storm.

Hemingway went toward the tent, felt with a curious sense of abashment the wet garments hanging there; knew from this the girl's utter confidence.

He spoke to her softly.

"Shubael!"

Her answer was eager, swift as his word.

"Try to sleep," he said. "Lije has gone. He won't trouble you. I'll dry your clothes now and put them here in the locker. You can reach that in the morning without leaving the tent."

"Yes," she murmured, "I'll try. You——" Her voice caught, tearfully, upon the the phrase, "You're so wonderful!"

She did not, he saw, question his disposition of affairs. Doubtless she assumed that by morning, under his chivalrous touch, all things would be, for her, satisfactorily altered. As for Hemingway, he had not such assurance over the magic his interference might achieve. Concerning this he must have time in which to think.

Twigs, gathered for morning, were soon ablaze, giving him light for collecting others. Carefully he hung the orange gingham upon a pair of stakes; did likewise with stockings, with pink minutiæ.

HEMINGWAY drowsed at his task, which must be completed before the storm; yet he had no wish to sleep. Watch must be kept, and there was the plan that was obliged to be conceived.

An hour passed, two. Wind and rain were sullenly imminent. Lightning streamed through the sky, exposing at intervals the gaunt house on the bluff.

Hemingway took from his locker a raincoat and left in its place the girl's carefully folded clothing. The coat and a broad leafed basswood must be his shelter.

There was an abrupt sigh among the trees, then a shrill chatter of leaves. A cold wind rushed from the river, and with it presently a dash of huge drops. The wind grew into a fury. Under lashing blue light and catastrophic thunder there was an instant of sharp clarity, then the world was blotted out in a charge of rain.

Hemingway dripped, in satisfactory discomfort. He remained with bravado beneath his basswood, though he knew that to claim shelter of a tree in the midst of a thunderstorm was but provocation of electric death.

Suddenly as it had begun, the rain ceased. Hemingway stirred from his retreat, and his eye was caught by a yellow glow across the river, a color alien to the static glitter of the storm. As nearly as he could tell, it came from the ravine. The mill, was his swift conclusion, had been struck by lightning.

Yet there was another suggestion in the antenna of his mind, the fruit of slow growing supposition. Elijah! If guilt was in the man, he would be there, and he, not lightning, the author of this phenomenon.

To adventure forth in the darkness had not, until now, appealed strongly to Hemingway, though he had considered it as a means of testing his theory concerning the vanishment of Mrs. Harlan and the Frenchman; but the burning mill, he saw, would be as a lighted torch. If the fire was Elijah's, he would not be too late, perhaps, to find what it was that the man wished either to conceal or to destroy; if an accident of nature, it would at least give opportunity for certain research of his own. With satisfaction he recalled that among the implements of his kit there was a spade for digging gutters about his tent.

He listened beside the tent, but there was no sound from Shubael. Then he went down to the boat, loosed the moorings, and pushed out across the river.

Flames emerged above the trees and covered the river with angry glare. Hemingway pulled swiftly toward the ravine. He found the mill stream running noisily in flood and was obliged to tie the boat above its mouth.

The flames were tremendous, exultant, sucking the last remnant of life from worn, desiccated timbers. Each detail of the scene seemed etched more clearly than by day. Yet it was a matter of moments before Hemingway observed all that was to be seen, the tableau of quenched violence that lay before him. A mound of fresh earth, rain washed, rose beside the mill door; and across the edge of it was sprawled a human body.

Hemingway thrust forward through clinging, wet weeds, into the blaze of light. Heat smote him, suffocatingly, as he neared the building. Shielding his face, he bent toward the body; saw with a chill of shock not one, but two—Jed Harlan, this one atop, crushing into fresh mud, with great torso and arms, the slighter figure of Elijah.

He touched them hesitatingly; then with an effort pulled them apart. Lije Tobin, he saw, was ominously inert, but from the livid mouth of Jedediah burst a moan of pain. There was blood upon the old man's throat, a clotting ooze of it from a great muddied gash. Hemingway picked up, from beneath his feet, a spade, and knew it for the weapon that had inflicted this murderous wound. As for Elijah, there could be no doubt of the manner of his evident destruction. Old Jed's knotted hands still circled the scrawny neck, his fingers sunk deep into macerated flesh. Hemingway recalled the boy's words—Jed was strong as an ox; had thrown a horse when the beast resisted bridling.

Loose clapboards began to blaze beside him, warning Hemingway to haste. He must remove the relics of this scene of violence. When he had half carried, half dragged the two bodies beyond the fierce radius of heat and falling embers, he returned to a moment's scrutiny of the shallow trench. Beside it, he discovered, was a box, bound with corroded brass and encased in shreds of rotting leather; a curious box—foreign, he concluded. To its cylindrical lid still clung a broken, rusted padlock. At the door of the mill was a gasoline

THE BALE

From the maelstrom of the docks the eyes of a girl sent their desperate message to the boy in the sail loft window—a stirring Blue Ribbon short story

By Kenneth Payson Kempton

The Golden Beast by E. Phillips Oppenheim

It struck Judith that he did not seem altogether pleased to see her.

HOW THE STORY STARTED.

ISRAEL FERNHAM, first Lord Honerton, entertains at dinner at his country house preliminary to a shooting party. His youngest son, Cecil, is called from the dining room by a message from Heggs, head gamekeeper. Young Cecil had seduced Heggs' daughter. The old man throws Cecil to the stone floor, killing him. Through Lord Honerton's vast influence, Heggs is hanged. Heggs' daughter, MARGARET, curses Lord Honerton and all the Fernhams. Lord Honerton dies and is succeeded by JOSEPH FERNHAM, second Lord Honerton. Thirty years later Joseph entertains a party of friends in the same dining room; the occasion is the same, the dinner preceding a shooting meet. During dinner Lord Honerton's youngest son, ERNEST, is summoned to the gunroom by the head gamekeeper and vanishes. Lord Fernham goes through with the next day's hunting, and in the fields LORD FREDDIE AMBERLEYS attempts to propose to Lord Fernham's beautiful daughter, JUDITH, but she puts him off. That evening as Inspector Rodes questions Judith she answers the phone and hears Ernest's voice, then the wire goes dead. Inspector Rodes tells the chief of Scotland Yard he believes some weird scientific agency may be responsible for Ernest's disappearance. Rodes meets Lady Judith on the street and she suggests that he try to link Ernest's case with the hanging of Heggs thirty years before. Prince Edgar visits the Honerton plant with Lady Judith and Freddie. There SIR LAWRENCE PAULE, the mysterious young chief chemist, piques Judith when he refuses to let them see his private room in the laboratory. Judith later tells her father she wants Paule to dine at their manor—because she dislikes him, she says.

INSTALLMENT IV.

The Lucky Man.

JUDITH wandered into the house, across the great hall, cool and flower scented, and made her way to the back premises. She walked with a little shiver down the stone flagged passage past the gunroom and through the heavy door at the end into the courtyard. A man in a gray knickerbocker suit was talking to one of the grooms. Something familiar in his tone attracted her notice, and she listened.

"I was told I could see over the house at any time in May or June," the visitor complained.

"So you can in the ordinary way, sir," the groom answered. "The trouble is the family have come down unexpected-like. If you care to go round to the front, though, and send your card in, very likely they'll give permission. There's no visitors."

Judith moved a step or two forward.

"How do you do, Mr. Rodes?" she said. "Can I help you in any way?"

Rodes removed his cap. It struck Judith that he did not seem altogether pleased to see her.

"Very kind of you, Lady Judith," he replied. "I'm holiday making near, and I had a fancy for seeing over the house."

The groom touched his hat, and departed.

"What do you want to see over the house for?" Judith asked, lowering her voice a little. "I should think you know every inch of it."

The inspector smiled.

"Well, your ladyship's not far off right," he admitted. "I'm like the moth, though. I can't keep away from the candle. All that I really wanted to do was to walk from the gunroom once more along the passage and down the back drive as far as the gate."

"Great minds think together, Mr. Rodes," she observed. "I was just about to do the same thing myself. Come back with me and we'll start from the gunroom."

She retraced her steps, and Rodes followed her. The gunroom was locked, but the key was speedily forthcoming. It was a rude sort of apartment with few appointments, except a case at one end of the room in which were half a dozen guns and a couple of sporting rifles. Nearly the whole of one wall was taken up by a map of the estate, showing the different spinneys and coverts. There was nothing to look at; very little, it seemed, to think about, yet Rodes, for a few minutes, went into what was apparently a brown study as he stood on the stone flags in the center of the room, leaning against the rude deal table, his eyes fixed reflectively upon the map, while Judith, standing upon the threshold, waited with carefully veiled impatience. In course of time Rodes, with a farewell glance around the room, moved toward the door, passed through it down the flagged passage, crossed the courtyard, and turned deliberately in the direction of the back drive, Judith remaining by his side. Together they walked to the gate and stood looking along the narrow track, from the cleared space in the wood where great piles of timber were still heaped, to where it curved between its high hedges toward the main road.

"Rough road for a motor car," Rodes observed.

Judith laughed softly.

"What a blow for Watson," she murmured, "after waiting all this time for some elucidating word."

He produced a pipe from his pocket, and, with a glance at her as though asking permission, commenced to fill it.

"You are a Watson of intelligence," he declared. "I am, alas, a detective in real life, and infallibility is not my heritage. You know just where I am—dazed, bewildered, at my wits' end, if you like. I can't simply write this case down as one of my failures and go on with something else. They wouldn't tolerate it at the Yard, for one thing. So here I am, and you probably know why."

"I think I know," she admitted.

"I AM trying to break away from the logic of facts," he announced, "to abandon the search for clews, to use what little imagination I have been granted, instead of such skill as I may have acquired. That is what you meant when I saw you at the corner of St. James street, wasn't it?"

"Precisely," she assented.

"Very well, then," he continued, "we must neglect facts and probabilities, ignore the young man's wealth and apparent content. We will say he wilfully and deliberately chose to disappear. Don't say impossible, because according to all the facts of the case everything else is also impossible."

"I am waiting," Judith said quietly.

"Middleton, the keeper, stopped for a few minutes, as was perfectly natural, in the butler's pantry—the butler's pantry or the housekeeper's room, I forget which—but he would naturally accept some slight hospitality and discuss the morrow's sport before he left. Ernest walks calmly down this passage, crosses the courtyard unseen, and proceeds along this back drive. If he were in any way the subject of coercion, he would no doubt have been transported into a closed car which would have been waiting in this road, rough though it is. If, on the other hand, he was bent on a voluntary expedition, can't you see what he would do? He would cross the lane, cross that stile opposite, cross that single triangular meadow, and find himself on the main road—the main road, that is to say, from Norwich to London. The road into which the lane leads is, as, of course, you know, a good and a much traveled road from Fakenham to Holt, but it does not bisect the London road for another three miles. Having soared a little into fancy to bridge over a gap, I will now come down to realities. The great bulk of our police inquiries were directed toward the possible existence of a closed car upon the Fakenham road, or any sort of a vehicle which might conceal the results of an abduction. Now I am going on a different thesis. I have a little two seater in the village, and I am going to motor slowly up to London from the other side of that meadow, probably taking about a week on the journey. I shall make inquiries at every place I pass, but inquiries based upon a different idea. I shall inquire about a two seated car, or at any rate an open one, containing a young man and probably an older one who were apparently in no hurry and who were on the best of terms. If I fail again, I shall return here and work toward Norwich."

There was a long silence. Rodes, apparently, was occupied in watching the upward curl of the thin line of blue smoke from his pipe. Judith, her elbows upon the top of the gate, and her face resting between the palms of her hands, was gazing steadfastly across the meadow. Presently there came an interruption. A bell from the stable yard commenced to ring out its noisy summons.

"For me," she explained. "That means visitors. I must go."

"Well?" he asked a little anxiously, for he was beginning to have a curious feeling, almost a superstition with regard to this beautiful young woman.

She hesitated.

"You have made a start," she admitted. "You have shown that you, too, have vision of a sort, but it seems to me—I don't know. I am terribly confused, myself—but it seems to me you'll have to wander even a little farther from the usual ways before the light comes."

She turned away and hurried down the drive with swift footsteps. Rodes, with his pipe burning between his fingers, looked after her contemplatively. A rabbit came out of his hole, and sat watching him a few yards away.

"What I should like to know," Rodes muttered, his eyes now fixed upon the rabbit, "is whether she suspects anything or whether she is just spooky."

The rabbit suddenly detected the odor of tobacco, and with a whisk of his tail disappeared. Rodes was left to face the problem alone.

AFTER all, the flag of proffered hospitality had not flown in vain from the parapets of Honerton Chase. Frederick Amberleys with his two sisters and a brother officer were waiting on the lawn when Judith returned. For the remainder of the day the atmosphere of horror which had chilled the household seemed lifted. There was tennis to the point of exhaustion, an adjournment to the swimming baths—one of the modern luxuries of the place—iced drinks, a car dispatched to Holt for clothes, and an improvised dinner party. Judith felt sincerely grateful to her suitor as they all sat outside under the cedar trees, drinking their coffee and watching the moon make its slow appearance over the dark fir spinneys.

"I am drifting into a mood," she warned him as he passed her cup. "It is dangerous."

"To you or to me?" he asked.

"To me directly, and to you indirectly," she replied. "I absolutely decline to be left alone with you this evening. See about some bridge at once, please."

"I shall do nothing of the sort," he declared. "You encourage me to hope that you will play up to your part as a heroine of romance and invite me to walk in the rose garden. What about it, Judith?"

"I certainly shall not," she assured him. "For one thing, it is far too obvious. There is one corner where the path drops and there is a great clump of those moss roses all mixed up with musk and verbena—a corner which you couldn't possibly pass without proposing to me."

"Please," he begged, holding out his hand.

She looked at him attentively, far too appraisingly for the moment and the circumstances. In the dim light he seemed to have lost something of that robustness, that almost animal vigor, only attractive at odd unworthy times, as a rule repellant to her more critical instincts. His face even seemed to have gained that touch of spirituality which she had often looked for in vain. His eyes were pleading, his manner anxious. There was no doubt that he was much in earnest. Hesitatingly she placed her hand in his, and felt herself drawn to her feet by a gentle but invincible force.

"Frederick and I are going to have our usual half an hour's flirtation," she warned the others. "We shall be back for bridge directly. I don't know Capt. Vanderson's tastes, but you girls must look after him."

They passed across the lawn, through a postern gate, through the square walled garden into a smaller and less rigidly kept enclosure where the walls were even older and more crumbling and the genius of a gardener, who was also something of an artist, had permitted a certain amount of riot. There were borders of old fashioned flowers, whose perfume was pungent but sweet; a sort of heady background to the more exotic odor of the roses. Judith sighed as she laid her fingers upon her companion's coat sleeve.

"You don't know how grateful I am to you people for coming over this afternoon, Frederick," she confided. "It was an experiment coming down here, of course, and it was on the point of turning out a ghastly failure."

"I couldn't have kept away," he assured her. "It was so lucky we were at Holt for a week. The governor was laid up with gout and rather lonely, so we planned this visit late on Friday night. You must all come over and lunch with us tomorrow and we'll have some more tennis."

"It will be salvation," she murmured, "positively salvation!"

HE stole a glance at her, which was unwise of him, for her still, subtle beauty went at once to his head. He lost coherency.

"Judith," he said, "you'll have to marry me some day. Why not soon?"

"Why at all?" she asked him calmly. "I don't want to marry."

"But you must," he pleaded. "You can't go on living at home forever. You told me once you were afraid of losing your individuality. You're more likely to lose it in Park Lane than in Mayfair with me. And Judith—I've never been fond of any one like I am of you. I shouldn't expect to play the old fashioned sort of husband. You can develop in your own way, choose your own friends, strike out your own line in society or anywhere else—I shan't interfere. But I'm fonder of you, Judith, than I ever expected to be of any one in my life. Be kind to me, dear!"

She passed her arm through his.

"I want to be kind to you, Frederick," she said earnestly, "but think—O, do think. We're ever so different in many ways. There is my race."

"Dear, what does it matter?" he interrupted. "That sort of prejudice has gone long ago."

"Perhaps," she admitted. "And yet remember my people have their own peculiar characteristics. I have all the temperament, the mysticism, the moodiness of the Hebrew woman. Sometimes I think that if I had lived two thousand years ago I should have been a prophetess."

"I know," he acknowledged humbly. "Every one tells me that you have the makings of a great artist. Horthwaite says you could be a painter, and Mayer that the world has lost a great musician because you are the daughter of a millionaire. But, dearest, you can look over the edge of the world as often and as long as you like, blow your bubbles and build your house of dreams wherever you will, but when your feet are on the earth you must have a husband, and I want to be he."

"You're almost irresistible," she murmured.

"The greatest thing in me is what comes from you," he declared, "my love for you."

She suddenly paused and looked at him. His expression as he gazed at her was almost adoring. A gleam of the moonlight shone in her smooth black hair. The marble whiteness of her cheeks, the soft fire in her eyes, the tender scarlet of her lips, were all maddening. He took her suddenly into his arms, and she lifted her head a little. Her eyes sought his, tenderly, yet with a curious wistfulness.

"Kiss me, Frederick, please," she whispered; "then I will tell you."

The glamor of the night, the unearthliness of her beauty were his salvation. All that even savored of coarseness in his virility seemed to pass away. He held her to him with a strength restrained by an intense tenderness, the fire of an almost sublimated passion burning upon his lips. She lay in his arms, tense at first, but afterwards for a moment like a long stemmed beautiful flower which had just been plucked. Then without any warning she broke away. He heard a little sob, caught a glimpse of her—a streak of white through the bushes—and still inspiration rested with him. He stayed where he was amongst the roses—happy, victorious, contented.

THERE was bridge and billiards, much laughter, and the usual amount of chaff that evening, and it was midnight before the cars were brought round. Then Judith sought her opportunity. She kept Frederick back after the others had made their adieux and, with her arm through his, led him to her mother.

"Mother, dear," she announced, "I'm going to marry Frederick. Dad, do you hear? Come and shake hands with him. Now that you both know, the others can come back if they like."

For a single moment Rachel seemed to return from the far away world in which she had been living. She held out her hands, and Frederick stooped and kissed her forehead.

"Judith has made me very happy," he said.

"Well, well!" Joseph declared, pulling down his waistcoat vigorously. "Is Martin out there? Martin, send me some champagne and glasses. Never mind about the whiskies and sodas. Damn the gout! Amberleys—Frederick—shake hands. My congratulations!"

The others came streaming in, and Judith was surrounded. Her father stood on the outside of the little circle, his hands in his pockets, an air of immense satisfaction pervading his whole being.

"To tell you the truth, mother," he confided to his wife, "I was beginning to get just a little nervous about Judith—a trifle too exotic, she seemed sometimes, what? Unnatural almost! You know what I mean. Seemed positively to dislike the idea of marriage. When a girl has a brain like Judith's and gets that notion in her head, she sometimes ends by being a spinster. There have been two in our family already, God help them! Amberleys is a fine fellow, and—with Judith's money—well, it will give you something to think about, mother, eh?"

He looked anxiously down at her. It seemed to him the pain was creeping once more into her pallid face. Nevertheless, she took the glass of wine which Martin was handing, and smiled bravely up at her husband.

"We should be very happy about this, Joseph," she said. "We will drink to their future, you and I together. God has brought this to pass. He may yet save my heart from breaking."

She drained her glass and set it down empty. Everyone was talking noisily about the plans for tomorrow, and Joseph himself was being dragged into the council. Rachel stretched out her hand and took up the knitting which was always close to her side. Soon her fingers began to flash and the needles to gleam. She listened, apparently, to the conversation, with a smile of sympathy upon her lips. Her eyes, however, saw beyond the room. In spirit she had already passed from it, wandering restlessly across the world in that eternal search.

JUDITH, on the night of the dinner party in Park Lane, noticed her guest's slight hesitation after he had been announced, and, breaking off her conversation with Frederick Amberleys, stepped forward to meet him.

"You are looking for your hostess, I am sure Sir Lawrence," she said. "My mother has given up entertaining for the present, and I am her deputy. We are very glad to see you."

Sir Lawrence made his bow, and expressed his hope that Lady Honerton was not seriously indisposed.

"She is simply tired," Judith told him. "She finds the season a little long. Do you know everybody here?"

"Except Lord Amberleys, whom I think you brought with you to the works, no one," he replied.

Amberleys heard his name, and turned around. The two men exchanged greetings.

"I gather from an announcement in The Times the other day that I am to congratulate you, Lord Amberleys," the newcomer said. "May I at the same time take the opportunity of wishing you every happiness, Lady Judith," he added.

"Very nice of you," she replied, "but how can you expect me to be happy when I have a desire unsatisfied?"

"I can scarcely conceive such a possibility," he murmured.

"Not although you are responsible?" she reminded him, with a smile. "Don't you know you are one of the few people in the world who have refused a request of mine?"

He looked for a moment blank, then he remembered.

"Is that still rankling?" he asked.

"Horribly," she admitted.

Joseph came up a little fussily.

"Glad to see you, Sir Lawrence," he said. "First time you've honored us, I think—not that we shouldn't have asked you often enough if I'd had any idea you were a diner out. Judith, as usual, was the clever one of the family."

"So I have you to thank for my invitation," he remarked, turning to her. "I call that returning good for evil."

"The episode is not yet closed," she warned him.

It was a dinner party of twelve—a smaller number than usual—at Judith's express initiative. Sir Lawrence sat on her left hand, and Lord Clareton, an Irish peer and relative of Frederick's, on her right. Lady Clareton was on one side of her father—a most satisfactory dinner companion for him, as she never left off talking, hated even to pause for an answer to her stream of questions, and was blessed with a marvelous appetite. Mrs. Lola Reistmann, on his other side, was the wife of a famous musician, dark, languishing, and entirely engrossed in a flirtation with Henry Fernham, who was over on a week's leave from Paris to make the acquaintance of his sister's fiancé.

Then there was Reistmann himself, noisy, hungry, and witty, continually seeking for opportunities to talk to Judith across the table, Joyce Cloughton, one of Judith's few intimate acquaintances, and Sir Phillip Dane, a famous physician and medical adviser in ordinary to the family. It was a party of friends deliberately chosen by Judith after Paule's acceptance of her invitation, a party which was meant to give her considerable freedom with regard to the entertainment of this one particular guest. Everything had turned out as she had intended, but the enterprise had suddenly lost its savor. It was not that Paule had in any way disappointed her, nor that her almost passionate hope for the development of her affection for Frederick had been realized. She was conscious, for some unanalyzable reason, of a marked indisposition to cross the boundary of the light outposts of conversation which had seen her and her neighbor through the opening courses. She had realized from the moment of their meeting that her ordinary weapons would be useless against this man, and for the first time in her life she was inclined to shirk a combat of personalities. There was something almost saturnine in his easy indifference to the demands which courtesy made upon him. The woman on his left—Lady Dane, carefully chosen because she preferred her dinner to conversation—found him a most satisfactory companion. He paid her the attentions which civility demanded, and afterward left her alone. At Judith's silence he seemed a little puzzled. Indirectly he challenged it.

"I am still in disgrace, I fear," he suggested, "for preserving the secrets of my Bluebeard's chamber."

"If you realize the cause," she rejoined, "it is at least open to you to remove it."

"Ingenious," he murmured.

"Successful?" she queried.

He bowed.

"At any time," he assented, "when you come alone."

"Unchaperoned?" she exclaimed.

"Entirely."

"My fiancé?"

He shook his head.

"Inadmissible."

"The adventure is beginning to assume a new aspect," she declared. "Some one must have told you I had a flair for doing improper things."

"I needed no gossip to assure me you were in the habit of doing daring ones," he retorted.

"What risks shall I run if I come alone to your magic chamber?" she asked.

"If I were foolish enough to answer such a question," he pointed out, "the adventure would cease to be one."

"I am strongly tempted," she admitted.

"You stand the least chance of being blown up on Wednesday or Thursday," he said. "My housekeeper makes tea about four o'clock.'

"It all seems easy," she remarked. "Really, I needn't have taken the trouble to have you asked to dinner, need I?"

"Quite unnecessary," he assured her. "You might have spared me, too. I don't dine out twice a year like this."

"We are flattered," she murmured.

He suddenly turned and looked at her, and she was conscious that she had never been looked at in the same fashion before.

"Well, in a sense you ought to be," he said. "You are the only woman in the world whose invitation I should have accepted."

His words were deliberate, spoken without enthusiasm or fervor of any sort. Yet Judith knew they were the truth. She was aware of a sudden feeling of embarrassment, of a desire to withdraw from an unequal contest. She turned and began to talk restlessly to Lord Clareton. He brushed aside at once her tentative efforts toward conversation of a more conventional nature.

"I have just heard who your left hand neighbor is," he confided in an undertone. "Do you know he is one of the most remarkable men living?"

"Is he?" she replied, with an indifference which was perhaps a little overdone. "I know my father thinks highly of his work."

"I am not a scientific man myself," Lord Clareton continued, "but my nephew, Ronald, was at college with this fellow Paule, and he's never tired of talking about him. I remember him telling us, for instance, that Paule, before he went down, after having carried off every possible honor, declared that before he was forty he would have solved the problem of the genesis of the world and the indefinite prolongation of life. Pretty good for a lad of twenty-two or twenty-three."

"He hasn't done it, has he?" she remarked drily.

"He isn't forty yet," Lord Clareton reminded her. "He's done some wonderful things, though."

Judith leaned across the table, and exchanged amenities with Frederick. Then she turned once more to her left hand neighbor.

"I have been told," she confided, "that you are pledged to discover before you are forty the secret of the genesis of the world and the elixir of life."

"I shall probably do both," he replied, coolly. "I could prolong any reasonably healthy person's life about thirty years already, if it were worth while—it so seldom is."

"Could you prolong mine?" she asked.

"Easily," he assured her. "I could guarantee you a hundred years or so. You're much too sensible, though, to ask me to do it."

"Is that one of the problems you study in Bluebeard's chamber?" she inquired.

"Occasionally," he admitted. "Just now, however, I am engaged on something more interesting."

"I CAN'T imagine anything more interesting than prolonging my life," she declared.

He smiled at her, indulgently.

"You wouldn't really care for the aftermath of vital existence," he said.

"If your discovery were worth anything, it ought not to be an aftermath," she objected. "Why not devote your efforts also to keeping me young and beautiful?"

"You ask a great deal of science," he reminded her.

"I thought you were one of those," she rejoined, "who preached the doctrine that we are as yet only on the threshold of knowledge; that some of the planets are inhabited, for instance, by a race of beings infinitely more intelligent than we are, and that it is only because we are slothful that we have made so little progress."

"There is not the slightest doubt about that," he assured her. "As to the planets being inhabited, more than half the scientific men of the day have come to that conclusion."

"Then why don't we communicate with some of them?" she asked.

"We could easily," he replied. "It is simply a question of somebody with brains having time enough to spare to devise the instrument, or rather series of instruments. I'll give you the idea now, if you feel you'd like to devote yourself to it."

"Don't mock me," she reproved him. "If I am not a scientist, I at least have other qualities."

"So I understand," he acquiesced, with a faint note of irony in his tone. "A great musician, an artist, a tragedienne, and a poetess were all lost to the world, thanks to your father's amazing facility for doctoring the human race at a cost of a few millions."

"You are pleased to be sarcastic," she observed. "I can assure you all the same that I really have brains."

"You have done one thing which makes me doubt it," he answered bluntly.

She felt his eyes rest for a moment upon the ring on her finger. A spasm of anger brought the quick color to her cheeks, yet she never dreamed of resenting his speech in words. Already she recognized his domination, although she detested him for it. It was her environment, she told herself, and his position as guest which handicapped her so completely. Next time they met the tables should be turned. He was, after all, one of the easiest victims the world offers to its beautiful women—a man of science engrossed in his work, a semi-recluse, deaf to the ordinary calls of humanity. There had been a long list of such who had been her faithful slaves. There was no reason why this one should survive. By degrees she recovered her confidence, talking round the table to her friends and acquaintances, ignoring for a time her immediate neighbors. The dinner went brightly on to its appointed end. Judith, however, was conscious of a little sense of relief as she gained the shelter of the drawing room; she felt somehow that she had escaped from the proximity of danger.

"Tell me all about this wonderful guest of yours," Joyce Cloughton demanded, drawing her to one side. "You were rather a cat not to put me next to him. He's good looking, too, in a forbidding sort of way."

"My dear, you can have him for the rest of the evening," Judith promised. "He's a little taciturn, but when he does speak it's to the point, all right. He'll tell you how to live to a hundred, if you like, and before he's forty years old he's going to tell us how the world started, and how long it's going on."

"If he's said he would, he'll do it," Joyce declared. "He looks that sort of man."

"Bad tempered, I should think, and terribly domineering," Judith observed. "Half an hour of him makes one thankful for an ordinary person like Freddy."

"YOU'RE a lucky girl," Joyce sighed. "I've always thought Freddy Amberleys was one of the nicest young men about town. I can see I shall have to think seriously of your cousin, Sammy, after all. What are you going to do with us this evening, Judith?"

"Frederick and Sir Phillip Dane and Mrs. Reistmann and dad are going to play bridge. You and the others are going to play poker."

"And what about you?"

"I am going to entertain Sir Lawrence," Judith announced. "He does not play cards."

"I couldn't have kept away," he answered her.

Joyce whistled softly under her breath.

"Will Freddy quite approve?" she inquired.

"He won't be asked," Judith replied. "As a matter of fact, though, I arranged this party before it was settled between Freddy and myself. I can't back out of it now. I thought I wanted to talk to Sir Lawrence. I'm not quite so sure of it as I was."

"Better pass him on to me as you promised, dear," Joyce advised. "He's a dangerous type for an engaged girl. He wouldn't take me so seriously. No one does, for some reason or other. I should probably be able to lead him into the paths of a gentle flirtation. He would ask if he could give me a lift home—I suppose he has a car—and there ought to be at least a dinner and theater in it."

Judith shook her head.

"It's my last fling, Joyce," she said. "I think I'll have to see it through."

"I warn you Freddy's inclined to be jealous," her friend confided. "I saw him watching you from across the table once or twice this evening. In his way the chemist man is good looking, you know."

Judith glanced warningly toward the door. The sound of men's voices was already to be heard in the hall.

"You go and rescue Henry from the wiles of that Reistmann woman," Judith enjoined. "Don't interfere with me, and don't let the others try and drag me into bridge."

"As much in earnest as all that?" Joyce exclaimed with uplifted eyebrows.

Judith smiled. She was looking across the room at the little phalanx of white fronted men.

"I have a reason," she murmured.

AFFAIRS arranged themselves very much according to Judith's preconceived plan. She lingered until she saw the bridge party established and the chips being counted out for the poker, and then led Lawrence Paule across the white marble hall with its priceless rugs, through the little lounge into the billiard room beyond. One of the footmen who had been on duty in the hall hastened to turn up the lights and produce the balls.

"Will your ladyship require a marker?" he inquired, moving towards the board.

"Would you like some one to score?" she asked her prospective opponent.

"Score," he repeated vaguely. "Good heavens, no!"

She dismissed the man with a wave of the hand.

"You don't seriously propose to play this game, do you?" he demanded with a glance of aversion towards the table.

"Why, it was your own idea," she reminded him.

"I mentioned the billiard room as a refuge," he explained. "How could one talk with that babel going on? I have never played a game of billiards in my life. I suggest that divan, the window open—I am right, am I not, in believing that this room overlooks the park?—and the privilege of your conversation."

"I accept your suggestion willingly," she replied, establishing herself on the divan. "As a matter of fact, this is rather a favorite seat of mine. Can you manage the window? Thanks. Now we can sit here and try to imagine that the lights we see through the elm trees are will-o'-the-wisps and that those mysterious couples flitting about are in reality lovers."

"You forget you are committed to probably an hour's conversation with a person who is supposed to be devoid of all imagination whatever," he rejoined, throwing on one side a cushion and settling himself in his corner. "I am a chemist and a scientist. Exactitude as to detail has to be my guiding principle in life."

"The man who obtained first class honors in the mathematical tripos last year," she remarked, "told me his only advantage over his rivals was that he had a more plastic imagination."

"Ingenious but of doubtful veracity," he declared. "In my work if I possessed imagination I should go mad."

"What do you do in your Bluebeard's chamber?" she asked bluntly.

"Seek for understanding," he answered. "We are woefully short of it in the world."

"Supposing I really wanted to live to be a hundred, would you help me?"

"No," he replied. "The aftermath of your life would be miserable. The more I preserved your vigor, the more you would regret the extinction of your beauty."

Her dark eyes were for a moment lifted to his.

"You think I am beautiful, then?"

"I think you are without exception the most beautiful woman I have ever seen," was the deliberate response.

"The last thing I expected to collect from you," she murmured, after a moment's rather startled pause, "was a compliment."

"You haven't collected one," he answered. "You are extraordinarily beautiful—extraordinarily beautiful and amazingly alluring. I can assure you I am fully conscious of your charms."

"I shan't have to remind you that I am engaged to be married or anything of that sort, shall I?" she asked.

"You might, if you thought it worth while," he replied. "I am not in the least disposed to recognise the barbed wire."

She laughed quietly with half closed eyes.

"It seems to me I am running great risks," she said.

"The woman who wasn't disposed to run them is yet to be born," he retorted.

"How do you know anything about women?"

"Instinct," was the uncompromising rejoinder. "The same instinct which sometimes brings me safely across an absolutely untrodden field of thought."

"Does it ever mislead you?" she asked.

HIS slight pause gave her an opportunity to study his profile. He was apparently watching those shadowy figures passing backwards and forwards under the trees, his lips so closely set that there seemed to be but one thin dividing line where they met, his jaw, massive yet shapely; his chin firm; his eyes, deep set behind his heavy eyebrows, even in this moment of abstraction hard almost to steeliness. The prominent forehead and finely shaped head with its masses of clustering black hair seemed vaguely to remind her of some picture, something that came from the past. She found herself searching the recesses of her mind. It might have been in one of the smaller galleries at Madrid or Amsterdam that she had seen the original from which the likeness came.

"In life," he said, "I am one of those people who can not afford to make mistakes. If I should make one at all—and I am, after all, only an ordinary human being—crash would go the foundations upon which my career is built. For instance," he went on, a note of irony creeping into his tone, "supposing I give out a wrong formula for next week's preparation of 'Farnham's Malted Milk,' twenty thousand people would have a pain in their insides, and there would soon be a serious shrinking in your colossal dividends."

"What a pity," she sighed.

"A pity?"

"You have begun to talk nonsense. I was always afraid you would."

"One has to seize every loophole," he observed. "I am in a unique position. I don't know how to govern it. I am compelled to drift."

"Now you're talking enigmas," she complained. "You are really most unmanageable."

"Enigmas with a ready solution at the tip of my tongue," he replied. "I am talking for the first time in my life with a woman who counts."

"I like that better," she said meditatively.

"Candor, I see, appeals to you," he went on. "You will make a hideous mistake if you marry Lord Amberleys."

"Isn't that going a little far?" she warned him.

"Not at all," he rejoined, coolly. "It is so obviously the truth. The young man in question is one of a race and breed whom every one must admire. They are splendid young animals, gifted with a quite reasonable modicum of intelligence, and able to skirt round the outsides of most of the great subjects in life. Their inherited digestions allow them unlimited opportunities of indulging their appetites. They remain good natured and equable to the end of their days, and there are a precisely similar number of well brought up dozen young women who would make them excellent wives and produce at discretion wonderful counterparts for the next generation. You don't happen to be one of those young women. A union between you two would be ridiculous."

PIGWEED - - - - - - - - - - - - By Carroll K. Michener

can, and Hemingway lifted it, observed with surprise that it was completely filled.

RETURNING to Jedediah, he made certain, with an ear to his breast, that there was still a faint pulsation from the old man's heart. The wound, none the less, had the appearance of fatality. But while he hesitated as to what should be done, Jedediah's eyes opened, rested upon him; his huge hands contracted, spasmodically. Behind dulled vision his mind seemed struggling for remembrance. His gaze fell upon the inert figure beside him, and with a start of recollection he began speaking.

"Lije," he muttered. "The light woke me. . . . Crazy—to burn the mill like this."

"No," amended Hemingway. "He intended to burn it, Mr. Harlan, but the lightning was beforehand. He wasn't ready for it—hadn't quite finished what he'd come to do. There's the can, you see, still full of gasoline. That's what makes me think so. And probably he'd piled hay or dry brushwood inside the mill. Lightning could easily have fired that."

The old man seemed to comprehend; yet, when he resumed, there was vagueness in his speech.

"The spade—he was digging. Crazy, I tell you. He struck me—here."

His hands came tremblingly to his wound, recoiled, shudderingly, from it.

"Not crazy, Mr. Harlan," persisted Hemingway. "But he was a fiend, a murderer—there's no doubt of that. He killed your wife—killed Lebaire. He'd have killed you, too, for discovering his secret. Their bones are there, in that box. They've been lying in the ground, not in the river, all these years."

Hemingway went on, excitedly, hardly noting from the glazed, pained eyes before him if he was fully comprehended. He felt the need, at last, of uttering his theory—the supposition that had been gathering all evening in his botanical mind; the theory that had taken definite root during that hostile conference with Elijah across the river.

"You didn't honestly suppose your wife was unfaithful, did you, Mr. Harlan? I didn't know her, of course, but I don't believe it. This is what I think happened—I'm sure of it now. She came down here that night, as usual, to bring food to Lebaire. And found him dead, there, by the door, where he'd been spading up the ground to plant some flowers. You remember—weren't you bringing the seeds? Inside the mill, where Lebaire bunked, was Lije, breaking open the Frenchman's box. He thought it was full of money—he believed that ridiculous rumor. And to cover one crime he was obliged to commit another. He killed your wife. O, he was clever, Mr. Harlan. See! He buried them there, where the ground was already spaded up. Nobody would have suspected anything—he knew that. Then he thought about escape. He paddled away in the Frenchman's canoe. You shot—you remember. You shot in a flash of lightning. But it was not at a pair of escaping lovers. It was at Elijah in the canoe. You put it out of commission, and Lije had to think of a better plan. It was a better plan. He saw how things were. He believed you were jealous of Lebaire. He counted upon your drawing a hasty conclusion. So he returned. He came back and began waiting for your property—and for Shubael."

If there was much in this flow of words that escaped Hemingway's hearer, it was not so with the sound of his daughter's name.

"Shuby!" repeated Jedediah. "Poor Pigweed! She'll have no one now——"

His eyes met those of Hemingway and paused there significantly; gazed long, as if seeking for confidence, for comforting assurance.

"You'll have to excuse me—an old man—for what I said to you this afternoon. I've got to go—he's killed me. But you'll take care of her—of Pigweed? She's grown up wild—since her mother—her sainted——"

Jedediah paused, struggling for breath; but Hemingway pitied, more than his pain, a look of remorse in the old man's eyes—remorse for misjudgment of the woman whose vengeful murderer he had believed himself to be.

SLOWLY, Jedediah spoke again:

"You're a botanist, you told me. Maybe—maybe if you would put her in a garden——"

Hemingway nodded. The old man's confused implication—the testamentary character of this commitment—filled him with shy emotion. He was not in love with Shubael—hardly that. He did not believe in such facile attachment—in the abused formula of love at first sight. That belonged to the unrealism of conventional moving pictures or of a sentimental novel. But there was the probability that one day, when Shubael——

He roused himself from this revery. It seemed to him that Jed Harlan's wound must be fatal, yet he could not be sure. Everything that was possible ought to be done for him. He thought of the telephone—probably there would be one in the house on the bluff. He must try. It would be wise, at any rate, to find official witness for this night of death.

The light of the burning mill showed him the path staggering crazily up the hill.

When he returned he brought bandages and a bucket of clean water from the house. He bathed the wound in Jed's throat, saw that it lay deep, bled ominously. Then he sat down to await the coming of the Crossing doctor.

Jedediah had slipped once more into unconsciousness, and the old mill was but a skeleton of blackened framework feebly resisting the sated flames. Charred, smoking debris covered the "Frenchman's garden." The poppies were withered upon their stalks.

Doubtless, thought Hemingway, this had been Lije's calculation. The fire would have covered all trace of his digging, and the relics of his old crime, exhumed and consigned with that telltale box to the heart of the blazing building, would have been removed forever from possibility of accusing him before men.

Well, the poppies had done their work. They had been more than sentinels over an unknown grave; they had cried out, to merciful ears, the innocence of the Frenchman—and of the mother of Shubael.

The doctor came, shook his head, and with dawn rode away again to report upon his deaths.

Day peered in, awake, at the smouldering mill; and Hemingway, weary of his vigil, went down to greet it where noisy streamlet surrendered itself to the placid river.

Robins laughed among the elms. A breeze whipped diamonds from a flowering thistle. And across the river was a glint of orange. His heart leaped.

There was Pigweed! There was his golden poppy nodding to morning sun.

THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER

AN EGG-SHAPED TENNIS BALL, it seems, but the contortion is merely a tribute to the mighty power behind Manuel Alonzo's drive, and to the camera's speed. It's a perfect action picture of Spain's Davis cup star, taken during the recent Florida tournament. Alonzo was beaten at Miami by William T. Tilden, the American national champion.

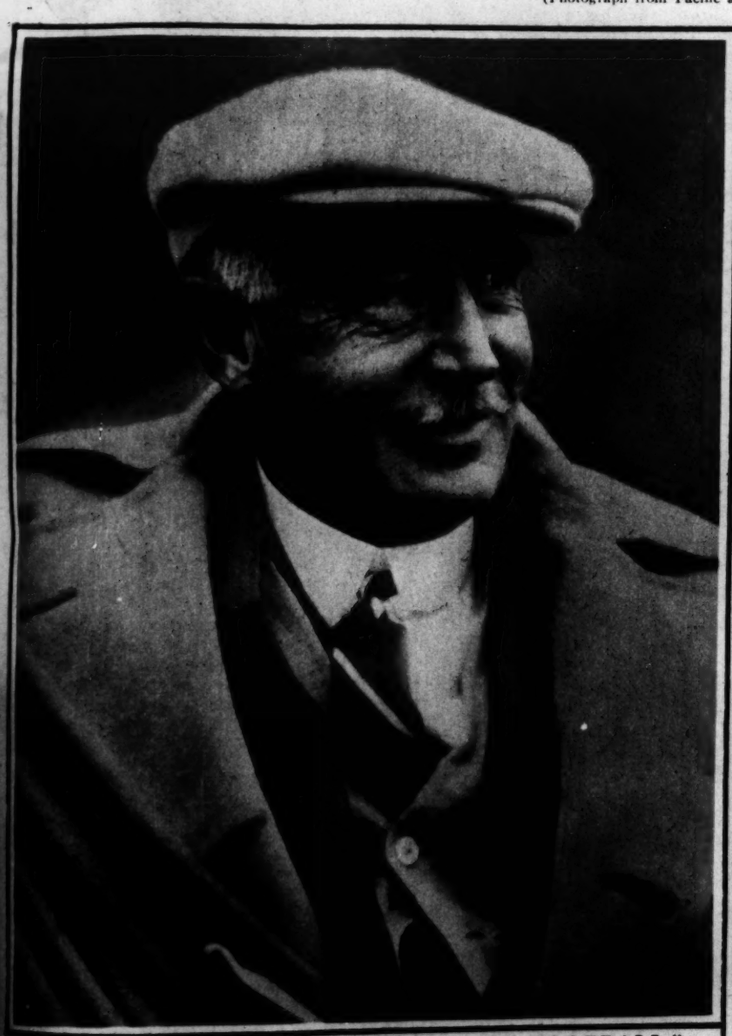
HIP, HIP, HOO-RAY!—that's the way to keep slim, says our Our Mary Garden as she sails for a long vacation at her villa in Monte Carlo. The idea being that an active interest in life is the one best bet for keeping a woman in perfect physical condition. Her own trim form is a dandy advertisement for the famous opera star's formula. (Photograph from Pacific and Atlantic.)

TOUR CANCELED BY ILLNESS—A recent picture of Ethel Barrymore, who was forced to end her engagement in Kansas City, where she was playing in "The Second Mrs. Tanqueray." She has returned to the east pending her return to health, attended by the good wishes of theatergoers everywhere.



WALTER CAMP, THE "FATHER OF FOOTBALL," dies in New York City, where he had gone to attend a conference of football officials. In college Mr. Camp was one of Yale's greatest backfield men. He played four years on the varsity baseball team, rowed on the crew, ran on the Blue track team, and played for Yale in the first intercollegiate tennis tournament. Afterwards he continued at New Haven as coach and advisor of Yale's football teams, becoming the outstanding figure in American football. Until the coming of Walter Eckersall in the west, the one "All-American" eleven that received general recognition throughout the country was the team picked by Mr. Camp. He was nearly 66 years old.

MAY McAVOY says:
There is a big difference in color between ordinarily cleaned teeth and Pepsodent-cleaned. Teeth simply must be clear to photograph white and cloudless. I use Pepsodent regularly in place of less modern methods. The difference is astonishing.

May McAvoy

HOW motion pictures' famous stars gain the gleaming, pearly teeth that make smiles worth fortunes—how you can clear your own teeth in the same way. A simple test that reveals the most amazing of tooth methods—a new method urged by leading dental authorities of the world.

RAMON NOVARRO says:
I never go on a set without first looking to my teeth. I've done this ever since I discovered Pepsodent. It removes that cloudy film, which, before strong lights and a camera shows up so unkindly.

Ramon Novarro

DULL teeth made bright and gleaming; cloudy, discolored teeth given new luster. These famous stars of the moving picture world now tell us how they gain them. You, too, can have them if you wish.

Smiles in the cinema world sell for thousands—that is, some smiles. Gleaming teeth are essential. Otherwise a smile can have no value. So these people follow the method here explained not only for the satisfaction and beauty they gain, but as a matter of cold business.

The amazing effect of removing the film which forms on teeth. Dull teeth, dingy and discolored. How they are made whiter, more appealing.

MAE MURRAY says:
Today Pepsodent is regarded as important as, if not more so, than, any other part of "make-up." How amazingly it acts, one never knows till using it after ordinary, old-fashioned methods!

Mae Murray

MARY PHILBIN says:
I learned long ago the ordinary cleansing methods won't keep teeth clear—that is, so as to photograph white. So, like everyone at the studios, I use Pepsodent many times daily. It is an essential part of my make-up.

Mary Philbin

THERE is a film on your teeth, a film that becomes discolored, that hides their natural luster. Under it is the tooth gleam and sheen that you envy in others.

You can't see it with your eyes, but run your tongue across your teeth and you will feel it . . . a slippery, viscous coating.

Now that film absorbs discolorations from food, from smoking, etc. And that is why your teeth look "off color" and dingy.

It is the principal cause of dull and dingy teeth. A principal cause, too, of most tooth and many gum troubles. No ordinary tooth paste can remove it. That is why, no matter how carefully you are caring for your teeth now, they remain dull and dingy.

* * *

It clings to teeth, gets into crevices and stays. It lays your gums open to bacterial attack. Germs by the millions breed in it. And they, with tartar, are a chief cause of pyorrhea and decay.

You can't have pretty teeth unless you combat it. Highest authorities all tell you this.

Remove that film and your teeth gleam. Your mirror tells a story that seems almost incredible. Having dingy teeth today simply rests with the individual. On every side you see wonderful, gleaming teeth. This new way is largely responsible.

Now, in as little as ten days, you can work a transformation in your mouth, can add immeasurably to your appearance and attractiveness.

Now modern science offers a new way that works wonders on your teeth

For years men of science have given their best in seeking an effective combatant of that film.

Brushing did not cope with it adequately. Gritty substances were discarded as dangerous to enamel. Numerous methods have been tested and found wanting.

Now modern dental science has found two new combatants and embodied them in the modern tooth paste called Pepsodent—a scientific method different in formula, action and effect from any other dentifrice.

* * *

Throughout the civilized world, leading dentists urge this new method.

To millions it has proved the folly of dull and dingy teeth. To millions it offers daily a better protection against pyorrhea, tooth troubles and decay.

It accomplishes two important things at once: Removes that film, then firms the gums.

If you want whiter teeth and firmer gums you will make this test

Send the coupon for a 10-day tube free. Then note results yourself. Note how your teeth become whiter after a short time. You will note a difference. Your friends will note it, so remarkably apparent it will be.

ANNA Q. NILSSON says:
I used to think my teeth were as clear as could be—for I brushed them half a dozen times daily. But a few days of Pepsodent, at my dentist's advice showed the contrast over old-fashioned methods. . . Clear teeth—how do I get them? Try Pepsodent for a few days!

Anna Q Nilsson

Millions have made this test. Men and women famous on the stage, prominent leaders in social and diplomatic life, have found results beyond their hopes.

Now it will cost you nothing to make it. You'll thank yourself many times in years to come for the new conception of the more beautiful and healthier teeth and gums it will bring.

COLE'S GAS RANGES

COLE'S Airvac Burner Hot Blasts More Heat

Practical Reasons Why Cole's Are Best

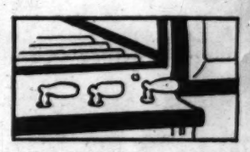
1. Cole's Fresh Air Oven. The circulating shield underneath the bottom plate takes heat from the back of the oven and discharges it at the front, heating all corners equally and giving perfect baking conditions. A four-wall oven consisting of an outer wall, a circulating air space, and a two-wall enamel lining. The oven measures 20 inches deep, by 16 wide and 14 high, giving you 1/5 more oven capacity than the standard oven.

2. The Bottle Neck Burner of vitreous enamel gives you a very hot, even flame from every port-hole. A perfect and economical mixture of gas and air. A focused flame from the greatest fuel saver ever put on a gas range. Instantly removable, finished in enamel, these burners of special Cole design are far the easiest to keep clean.

3. Cooking Grids of vitreous black enamel, oversized and instantly removable for washing. Perfect cleanliness made easy. The Cooking top is longer and wider than in standard ranges, giving the maximum working space. The range is unequalled for compactness of design. Only 43 inches over all, but every inch is useful.

4. Oversized Shelves, an immense convenience. The drip pan can be set snugly over the burners to give you a porcelain table top, when necessary as in preserving.

5. Easily Removable Linings in both the oven and the broiler are a special feature of Cole's Ranges. No trouble at all to keep these enamel linings always spotlessly clean.



6. The White Enameled Apron over the gas manifold is a feature of Cole's Ranges that adds enormously to the appearance of your stove, and makes it easier to keep clean. The apron protects the burner connections, and keeps them spotless.

MY WORD! THE PRINCE? WHAT A PICTURE!! It is a bit intimate, to be sure, but the world will think none the less of Edward of Wales just because he smiles in his daily plunge. A hiding camera man caught this intriguing photograph while Prince Edward was enjoying a morning swim aboard ship on one of his many sea voyages.

A NEW STAR of the theatrical firmament, Judith Anderson, is acclaimed by James O'Donnell Bennett, now of The Tribune's Washington bureau. Mr. Bennett for years was one of Chicago's foremost drama critics. After seeing Miss Anderson in "The Dove" at Washington recently, he wrote of her to a friend here: " . . . a coming woman. Of the Rachel type, as I recall the records—swift, fiery and gripping. I think she will go very far." Chicago has seen Miss Anderson in "Peter Weston" and "Patches." (Photograph from Lewis-Smith)

MORE PROMISING THAN TUT'S TOMB—Scene of excavations by the Boston-Harvard expedition, in the vicinity of the Giza pyramids of Egypt, where a magnificent tomb believed to date to the time of King Seneferu has been discovered. Seneferu, a monarch of the third dynasty, ruled about 3000 B. C., approximately 1700 years before Tut-ankh-amen; and the much-advertised glories of the latter tomb may pale in comparison with the new discovery. Part of the 200 native workmen of the Boston-Harvard party are visible in the center of the photograph above, clearing away the approach to the tomb.
(Photograph from Pacific and Atlantic)

SENEFERU'S SON was Ra-Hotp, depicted in this splendid statue of antiquity. The prince during his lifetime saw the construction of two pyramids, of which his father was creator; and in his day, too, the ancients were leaving most of the early written records of importance that exist today.

RA-HOTP HAD A WIFE, Nefert, portrayed here in another striking statue. The cunning artistry of their age could not be better revealed than in the lavish detail of form and decoration embodied in her likeness.

Your Hair Appears Twice as Beautiful when Shampooed this way

Try this quick and simple method which thousands now use. See the difference it makes in the appearance of your hair.

Note how it gives new life and lustre, how it brings out all the wave and color. See how soft and silky, bright and glossy your hair will look.

THE alluring thing about beautiful hair isn't the way it is worn.

The real, IRRESISTIBLE CHARM is the life and lustre the hair itself contains.

Fortunately, beautiful hair is no longer a matter of luck.

You, too, can have beautiful hair if you shampoo it properly.

Proper shampooing is what makes it soft and silky. It brings out all the real life and lustre, all the natural wave and color and leaves it fresh-looking, glossy and bright.

When your hair is dry, dull and heavy, lifeless, stiff and gummy, and the strands cling together, and it feels harsh and disagreeable to the touch, it is because your hair has not been shampooed properly.

While your hair must have frequent and regular washing to keep it beautiful, it cannot stand the harsh effect of ordinary soaps. The free alkali in ordinary soaps soon dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle and ruins it.

That is why thousands of women, everywhere, now use Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo. This clear, pure and entirely greaseless product brings out all the real beauty of the hair and cannot possibly injure. It does not dry the scalp or make the hair brittle, no matter how often you use it.

If you want to see how really beautiful you can make your hair look, just follow this simple method.

A Simple, Easy Method

FIRST, wet the hair and scalp in clear, warm water. Then apply a little Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo.

Two or three teaspoonfuls will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather. This should be rubbed in thoroughly and briskly with the finger tips, so as to loosen the dandruff and small particles of dust and dirt that stick to the scalp.

After rubbing in the rich, creamy Mulsified lather, give the hair a good rinsing. Then use another application of Mulsified, again working up a lather and rubbing it in briskly as before. After the final washing, rinse the hair and scalp in at least two changes of clear, fresh, warm water. This is very important.

Just Notice the Difference

YOU will notice the difference in your hair even before it is dry, for it will be delightfully soft and silky.

After a Mulsified shampoo you will find your hair will dry quickly and evenly and have the appearance of being much thicker and heavier than it really is.

If you want to always be remembered for your beautiful, well-kept hair, make it a rule to set a certain day each week for a Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo. This regular weekly shampooing will keep the scalp soft and the hair fine and silky, bright, fresh-looking and fluffy, wavy and easy to manage.

You can get Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo at any drug store or toilet goods counter, anywhere in the world. A 4-ounce bottle should last for months.

Splendid for children—fine for men.

Mothers should tell their daughters of this new way in woman's hygiene

MOTHERS today are telling their daughters of Kotex—the new way in woman's personal hygiene now employed by 5 million women.

Kotex is a sanitary pad made of super-absorbent Cellucotton. It absorbs instantly 16 times its own weight in moisture. It is 5 times as absorbent as cotton.

Each Kotex pad is in itself an active deodorant, being permeated with a newly discovered secret disinfectant. It is easily disposed of—without the least bother or annoyance.

Kotex is packed in sanitary sealed packages of 12—in 2 sizes: Regular, and Kotex-Super (extra large).

BROADWAY IN THE CONGO as pictured by T. Alexander Barnes during a scientific expedition in Africa for the Field museum of Chicago and other institutions. Here in the Ituri forest the explorers found the natives of social disposition, living in large communities. The Belgian officials encourage this close association, for it makes their tax gathering an easier job. The Field museum was represented on this expedition by A. M. Collins of Philadelphia and Edmund Heller, the naturalist who accompanied the late Theodore Roosevelt on his famous trip to East Africa. (Photograph from Pacific and Atlantic)

THE BIGGEST DAM IN THE WORLD is planned here at Boulder canyon on the Colorado river, between Arizona and Nevada. Dwarfed in the foreground are two U. S. reclamation service craft, working with diamond drills to find bed rock for the proposed Boulder dam. The project calls for a dam perhaps 555 feet high, to generate 600,000 or more hydro-electric power, and to reclaim hundreds of thousands of acres of land now arid. A bill now in Congress estimates the cost at $45,000,000, but the project would pay for itself in thirty years, it is claimed.

The Ornamented Cuff

Up to Paris came the news! On the Riviera—at Cannes, Nice, Monaco—over at Biarritz, the ungloved hand is passé.

All because someone created the vogue of decorated cuffs—now gloves are lovelier than ever before, the final complement of a smart Spring costume.

Paris heard the news. Voilà! By cable we received style notes sketched by our representatives.

And now, Madame and Mademoiselle, the modes de rigueur of the Rue de la Paix are to be found in your own favorite shops here in the States.

Speed? Yes. It is our pleasure to transmit the mode from les Parisiennes to les Américaines with dispatch.

Just as if you had shopped in Paris you, too, may wear the smart gloves now seen on the Bois, at tea at the Ritz or before dinner at the Crillon.

Kayser observers in Paris keep us posted. So look to Kayser, as other wise women do, for all that is chic in gloves.

Note some of the latest models sketched here—they come in different shades in the proper silk weights for Spring. And the prices—such as would delight the smart but thrifty Parisienne.

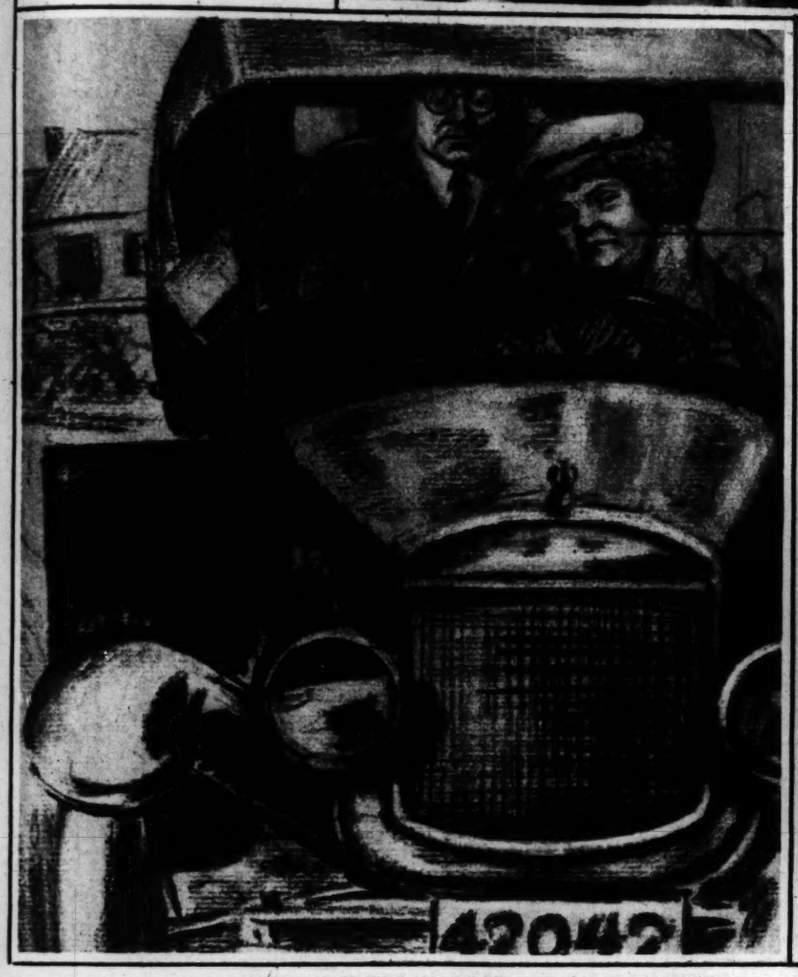
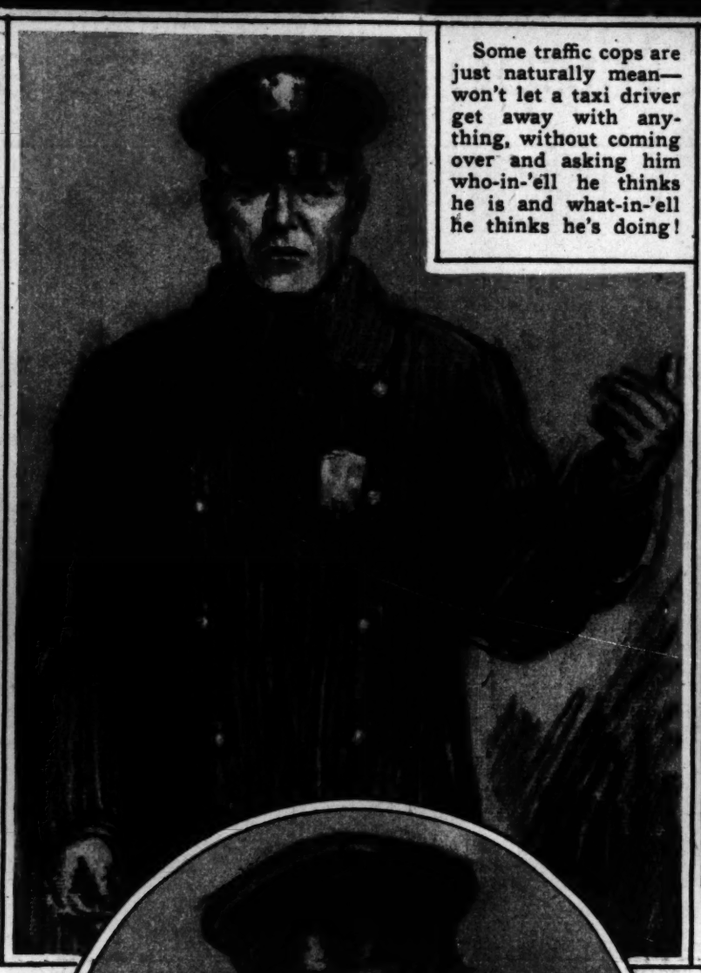
THE TAXI

BY
W. E. HILL

Four perfectly valid reasons why taxi drivers give up the life and go back to bootlegging. From left to right we have with us this day the fare who gives the five cent tip; the quarrelsome lady who knows the meter is wrong (it was forty cents yesterday, and today for the same distance it registers seventy cents); the friend of the fare, who says "My dear, don't give him a twenty cent tip—ten cents is plenty!" and, lastly, the timorous elderly lady who knows the taxi cab driver is going to murder her or abduct her.



The lady taxi driver from the rural districts (she substitutes at the wheel of the bus only when friend husband is otherwise engaged) is driving to the station with some poor week-ender who has to get back to town. The last bump nearly sent the week-ender through the top of the car.



Some traffic cops are just naturally mean—won't let a taxi driver get away with anything, without coming over and asking him who-in-'ell he thinks he is and what-in-'ell he thinks he's doing!

"Aw, go to — — !!! * you — — — !!! !!!" The regulation argument between the truck and the taxi. (This is all we can print in cold, uncompromising type.) The taxi driver, you see, attempted, rightly or wrongly, to get ahead of the truck, and the truck driver naturally feels a little bit hurt about it.

"Got anything less than a dollar?" The taxi driver who seldom if ever has any change, if it's under a dollar.

Copyright: 1925:

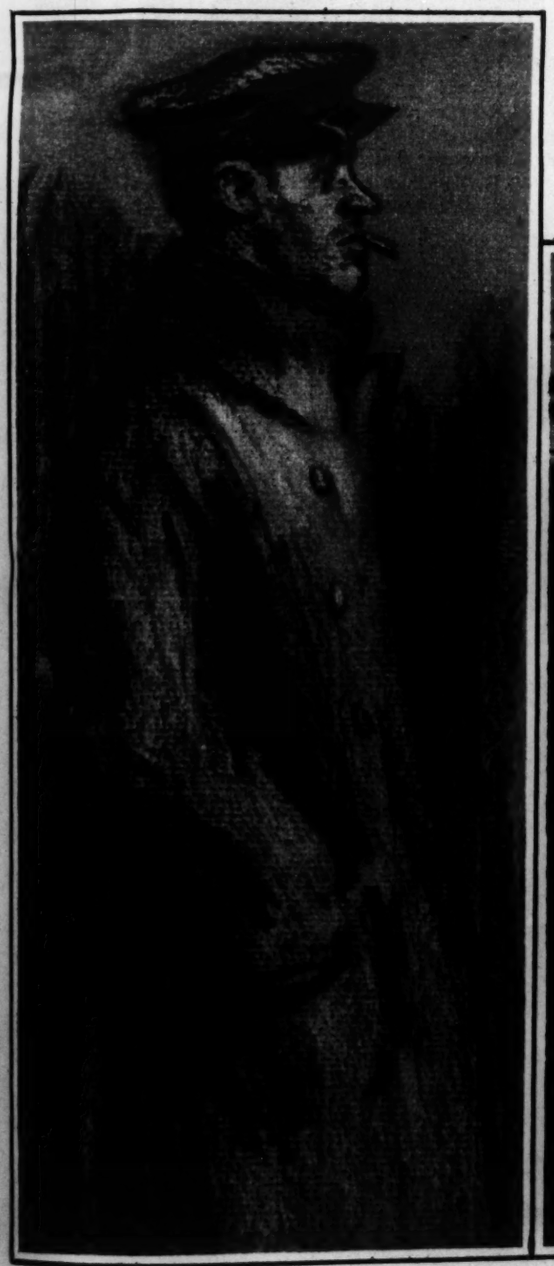
Chicago Tribune



Joe, the starter at the cab stand, thinking of nothing in particular, unless it's a cup of coffee and a fried egg sandwich.

The economical family from out of town, comprising mom, pop, grandma, Nettie, Walter, Buster and Babe, are taxi-ing from the train to the hotel—all in one taxi. Grandma is still a wee bit carsick.

Waiting taxi driver thinking things over in general. Life is just one fool pedestrian and bad tempered traffic cop after another!

AT LUNCH in a small smart club
AT TEA in the most exclusive circles
AT DINNER where distinguished guests are entertained
where you find superlative food Crispo products are served

SUPPOSE you are lunching at a small, smart club or a famous hotel, a place where the food is celebrated for its excellence. . . . Perhaps you order tomato bouillon or a French fruit salad, Gruyere or Camembert cheese. You will remark the delicious freshness and crispness of crackers served with such dishes. . . . Or you may dine sometimes with a hostess distinguished for the social grace with which she entertains, and for her brilliant formal dinners. Note that wherever her menus require crackers or wafers, these are supremely good. . . . Again, you may take tea with friends whose hospitality is completely charming, whose most informal tea is an occasion long to be remembered.

Where the food must be perfect, you observe that Crispo crackers, wafers, cookies, cakes and biscuits are invariably served. Why is this "being done" so extensively by hostesses and housekeepers, hotel and club managers, cooks and chefs who command not only the markets of Chicago, but those of the wide world?

Crispo products are superlative

It is "being done" because these people make it their business to know good food; to serve only food that is superlative. Crispo means to them the criterion of cracker quality. It is natural to speak in superlatives when speaking of Crispo products because only terms like "the very best to be bought" and "the finest to be found in the market" can adequately and accurately describe the paramount quality of the materials used in the making of Crispo crackers.

Given such ingredients—eggs that are strictly fresh; pure creamery butter and pure granulated sugar—everything else of the same highest grade! Mixing them together, without skimping or substitution, in perfect proportions! Baking them in the exact scientific way with temperature and humidity exactly right always! All this means master baking.

The best that money can buy!

Without qualification the Crispo Lily Soda Cracker and the Crispo Biscuit, the Crispo Graham Cracker and the Crispo Fig Bar, the Crispo Vanilla Wafer (all illustrated here), each and every kind of Crispo biscuit is the best that money can buy. Your grocer will suggest delicious Crispo crackers to serve on special occasions or to go with some particular dish. Crispo Graham Crackers for the youngsters; Crispo Macaroon Wafers or Cocoanut Bars if you want a crisp, sweet cracker; Crispo Juliette Wafers or Sugar Wafers have cream fillings; if you like marshmallows try Crispo Marshmallow Pecans, Malted Creams, Jack Frosts or Pineapple Bars! Always fresh and you pay no higher prices.

Nothing but the finest

It has always been the pride of this company to have the highest quality of everything and to keep this quality uniform. We make nothing but the very finest grade of biscuits, cookies, crackers and wafers. In order to keep everything up to our standard, equipment as well as materials, I make myself directly responsible for this and in person inspect the bakery every day. Of course I insist on absolute cleanliness to the smallest detail—for instance, every worker must be personally immaculate and wear a white uniform.

SPEAKING OF CROWDS, it is not often that a camera clicks as many humans into one picture as you see here. IRELAND'S RICHEST LAND OWNER among women of vast estates is the beautiful Lady Beatrice Pole-Carew. Her mother, the Marchioness of Ormonde, was an American girl, daughter of Gen. Anson Stager, U. S. A. Lady Beatrice is considered the great chieftainess of the mighty Irish house of O'Callahan. In olden days the O'Callahans were princes in Erin, we're told. (Photograph from Fotograms.)

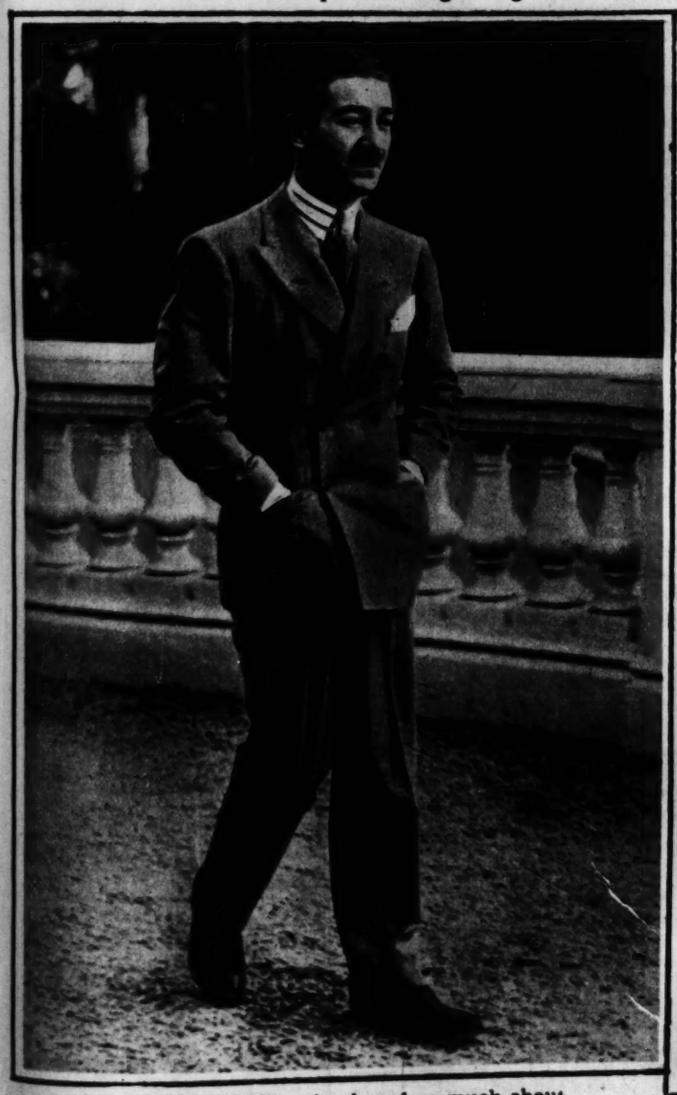
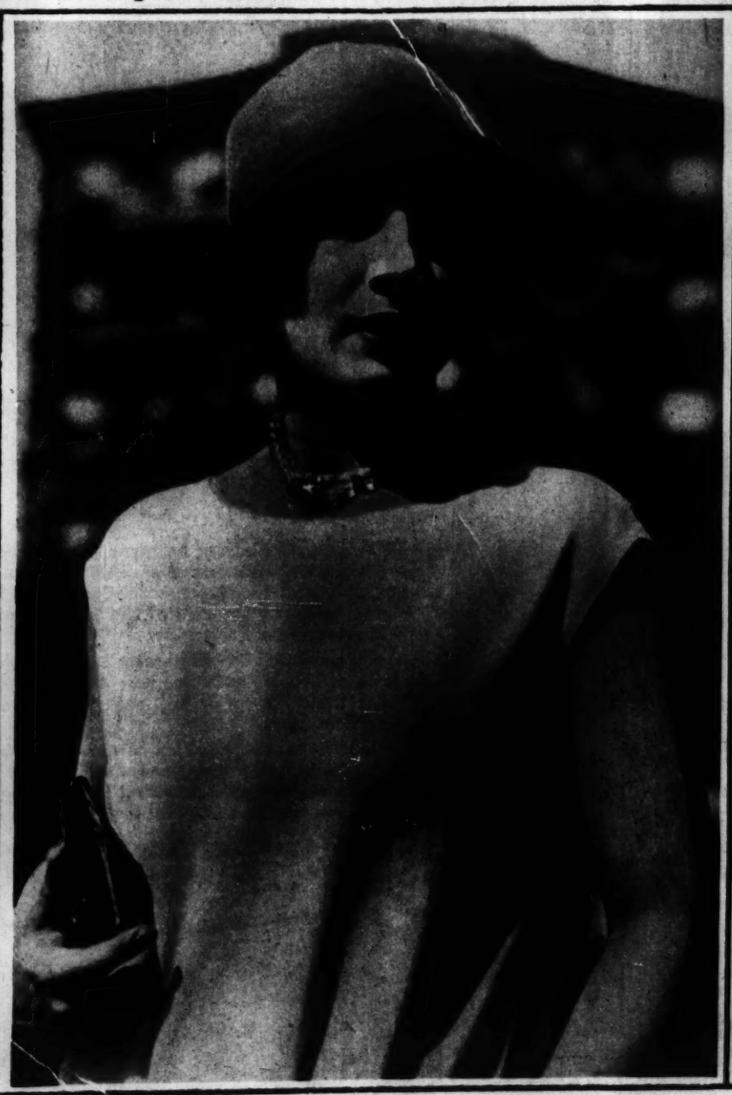
GEORGE BERNARD SHAW in an intimate pose. During his two months' rest at Funchal, Madeira, the noted British author and playwright never missed his daily swim, we're told. G. B. is a straight and sturdy Irishman, considering the fact he'll be 69 years old in July. (Photograph from Wide World.)



THE GREEN HAT we've heard so much about was fashioned in the fertile brain behind the noble forehead of this fashionable chap. He is Michael Arlen, the British author, pictured during a stroll at a winter resort on the Riviera. (Photograph copyright by Keystone.)



WE'LL SEE HER OFTEN on the picture pages soon. The serious young person is Miss Helen Wills, the wonder girl of tennis. After a winter of comparative quiet, Miss Helen will soon be whirling through the most important tennis tournaments of the country. (Photograph from Pacific and Atlantic.)

ONLY ONE WAY to keep teeth both white and safe

Restore the natural protective fluids of the Mouth Glands

Pebeco keeps your mouth glands active, your teeth safe from decay

WE brush our teeth more often than any other nation in the world—yet they mysteriously decay.

Dentists now know that this is due to an abnormal mouth condition—unsuspected but practically universal—which inevitably leads to decay.

It is known as Dry Mouth—the natural result, they say, of our modern, soft cooked foods, which require no real chewing.

The mouth glands, which nature intended to flow continuously, now dry up from sheer lack of exereise. And your teeth, no longer washed by their alkaline fluids, are inevitably eaten by the acids of decay.

After ordinary cleaning —no safer than before

You can remove the acids of decay temporarily by scouring with gritty pastes which endanger the unreplaceable enamel; by washing with soapy substances that damage gums and delicate mouth lining.

By such harsh methods thousands of people succeed in making their teeth white—but not safe. Five minutes after they stop brushing, acids begin to form again—the insidious process of decay goes on.

The only way to prevent decay, it is now known, is to remove the unsuspected, underlying cause—Dry Mouth.

Recently, physicians and dentists have recognized that the mouth glands can be successfully stimulated. Today you can protect your teeth naturally and permanently from the acids of decay by a tooth paste that restores the normal alkaline flow of the mouth glands.

Pebeco gently stimulates the glands

Pebeco acts directly on the salivary glands. As soon as it enters your mouth it starts a full, normal flow of alkaline saliva.

With constant daily use Pebeco completely restores the natural, protective action of your glands. Their alkaline fluids again bathe your teeth day and night. The acids of decay are neutralized as fast as they form. And the deadly mucin and tartar deposits are gently softened and removed. Pebeco leaves your gums clean and soothed—your whole mouth, normal and healthy. And in this healthy mouth, your teeth are kept not only white and shining, but safe.

Remember this about bicarbonate of soda

YOUR physician will tell you that purity and palatability are of great importance—especially in any oft-used product, such as bicarbonate of soda.

There is one way to be certain that the bicarbonate of soda you buy is pure and pleasant to take—insist on Squibb's Bicarbonate of Soda (Sodium Bicarbonate) in original Squibb packages, at your druggist's.

Millions of packages of Squibb's Bicarbonate of Soda are sold annually—a popularity which is due to its extreme purity. This freedom from impurities, which impart the bitter taste you have so long associated with the ordinary product, makes Squibb's Bicarbonate of Soda pleasant to take. It will not irritate the stomach. It is of highest medicinal value.

In addition to Squibb's Bicarbonate of Soda, insist on Squibb's Castor Oil (Tasteless), Squibb's Cod-Liver Oil (vitamin tested), Squibb's Epsom Salt (Special), Squibb's Milk of Magnesia (free from earthy taste) and Squibb's Dental Cream. All Squibb Products are made to meet the most exacting demands of the medical profession. Physicians everywhere approve them.

CHAS·A·STEVENS·&·BROS

"Mother—can't I have five cents?"

"Bobby's mother gave us some money to go to the movies," the child lisped excitedly, "and could I have five cents to buy some candy to eat at the show?"

"Here's a better idea," the mother said. "Father brought home some Life Savers last night, and I'll give you some of them. They are the best candies for children."

How true it is!

These china-hard circles of pure goodness are just the thing for sugar-hungry little tummies so easily upset by sweets that are too rich. And for tiny teeth that fare best with candy very carefully chosen.

The ideal candy for children

The active bodies of growing boys and girls crave sugar. Their blood requires it.

But children's candy should be pure; also you must control overeating. Life Savers answer both problems:

Be generous with them

Rich sweets, hurriedly eaten, upset little stomachs. Not so with Life Savers. Children eat them slowly because they are so hard and because they want to enjoy longer those delicious, delicate flavors.

You may conscientiously be generous with Life Savers; they are so pure and wholesome. It is far better to let children have the right candy regularly. They are less likely to overeat than when they get it only now and then.

Also, Life Savers leave no sticky, sugary debris to start tooth decay. They are safe for children's teeth. Have Life Savers always handy at home when the youngsters call for sweets. There is no candy better for them.—Life Savers, Inc., Port Chester, N. Y.

THE VANDERBILT MANSION at 12 East 77th Street, a few doors from Fifth Avenue, reflects the spirit of conservative elegance that is characteristic of many of New York's fine residences.

MRS. REGINALD VANDERBILT

gives her skin this exquisite care

MY FIRST GLIMPSE of Mrs. Reginald Vanderbilt brought a little catch to my throat. I had heard she was very lovely—this young woman, barely twenty-one, two years married to the son of one of America's oldest, wealthiest, most distinguished families, and mother of an exquisite baby girl. But I was unprepared for beauty so compelling, so unique.

"It's partly because she's so tall," I said to my companion "and so slender. Did you ever see such grace?"

Mrs. Vanderbilt is "brune" but with a difference. Her hair seems black until the sunlight breaks its shadows into shimmering bronze. In the depths of her dark eyes burn the fires of golden topazes. And in the snows of her delicate skin blooms the rose of her full-blown lips, ruby-red and strangely beautiful.

In spite of her extreme youth, Mrs. Vanderbilt carries an air. She might have been born to the purple. For she has the poise, the cachet of the woman who has lived her girlhood in the most distinguished society of Europe.

All these impressions flashed upon me. As Mrs. Vanderbilt moved toward me with a singing grace, I recalled what I had heard men say, "She dances—oh, divinely!"

"What a bouquet she lends that gown," I murmured. "The Parisian couturier who designed it must have thrilled to see its black velvet next arms and shoulders of such dazzling whiteness."

"But the contrast is in the color alone," said someone in our group. "For when it comes to texture, there's little to choose between chiffon velvet and Mrs. Vanderbilt's skin."

Mrs. Vanderbilt spoke in a voice whose low modulations and finished diction come from fluency in three languages besides her own. "It ought to be a good skin," she was saying. "I take good care of it. And yet I spend only a few moments a day—far less time than many of my friends. It's not the time that counts. It's the method!"

"It's the Method that Counts"

"TELL us what your method is," we queried. "Two Creams," said Mrs. Vanderbilt. "One to cleanse the skin and keep it fresh and firm. The other to protect, and give it that 'velvety' finish you've just spoken of."

"What creams? Do tell us," chorused our group. "Pond's," answered Mrs. Vanderbilt. "I've used them for a long time and have never found any better."

It is this approval, given by the women of Society who must keep their youth and beauty—for Mrs. Vanderbilt is only one of many—that is the final proof of the sterling worth of Pond's Two Creams.

The first step in the Pond's Method of caring for the skin is a deep, thorough cleansing with Pond's Cold Cream. Smooth it lavishly over your face, neck, arms and hands. Let it stay on a few moments so that its pure oils may sink deep down into the pores and soften the dust, soot, powder and rouge that choke them.

Wipe all the cream off and note the dirt it brings with it. Repeat the process. Now, close the pores with a dash of cold water or a rub with a bit of ice.

This daily Pond's cleansing should follow any prolonged time spent out of doors. If your skin is either very dry or too oily, you should use Pond's Cold Cream twice or more. And to overcome the dryness that forms lines and wrinkles, leave some of the cream on all night.

THE second step in the Pond's Method of caring for the skin is a soft finish and protection with Pond's Vanishing Cream. Fluff just a light film over the skin of your face and hands. It will vanish—for Pond's Vanishing Cream is greaseless. Notice, now, how even the surface of your skin looks. The Vanishing Cream has levelled off all roughnesses. It gives you a lustre, too, a soft, bright, clear tone.

And how much more smoothly your rouge and powder blend and how well they stay over this delicate foundation cream. You should always use Pond's Vanishing Cream before powdering and especially before you go out. For it protects your skin so that wind, dust, sun and soot cannot rob it of its natural oils, its bloom of youth.

Follow the lead of Mrs. Reginald Vanderbilt. Use Pond's Two Creams. Find out for yourself that what she says of them is wholly true—"they constitute as simple, swift and effectual a method of caring for the skin as has yet been discovered." The Pond's Extract Company.

MRS. REGINALD C. VANDERBILT

In the atmosphere of diplomatic life abroad, when her father served as Consul and Consul-General in leading cities of Spain, Germany, Switzerland, The Netherlands and Belgium, Mrs. Vanderbilt, then Miss Gloria Morgan, received the education and experience which, since her marriage to the second son of the late Cornelius Vanderbilt, have made her one of the most distinguished leaders of exclusive New York Society.

Here she wears two of her loveliest creations from Paris—in the large oval, a Lanvin frock of shimmering white taffeta; to the right, a gown by Vionnet of black chiffon velvet richly embroidered with gold.

In the small square, as she appeared in the regal Louis XV costume of white satin and gold brocade with royal purple court train which she wore as hostess last summer at one of the most beautiful balls of the Newport season, given at "Sandy Point Farm," the Vanderbilt estate.

EVERY SKIN needs the delicate cleansing, the soft protection and finish afforded by these Two Creams, the society woman's chosen method of caring for her skin

"YOUTHFULNESS is the real pot of gold at the end of every woman's rainbow! How to keep it, how to achieve it, is her goal.

"Pond's Two Creams are such a wonderful help to this coveted end,—they cleanse the skin, keeping it fresh and firm. And they protect it, too, giving it a velvety finish. Together they constitute as simple, as swift and as effectual a method of caring for the skin as has yet been discovered."
